The top-grade transcontinental train will give CN passengers and viewers along the route a preview of the new colors all the railway's passenger trains will wear after a system-wide paint job is completed.

DUE TODAY

The newly painted train passed through Tofield at 12.48 p.m. today (Thursday). It will return on its eastbound journey at 2:30 p.m. Saturday, July 21.

A modern black and white color scheme will replace CN's traditional green, gold and black design. Engines will have orange and red fronts and back bodies with bold white flashes behind the cab.

Sides of the cars will be white with a wide, black, horizontal stripe running full length. Roofs and underbodies will be black, giving the train a streamlined, lowslung appearance.

The new CN symbol will be painted orange-red on the right end of each car beneath the black stripe.

The railway has now adopted the new color scheme for its passenger equipment after testing it for several months on the Ocean Limited between Montreal and Halifax.

Completion of the big repainting program is expected to take about two years since, to avoid unnecessary expense, no crash painting schedule is planned. Each piece of equipment will receive its new colors when its normal repainting date comes up.

Service Board . . .

in solving weed problems. — Rex Digby, Field Supervisor.

The question of a Service Board tour was brought up. It was felt that a great deal of information could be gained by a tour. It was felt that the other members of the council should be invited to attend to give them an idea of the work the Service Board is doing.

It was moved and carried that a Service Board tour be held on August 1st.

DEMONSTRATION

Rex Bayles said that Peter is quite a bit of interest in spraying pastures to kill the brush that is taking over pastures and cutting down the amount of grass, and it was moved and carried that a demonstration be arranged on a 20-acre plot of pasture and to spray the brush and fertilize the grass.

The secretary mentioned that, although the board had arranged in the budget an amount for an assistant weed inspector, no one had been named or recommended to the county council, and a recommendation was made that Charles Sears be appointed a weed inspector for two months, effective July 9

Representation by population

Editor's Note: Election times always bring out more arguments in favor of re-distribution of seats, whether in the dominion or the provincial houses. And recently The Listening Post, official organ of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, has been giving considerable attention to the problem, with the object of increasing the representation from Canadian cities, as contrasted with the rural areas. Following the redistribution of Alberta's seats in 1961 and 1962, The Listening Post asked the Hon. F. C. Colborne, chairman of the committee, to discuss the basic principles which guided the judgment of the committee. It is interesting to note that the finished redistribution provides 3½ times as many voters in some constituencies, Calgary Centre, for instance, with 19,375 voters, as compared with the smallest, Dunvegan, with 5,351.

The studies of the Committee led us to the conclusion that whatever arguments might be advanced in support of the idea of equal representation by population in a country of widely varying density of population, it cannot be achieved in any practical way. The two main reasons for this are: firstly, there is a practical limit to how big an area should be established; and, secondly, there is a practical limit to how many seats should be provided in our legislatures.

For example, the Dunvegan constituency is our smallest in voting population (5351). It is also one of the largest in area. It would be increased in area because to do so would involve the "effective" representation of the people by giving the members an area too large to cover. Therefore, to adopt the principle of equal representation by population, each riding should have about the same number of voters (5351) and since there are about 650 000 voters in Alberta we would have 100 members in the Assembly.

If you check the Federal figures you will find the same situation. If the Yukon is used as a base constituency, and it is agreed that it is large enough in area, then you would need 1500 Members of Parliament to have representation by population alone.

We were also persuaded that there is a need for areas of our provinces to be represented regardless of population and that this factor must also be considered.

We therefore decided, first, that we should not need more than 65 members to do the business of the province efficiently. From this we concluded that with a total of 650,000 voters, the average constituency should contain about 10 000 voters. From this we concluded that generally speaking, the larger the area, the smaller the population should be in order to provide effective representation, it being in mind that the main function of an M.L.A. is to serve the people of his riding and help them with their problems and that voting in the legislature is incidental to this.

From these basic conclusions we proceeded to adjust constituency boundaries and ensuring that geography, natural boundaries and community of interest which prevent drawing satisfactory boundaries on a population basis alone.

In this respect you may be interested in our conclusions regarding natural boundaries. Rivers for example are excellent boundaries and must be used where cross ing over the rivers is not convenient by bridge. In rural areas arterial highways are poor boundaries because they divide the communities they join through. Areas on both sides of large cities are excellent boundaries because in both cases the purpose is to divide the city between a large community and the rural area. These are the current boundaries and which were established for reasons other than political considerations.

Population trends also were considered in many areas when fixing the size of a constituency.

Absolute rest

This was the prescription of Lord Taylor, the British peer who studied the symptoms of the ailments of the common peoples of Saskatchewan, as His government and its doctors considered each other anti-bodies undermining the health of the patient. "Absolute rest . . . but what a difficult prescription to fill!

Announcing a truce between the two parties, the architect of the government's medical care scheme in Great Britain pointed out there were major sores to heal, and urged "absolute rest" for the entire problem. With such a major change ahead of the province, however, and so many sores laid bare in large and small centres, it seems unlikely that much rest will be accorded, unless some form of opiate is supplied . . . possibly in the form of a political diversion in another area entirely.

One of the features which disturbs us most was the laconic comment of an eastern publication which suggested the government of Saskatchewan was simply in the van, and leading the way for the rest of the country which must sooner or later adopt the principle of socialized medicine.

This casual acceptance of "sooner or later" by a wide segment of our population is something we resist with every fibre of our being. We do not agree the state must sooner or later do everything that a reasonably strong, able-bodied individual could, and should, do for himself. We feel normal everyday medical expenses are a part of living, just the same as buying groceries, or paying rent, or making payments on the television. And we hope it will be a long day before it is suggested the state should take care of these needs. Exceptional hardships, of course, provide an exception and there are already many provisions for such contingencies, which probably could well be enlarged. But a hotus-bolus passing of all bills to the state simply breeds dereliction of individual responsibility, and this has been documented in the experience of the past, to require further comment now.

If we accept the principle of state medicine as inevitable, then surely we must accept the idea of the state paying all lawyer's bills, dentist's bills, optometrist's bills, and probably in the end, the mortician's bill, too. We should also be prepared to accept the government running our service stations and garages, supermarkets, barber shops and repair shops. Personally, we don't like the last suggestion, and most of our readers probably wouldn't like the principle applied to their own line of endeavor. Certainly the Russian farmers, and those of other nations, have no use for the government-controlled farm operation.

Something tells us the hard-working, self-reliant pioneers who wrested this country from the wilderness, and who fiercely hated being dependent upon other people, would whirl over in their graves could they but see how far the principle of "letting George do it" has run.

Sidelight

Just a bright little sidelight on the political scene: we happened to pick up a report the other day that friends of John Diefenbaker have urged him to advise the N.D.P. government in Saskatchewan that he will set the date for a by-election in Burnaby-Coquitlam which might return their national leader Tommy Douglas to a seat at Ottawa just as soon as the Saskatchewan government sets a date for the by-election which would provide a provincial representative for Prince Albert, a seat which has been allowed to remain vacant for some time. The old quid pro quo . . . or something for something . . . brought up to date, eh?

DIARY OF A VAGABOND

(By Dorothy Barber)

THE MONEY ORB

Disneyland wasn't at all like I expected this fantastic ente-prise would be. I knew a large amount of money could be spent on the grounds, but I thought the hotel accommodations fee covered the hours that would be spent in travelling from Fantasyland to Tomorrowland, or the fun of getting lost in the maze of Adventureland.

Instead there is a charge for everything. A pocketful of 10¢ pieces and dimes are a must, as the use of washrooms, telephones, etc., is lowered into the hold of an unbelievable automaton, or fluid is dispensed for there is the assurance that the automatic machine, operated through Duck and Mickey Mouse has something for you.

What Disney has said that Disneyland will never be finished, I can readily believe. For it is as though called on a raft to an island where he had set himself for a holiday in the caves and caverns of Tom Sawyer's hideaway, I wouldn't be at all surprised to find Disney busily at work on a gigantic Swan Family Robinson tree but being constructed in the biggest tree on the grounds. Below them in the making I saw a huge pool where 30 submarines were soon to sail.

Around the island the old river boat pulls and chugs its way, taking to the little old fashioned engine pulling its quaintly fixed cars laughing passengers, enthralled with the animated scenes on a prehistoric grazing in the nearby wood that seemed to be the mainland across the river.

One enters Disneyland on Main Street. This is a true reproduction of a Gay Nineties home town street sealed down, so that the imagination of a child can enter him at once with his surroundings. Sleeping Beauty's Castle, the Matterhorn, even the skateboards in Frontierland are all built on the same scale.

POTENTIAL MOVIE STARS?

Our guide, a pert miss in a fantastic costume which in itself set the theme of fantasy, said I would take 12 hours to see all of Disneyland and participate in every one of the games and rides. The average 12 year old, I reasoned, could be ready for movie stardom after the twenty dollar minimum admission fee. These guides were there every bus. They are personality types with rich voice, pearly white teeth, shiny hair and pretty legs. They wear red, red pixie caps, barely covering their knees, huge red capes and, of all things, black velvet riding caps.

We joined in line for everything from a ride at a whiz on the monorail to a submarine trip in the Nautilus. And all we did was sigh with pleasure. We were in Bobby's estimation, really living it up!

Disneyland is a fantastic world, was the land of make-believe brought to life. We didn't mind being bumped and jostled; we didn't feel the heat or the cold. We hardly noticed the droves of humanity, or resented the artificiality of this super - made world. The mind is lulled and soothed by the joy in the children of earth a dream that is real and wonderful, exciting and satisfying.

Walt Disneyhehee! He wasn't allowed to enter this kingdom of make-believe when he had created it.

From Disneyland, our bus whisked us through the freeway, to Knott's Berry Farm. Unlike Disneyland, every attraction here is free. As a consequence, another two million or so dollars poured for gold, applauded cowboy singers by Doctor Dafoe! Dictionary, a bus is a bus.

So if you happen to be smoothing as you travel down the highway, just remember as you approach railway crossings that, according to the signs, "all bonnes must stop."

o—o—o

If anyone knows a loud mouth in our neighborhood bright and early Saturday morning, will he please have him shot? Or, preferably, hit on the head with a shotgun . . . and two attack crows will bite the dust. I was awakened at five o'clock this morning by the loud cawing of the two birds as they were perched on my plant table next to an open bedroom window. Rather late for mating season, isn't it?

Why, in this part of the country which is predominantly French speaking, can't proper grammar be used in highway signs? Even on our highways, bridges are marked "pont". There is no "s" to it, so it should be. Correctly, it is placed speak to the order, the signs in Saskatchewan have "ponts". Why do the sign manufacturers insist on leaving the "ly" off of "slowly"? Since "carefully" is a longer word than "slowly", lack of space on the sign does not seem to be the problem. Perhaps the signs feel they are using the language more correctly, and economically, and understand best.

Then there is the spelling of the word "bones". Highway sign manufacturers will have to deal with three "s"s - "busses". According to my Concise Oxford Dictionary, a buss is a kiss.

Marriage is like a piece of chewing gum. You can stretch it out and make it last, or get rid of it the moment it starts to lose its flavor. Either way, once you've invested it you have to figure out what you're going to do, because you're stuck with it!

FLUORIDATION

(Health Service News)

Dr. Paul Dudley White internationally known heart specialist has spoken out in favor of fluoridation. The occasion arose during a current fluoridation campaign in Evanston, Massachusetts.

Dr. White was quoted in the town's "Graveyard Gazette" as saying: "Elderly people with 'tired hearts' need have no fear of fluoridated water. It is safe for all."

The Committee for Dental Health, of which Dr. White is a member, has said "Fluoridation offers the only hope in the foreseeable future of lessening the tremendous amount of tooth decay we have in New England where our waters are very low in fluoride . . . Fluoridation is absolutely safe and it presents no hazards to anyone . . . It is a real bargain in public health".

Plan mass campaign for immunization against polio

Details of a campaign designed to provide mass immunization against polio were announced last week by the Alberta department of health. The Salk poliovirus vaccine, taken by mouth will be used to complement and complete immunity procedures which have already been started. Dr. J. Dossos an Assn. Minister of Health, said

The vaccine will be offered to everyone in the population over three months of age. All who participate in the program will be asked to take at least two doses of Salk vaccine, while those who have not yet completed a course of three inoculations of Salk vaccine will be urged to return for a third dose of the vaccine.

The first feeding of Sabin vaccine is scheduled to begin on November 12th, 1962. Dr. Ross, executive director of the provincial division of certain viruses prior to the outbreak of November might interfere with the development of good immunity.

Subsequent feedings are scheduled to begin on January 14th, 1963 and March 11th 1963. Each round of feeding is expected to take two weeks to complete, and there will be a two weeks' interval between the end of one round and the beginning of the next.

Loss in fire at Holden is estimated at about $3,500

(Peter Nickel)

The Holden fire engine, firemen and sirens broke out into action approximately 9:30 a.m. last Thursday, July 26th. The fire was located two miles north and one half mile east of Holden at the farm of S. Wasylenki. The only remains were the fire place, chimney and foundation. A few personal belongings were saved but generally everything was destroyed in the fire.

Occupants of the house were the Carl Dean family. Mr. Dean is employed by the CNR at Hay Lakes. Mrs. Dean suffered minor burns but other than that no injuries were reported. The family is presently staying with relatives.

The firemen were unable to control the fire as it was already too far advanced by the time the fire engine arrived on the scene.

Damage was estimated at $3500, including a $400 encyclopedia set. Cause of the fire was not determined.

70th birthday for former Holdenite

(Mrs. J. Knudson)

PALMER-EARLING, July 27— On July 26 at the Holden Community Hall, many relatives and friends assembled to celebrate Lawlee Hilland's 70th birthday. Mr. Hilland, a former Holdenite, now residing at Vancouver, B.C., is holidaying here.

His nephew, Hal Bestrud, from Manitoba, was master of ceremonies and, on behalf of his family, presented a gold watch. From Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Knudson they got a gift of a gold tie pin and cuff links. His nieces and nephews, the H. Hansons, presented him with a horse, made of a loaf of bread, the head carved from cardboard and varnished. A doughnut served as a saddle. Lawlee is a great horseman in his younger years and still loves them.

The Saskatoon Exhibition was held on July 20th while the Vegreville show was held July 21st, 22nd, 23rd.

Lawrence Kallal was accompanied to Saskatoon.

Mrs. Sally Cartwright of Winnipeg, has been visiting with her cousin, Mrs. Hodgkinson. Both of the ladies left last week for Vancouver where they are spending two weeks visiting old friends.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Wilyman of Raymore, Sask., were evening guests at the home of their niece and family, Mrs. Alex Basarba.

Mrs. P. Ongaro and family have returned from a two-day holiday spent at Cooking Lake where they rented a cabin for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Brown of Tofield have recently returned from Cattlemen's Tour of the United Kingdom, and as not everyone has the privilege of visiting such a tour, it is thought that readers would be interested in their report.

The journey started from Montreal by the Canadian Pacific liner for Scotland, and reported a very good time on the ship with excellent hospitality.

GLASGOW

The first stop was at Glasgow, Scotland, where they visited the new premises of the "Scottish Farmer", which is the largest farming newspaper in Scotland, and were taken through the building where they saw "every sight to see." The Scottish Farmer employs a staff of 100.

Continuing to the historic town of Stirling and along the banks of Loch Vennacher of Trossachs where they saw many sheep in two hours than they have seen before in their whole lives. At Glenghorn they saw an Aberdeen Angus herd. From Glenghorn they moved on to Maddertyy to visit the farm of a well known breeder of Shorthorn cattle, the Hon. Mrs. Ian Burn.

The next visit was to a 850-acre farm comprising another Aberdeen Angus herd, at Cuapar Angus.

HOLME GULL

Glamis was the next stop featuring a visit of a very prominent Aberdeen Angus herd. In 1959 Holme Gull Aberdeen Angus had been on an advertising tour that had been a big success so far as sales were concerned. They didn't keep more bulls. The reply was, "Why keep more? We got $36,000 for four bulls last year." At St. Andrew's Golf Course, golfers were playing in the rain with umbrellas, each covered quite unusual.

The drive then proceeded, after a day of rest, to Broomhall, for a visit at the farm of Lord Fraser, son of Lord Elgin whose grandfather was governor-general of Canada. The 3500-acre farm had an Angus herd of cattle and was also used beside a most beautiful lake, and an old fort which was used to hold off enemies coming across the lake in earlier years, was beside this lake. Lord Bruce farms 420 acres himself and has the rest of the land rented out. The farm of one of the tenants was also seen by the tour. This farm consisted of 60 head of fine Holstein heifers and it was observed here that dairy farmers do not rely on subscription to keep milk as it was delivered every day of the week and was always fresh.

EDINBURGH

The feature at Edinburgh was the Royal Highland Show, which featured around 700 horses and 1,000 cattle. Mr. Brown stated that they had seen some breeds of cattle at this show there he had never heard of. One thing noted by the Canadians at this show was that there were no milkways or hot dog stands, and the beers were all dressed up in their kilts for the occasion.

After a scenic drive around Edinburgh the tour continued to a farm at Kirkcaldy to see a famous Galloway herd. Another point of interest here was a pasture which has been productive for over 200 years.

So far the tour was very educational, with many interesting features being noted not only on the paper but in the minds of Mr. and Mrs. Brown, for when telling the reporter about the trip it was just as if he were there himself.

FIRE RAVIS HOME

All that remains of the home on the farm of S. Wasilewski, two miles and a half east of Holden are the chimney, fireplace and foundation, following a fire last Thursday morning. Recreation officer meets Beaver council

The possibility of securing a recreation director for the County of Beaver was discussed by the council of the County of Beaver appear elsewhere in this issue of The Mercury.

regular meeting of the county council held July 12th at the county office in Ryley.

Jack W. Riddel of Edmonton, assistant supervisor of community programs for the recreation and cultural development branch of the department of the provincial secretary, was on hand to discuss with council the matter of a regional director of recreation. to be responsible for recreation programs in the county as well as in the towns of Tofield and Viking and the Villages of Holden and Ryley.

TOFIELD, HOLDEN INTERESTED

Dennis Cooper of Holden, who also was in attendance at the meeting, said that the Town of Tofield and the Village of Holden have shown interest in a regional recreation director for some time. He added that the Tofield Lions Club planned to hold a jamboree this fall to determine whether ratepayers there would agree to having one mill added to their taxes in order to finance a recreation program.

Mr. Riddel pointed out that there was no definite program in existence for regional recreation directors, and that at the present time the hiring of a regional director is entirely a co-operative enterprise for smaller communities. Such plans are in existence in two areas in the province at present, he said, and other towns and municipalities are discussing the possibilities of such an matter taking.

NEW LEGISLATION

Mr. Riddel noted that the provincial government has recognized the fact the many communities cannot afford to have their own recreation director, and that provincial legislation is now in effect which allows two or more local authorities to employ a recreation director jointly. He added that the recreation director would be co-ordinator for the activities of various communities, and in this way he would be able to curb duplication that is in effect at present in many districts.

After considerable discussion on the matter, council decided that it should be tabled for further study in the future.

Calgary Power frustrates dog

The turning on of Calgary Power this week for the first time in the Ole Rasmusland and Emil Bletton farm homes north of Camrose, was reason enough for great rejoicing, as their dreams of many years were realized.

However, to one creature, Farraday's great discovery is just a passing embarrassing experience. "Bunter", the canine sentinel, always welcomed evening callers as the car lights entered the yard, with barks of joy if they were friends, or with warning growls if they looked like suspicious intruders. With power though, his schedule is completely disrupted by the constant light which floods the yard by this strange invader which is completely foreign to him. Furthermore, for some time, "Bunter" dashes about in such a frenzy to find a livable live in relation to his home, that he has already established his position as family guardian.

Blinding bewilderment, the fourth step, he has about decided that this strange phenomenan is too much for him.

Archer Memorial Hospital to mark 50th anniversary

Mrs. Carl Blake

The 50th anniversary services of Archer Memorial Hospital Bermuda, formerly named Lamont Public Hospital, are being held August 5th.

Dr. A. E. Archer, a pioneer doctor in Alberta, was medical superintendent until his death in 1945 the hospital being renamed in his honor in 1950. Another honor came to Dr. Archer in 1962 when he was elected president of the Canadian Medical Association.

Homing chickens

Reports out of British Columbia, coming from The Vancouver Province, would seem to indicate Premier Bennett's chickens are coming home to roost. According to this well respected daily newspapyr, Mr. Bennett's recent action in expropriating the huge B.C. Electric company has so upset the financial world that he is having serious difficulties in financing, even on a day-to-day basis.

Two of the major banks have refused to extend him credit for some of his big operations, though two more have picked up the accounts. But it is felt he will be in still more serious difficulty following the maturing of one of the interest coupons on his parity bonds, when bondholders pick up their interest, then cash in their bonds to buy Ottawa's new higher interest yielding bonds.

It is an open secret in B.C. that several of Bennett's closest advisers felt he overreached himself with the seizure of the big utility, particularly after his tongue-in-cheek election promise only months earlier that he would never do such a thing. Those advisers must now feel even more certain they were right.

Recent testimony in the court hearings in B.C. indicates Bennett took over the corporation when he couldn't persuade its officers to buy the deal he had cooked up for supplying them with power from the Peace River project planned by Axel Wenner Green, at outrageously high costs, when the much cheaper power from the Columbia River projects was going to be sold cheaper in the United States . . . against the strong protests of Ottawa.

For all he is an expert in many fields, an unusually capable man, it would seem his overweening lust for power has built up his absolute confidence in his own judgment to the utmost exclusion of other men who have helped bring him to this high position. Bennett can never have believed in democracy . . . he is far too autocratic for that. He has ignored several of the basic precepts on which British . . . and Canadian . . . democratic rule have flourished, such as sustaining members of his cabinet when they have been proven guilty of the most flagrant conduct, in several instances such as Sommers and Gagliardi, to name only two.

It would seem that like so many other autocrats, though, the circle is closing in around him, and in spite of all the unprecedented conditions he has made to B.C development, he will go down to defeat as "the man who went too far."

Voluntary tight money

Everyone was familiar with the government-imposed tight money of a few years ago, but these days the measures are designed to make people tighten their own belts, so far as we can see. Talking with a number of bankers, recently, they agree they are not shorter of funds than they were a few weeks ago, but the prime interest rate has increased, and bankers and customers are looking twice at loans which might have been almost automatic two months ago. Higher interest rates, apparently, are one way of making us tighten our economic belts. Let's hope it takes the fat off in the right places, instead of slowly strangling the patient.

Force of atoms

All those people who have been warning that the unprecedented poor weather of recent years, ranging from violent storms over England to unparalleled heat and cold waves in this country, are the effects of atomic or hydrogen bombs, fission or fusion, have a brand new arrow for their quiver these days. It's a lovely little item, too, since it seems to be based on pure science.

It seems the last blast detonated by the United States had a measurable effect on the location of the North Pole. Everyone knows, of course, that the magnetic field towards which compasses point has been wandering around quite a bit in Canada's northcountry recently, and a new team was despatched only very recently to pin down its present location, for it is thought to have moved almost fifty miles in the past ten years. So it was somewhat striking to discover that the atomic blast fired last week by the U.S. could actually move such a giant structure enough to measure the difference.

We used to discount the theory that man-made blasts could actually affect the entire atmosphere, however huge and terrible they might be. But recent geophysic developments like that above, orbiting men in space, and similar fantastic developments have made us less skeptical. We used to be from Missouri, so to speak, but we're moving to the land of the credible.

Maybe the reason a man can't sit in a barber's chair these days for less than $2.50 is that the barber too has a wife who can't sit under a dryer any more for less than $5.

CAUGHT AT LAST

Mr. X, Mr. Y and Mr. Z went up north on a fishing trip. However, Mrs. X discovered her husband's fishing gear was still in the closet, so she called the other two wives who checked and found their husbands had also left their fishing equipment at home. All three wives drove out to the resort and asked the hotel manager, "Did Mr. X, Mr. Y and Mr. Z check in here?"

"Sure," answered the manager, "but this time you lousy hustlers have one of the best. They brought their wives with them."

WHAT NO STRAWBERRY

The lady teacher who had taken some of her charges to the Zoo, explained: "Some of these creatures only assess, like bunny and Jam." She turned to little Bobby and queried: What do you think a bear would prefer?"

Calmly answered the boy: "I'm sure it would be Farmi Preserves."

OTTAWA — Emphasizing the rift between the publicly owned Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the Government-appointed Board of Broadcast Governors, the latter took off the gloves for a showdown fight in its latest public announcement. The "get-tough" attitude of the BBG about the broadcasting industry to its foundation, it flatly declared that it would compel all TV stations in Canada . . . CBC and privately-owned to carry the 1962 Grey Cup Football telecast Dec 1. By this declaration it stepped into the middle of the feudin and fightin that has been going on between the CBC and the CTV and said in effect it was tired of the scrapping.

This means that all TV networks are that date will carry the Grey Cup telecast and nothing else. But the ruling left the door slightly ajar. It said it would hold a public hearing on the matter Aug. 16. Then it will hear submissions.

Meantime the Board has made considerable the problem of finding a permanent solution to the broadcasting of major sports events across Canada. It has said it would welcome the cooperation of the networks in finding a solution. It may be the answer lies in assuring non-exclusive contracts for television rights. At any rate CBC is on a spot now that is the approach the Board is considering.

The Board's order to all TV stations to carry the Grey Cup is tantamount to a challenge to the authority of the CBC. The latter has displayed a reluctance to carry the Grey Cup telecast in view of the fact CTV [illegible] Attempts on the part of the CBC to get a piece of the action have been rebuffed. The CBC Board of Governors voted unanimously at its meeting in Toronto to carry the Grey Cup game. The CTV board of directors also voted unanimously to carry the game. It is the natural rival sports attraction of the season. Each network is determined to get the exclusive rights to the game.

The privately-owned networks contend that the national rule is unfair to them because it would prevent them from broadcasting the game. They point out that under the Broadcasting Act the CBC is directly charged with the responsibility of operating a national broadcasting service.

The Board has suggested that the CBC consider getting national exclusive rights to the game. It has come up with more or less similar proposals in the past, only to have privately-owned stations to join the proposed new network. The BBG is under no legislative obligation to accept such new outlets.

The BBG has also publicly indicated the CBC had a case in its complaint. Mr. Quinet has declared that the CBC has the second network and should be entitled to the same rights as the CTV network. Any decision connected with the Grey Cup and other applications for new TV stations is to be referred to the Board by the CBC next year, it was announced.

The BBG has also publicly indicated the CBC had a case in its complaint. Mr. Quinet has declared that the CBC has the second network and should be entitled to the same rights as the CTV network. Any decision connected with the Grey Cup and other applications for new TV stations is to be referred to the Board by the CBC next year, it was announced.

CBC President J. Alphonse Ouimet, in his annual report explained that it could mean that over new CBC stations were set up in various cities existing privately-owned stations would switch their network affiliation from the CBC to the private networks. Such a move BBG apparently feels such developments are a matter for Government decision, not a question for either the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation or the Board of Broadcast Governors to decide.

There has been no Government policy statement on CBC TV expansion since the BBG decision to establish CBC stations in six cities, Halifax, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver. This is part of the reason for the delay in relations between the CBC and the BBG. The chairman Mr. Andrew Stewart recently suggested there may have to be a reference to parliament. However Mr. Quinet has called for a major study of the whole broadcasting system.

The CBC is now fighting for its life. It is a desperate life and death struggle going on beneath the surface of broadcasting operations across Canada. Already Mr. Quinet has declared that the CBC has the second network and should be entitled to the same rights as the CTV network. Any decision connected with the Grey Cup and other applications for new TV stations is to be referred to the Board by the CBC next year, it was announced.

But the Federal cabinet is in no mood to throw away money to help the problems of the CBC. There are those among the ministry Conservative Government who believe the CBC's sovereign power at election helped reduce the Tory majority.

The recently announced austerity program will apply to the CBC as well as to other agencies. It will mean the CBC must raft a half for the time being on its proposed major capital expenditures. It also will presumably have to pare its costs of operations. Economy will be the keynote that the CBC does not want to cut back, it wants more money with which to pay for its public broadcasting services. The issue could well again come into Parliament. It will not be the first time the CBC and all its works have provided meat for members of Parliament anxious to get their teeth into a juicy subject.

CAPITAL HILL CAPSULE

The BBG in addition to tackling the CBC has warned those broadcasting stations on CBC commercial network in a matter of grave concern that it charged with the responsibility of operating the national public service.

He has warned that the CBC must obtain compensatory funds from the public purse or prepare for a drop in the quality of programming standards or quantity of service, or both. Clearly the CBC management feels the time has come to take a stand.

By George!

An item from the bulletin issued monthly by the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association concerns a message which drives home a point, not only for young boys and girls, but for adults as well. The brief story was carried in a Pabrik advertisement inserted by Johnston, Kyman and Charlesworth Limited, a public relations firm.

"A 10-year-old newsboy who until recently delivered morning papers is a big city has, to his customers' deep regret, given over his route to a much less efficient young man at 11.

"Number one boy, beaming, told one of his erstwhile customers the other week that he had certainly enjoyed his job; he'd met a lot of nice people.

"Number two boy, who usually keeps the paper where it can be expected to land away into the street, on those occasions when it is not water-logged by a puddle, is likely to end his career as a purveyor of news in the near future.

"But the Federal cabinet is in no mood to throw away money to help the problems of the CBC. There are those among the ministry Conservative Government who believe the CBC's sovereign power at election helped reduce the Tory majority.

He will, no doubt, tell all and sundry that the people on his route were a pretty grumpy lot.

TV PROFANITY

There seem to be more and more complaints about the use of profanity on Canadian television. The latest I have seen comes from a convention of the Ontario and Quebec Baptist church a while it was agreed that there were too many "hells" and "damns" in the Canadian content, and it is time for a little cleaning up. It would go down to another and say that the CBC is making too much use of a lot of words stronger than "hell" and "damn", too, and their value in any script is doubtful.

Another Toronto man has described the Festival series as "The most disgusting terrible things I've ever seen on television."

Some action, however, has been taken by the Board of Broadcast Governors, and it is to be hoped that the use of profanity soon will be eliminated entirely.

Allan Magneson weds Myrna Simonson

Messiah Lutheran Church, Camrose, was the scene of a lovely wedding on Friday, July 6, at 2:30 p.m., when Miss Myrna Marie Simonson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. M. Simonson, of Tofield, was united in marriage to Mr. Allan Robert Magneson son of Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Magneson, of Camrose. Pastor Carl Johnson performed the double-ring ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in a floor length gown of pearl d'anne lace and taffeta with a sequin-length train and lily-point sleeves and a scalloped neckline. A double crown head-piece of sequins and pearls held her fingertip veil in place. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses. Her jewelry was a pearl necklace and ring, gift of the groom.

The bride's attendants were Miss Sue Mah, of San Francisco, Calif., as maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Miss Ruth Jane Rimmell of Wetaskiwin and Miss Sharon Olson of Saskatoon, Sask. Junior bridesmaid was Miss Lois Simonson, sister of the bride. They were similar bell-shaped dresses of white brocade with matched tones of mauve and pink flowers. Their headpieces were white chiffon roses. The ensembles of the bridesmaids were styled by Van Carr. The bouquets were white Shasta mums.

The best man was Arvin Magneson, brother of the groom. Ushers were Ha.land Magneson, brother of the groom and David Simonson, brother of the bride.

While the bridal couple knelt at the altar, Mr. Arne Dahl sang The Wedding Prayer, and during the signing of the register he sang O Perfect Love, accompanied by Mrs. Rudy Magneson.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Simonson wore a dress of rose brice ironedle with matching hat. Her accessories were beige and she wore a corsage of pink roses. The mother of the groom chose a two piece suit of green linen with a lace jacket. Her corsage was also of pink roses.

The procession for 200 guests followed at 3:30 p.m. in the church narthex. The bride's table was covered with a three-tier wedding cake topped by the bride's mother and decorated with roses, and decorated by Mrs. Woolford.

Mr. Ed Mowen was master of ceremonies. The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Bridger Gilchrist of Edmonton, uncle of the bride, and was ably responded to by the groom. Pastor Roe said grace. Miss Patti Ford, cousin of the groom was in charge of the guest book.

For guest away the bride chose, red to a two-piece yellow suit with white and brown accessories and a corsage of bronze chrysanthemums. The young couple will reside in Newbrook where the groom will be attending university.

The reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Francis, Sunday was bright and warm and at time of writing conditions were satisfactorily dry to rake and bale hay. Some crops are so heavy they are starting to lodge in places. Prospects for an abundant harvest in this district are the best in many years.

Potato Pointers

With potatoes maturing soon in the vegetable garden, certain protection of them is important.

As shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph, when he plants become badly attacked with foliage and set tubers cultivation should stop. As the tubers are close to the surface of the soil further cultivation might injure them.

Any tubers showing above the surface of the soil should be covered with soil immediately because exposure to sunlight turns them green and renders them unfit for eating.

Early or late blight of potatoes can be prevented or cured by spraying several times with zineb. Protection depends on maintaining a deposit of fungicide on the foliage.

Ryley council refuses hospital requisition

The council of the Village of Ryley, at its regular meeting on July 19th, advised secretary Doug Hrushchak to write the Flagstaff Dewver Auxiliary Hospital regarding its tax requisition, and advise them that Ryley has no intention of paying the requisition. In the village minutes of April 30th of this year, the position of the village was made quite clear by the following: "The village does not wish to belong to this hospital district as this is too far away to be of any good to the ratepayers and residents of Ryley."

BUILDING PERMITS

Two building permits were dealt with and approved at the meeting. One application for a new barn in an approximate cost of $6,000 came from William Wiseman, and the other for permission to reconstruct and remodel a dwelling at an approximate cost of $3,000 came from Nick Gilleno.

A letter was received from Sun Publishing Co. regarding subscriptions to The Holden Herald for village ratepayers. The village agreed to be read for by the village, but it was the decision of council that if any ratepayers wish to have the Herald sent to them, to subscribe on their own, rather than have the money come out of the large funds.

Tenders for the construct a manhole on King Street and Tuscarora so that it can be used by one new service and it will also serve the Mizera property.

CBC cussin' curbed

Some of the language used in CBC plays has been mentioned before in these columns, when we expressed mild displeasure with the use of profanity, even though in a fairly mild form. We do not wish to imply that we are above uttering a few choice expletives ourselves at times which we would rather not have fall on the ears of ladies or children. Hearing these words used in a television program, however, in which thousands of children across Canada may be tuned, just doesn't sit right with us. Anything such language may add to a play is lost when a parent hears junior using these choice words the next day on his pet cat or younger brother or sister who may fail to do his bidding. "If they can say it on TV," Junior reasons, "why can't I?"

Finally something has been done, according to reports from Ottawa. The government-appointed CBC board of directors has come up with a "good taste" policy for radio and television drama, and has asked the CBC to watch its dramatic language. The action, apparently, is the result of many complaints reaching the House of Commons after use of undesirable language on a CBC television program called "Quest".

It is our hope that the swearing on Canadian radio and television has been stopped once and for all. Certainly it will make many dramas much less disgusting for a good many Canadians.

Mr. Manning speaks up

(From The Lethbridge Herald)

Premier Manning, the other day, broke his silence on the present federal position of Social Credit, and if his silence was highly significant, his first public utterance on the question was pregnant with meaning. It is required reading for every Social Credit member of Parliament who wants to survive the next election.

The Premier said that his hair stood on end when he listened to some of "these professed Social Creditors." It doesn't matter so much whether the Premier was wrong in referring that way to people, such as the 26 Social Credit MP's from Quebec who are more thoroughly doctrinaire disciples of the late Major Douglas than Mr. Manning appears to be.

The significant thing is that Mr. Manning implied disagreement between his wing of the Social Credit party and the Quebec wing. And the Quebec wing had better take note, because not even Mr. Caouette and Mr. Bennett together yet wield the influence within the Social Credit movement which Mr. Manning still does. If they did, Mr. Caouette would be the elected leader and not Mr. Thompson.

But, it will be said, Mr. Caouette delivered and controls 26 seats in the House of Commons. Yes, he did (once), and he does. But listen again to the old master. Mr. Manning points out that the new Social Credit MP's have an opportunity to gain a breadth of support, through their conduct in Parliament, "that could not be won by all the TV programs you could think of."

This is from a protege of the original practitioner of broadcast politicking, the late Mr. Aberhart. This is from the man who helped perfect the technique. This is from the man who continues to win reelection despite the fact that much of his support goes underground between elections.

Certainly Mr. Caouette's broadcast blitz paid off. And it could pay off again, but not if the new MP's make fools of themselves and their party in Parliament and the clear implication of Mr. Manning's remarks was that he fears the worst. He thinks the novices will goof.

And who, outside the ranks of the novice group itself, is prepared to say that Mr. Manning is not very likely correct?

Buck Rogers, move over

Things are moving so quickly in the world of science these days that many laymen can't possibly keep up, and even the scientists are seeing an ever-decreasing, rather than increasing, portion of the picture. Orbiting of men in space and the attention which was focussed on this for months almost drew a curtain of oblivion over the developing of the Telstar, the imaginative, planet lobbed, into space for American Telephone and Telegraph yesterday, even though some fifty millions of dollars went into its development, and some of the most fascinating bits of imaginative equipment were developed as part of its structure. Now, the entire world's communications potential takes a giant step forward, as opportunities open up for trans-ocean television programs, for tremendously increased opportunities to communicate across spaces by international code or voice, and as the shores of far-away lands are actually brought closer through clearer understanding achieved among all peoples.

Today's science of electronics is developing so rabidly, and changing business and living patterns so much that it is impossible even to visualize the world we will be living in just ten years from now, much less by the time the 21st Century rolls around. To put the matter in sharp perspective, it is almost inevitable that the colossal business of RCA Victor pay television will reach 1 billion dollars which were not even on the market five years ago.

It used to be that Buck Rogers was really pretty "far out". Today he's in danger of being overtaken.

MacDuff Ottawa report

. . . Get moving

OTTAWA — With the introduction of a series of sweeping austerity measures within a week after the last election, the federal government has for the moment at least checked the hemorrhage that was rapidly draining away Canada's foreign reserves. Lifeblood of the country's trade. But the Conservative ministry may only be at the beginning of its troubles.

For five years the Government has followed positive aimed at easing heavy unemployment which have resulted in continuous budget deficits approaching a total of $12 billion. It is impossible to determine to what extent these deficits have actually helped to create jobs that otherwise would not have been available.

But it is possible to say with certainty that the endless series of deficits has played a major part in undermining the confidence of investors at home and abroad in Canada. This undermining of confidence in turn has resulted in a flight of capital from the country, the effects of which eventually culminated in the balance of payments crisis which came to a head in mid-June.

As part of its plan for restoring the confidence of investors in this country, the ministry has promised to slash by roughly a half the $7.65 billion deficit which Finance Minister Donald Fleming projected for the current fiscal year when he brought down his budget only last April. This move towards a balanced budget comes at a time when unemployment is continuing on a downward trend from the post-war peak that began just about a year ago.

Should unemployment turn upwards again, pressuring both business economic and political problems, the government could find itself in a horrible dilemma.

STILL IN THE CARDS

That just such a situation might develop in the not-too-distant future is more than a remote possibility. At the moment the jobless picture appears on the surface to be a rosy one. Ever since last August the number of Canadians without jobs has been steadily falling month by month below the level of the previous year.

The latest figures available, those for June, show that the number of Canadians without work came to 340,000 and represented 4.8 per cent of the labor force. At the same time last year 370,000 were looking jobs. 5.8 per cent of the labor force.

While it would appear that this situation should be satisfactory, the fact is that when seasonal factors are taken into account in the country's radically changing labor picture over the course of the year unemployment actually underwent its first significant increase in many months.

On a seasonally adjusted basis, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports, the number of people without work rose from 5.6 per cent of the labor force in May to 6.2 per cent in June. Two important factors could cause unemployment to begin climbing again to major proportions later in 1962 or early in 1963.

DOWNWARD SWING

The first is the general state of the economy. Ever since the early spring of 1961, Canada has been swinging out of a recession and enjoying a mild upswing in the business cycle that has served to create a substantial number of new jobs. Now there are growing signs that the current economic recovery is nearing an end and business is in danger of being hit by another slump. If that happens the unemployment picture is sure to grow worse.

The second factor concerns the growth of the labor force. Last year federal authorities were hopefully expectant that it would expand at a quickening rate as the first of the vast postwar baby crop began pouring out of schools in search of jobs. As it turned out the growth of the labor force was considerably smaller than it had been for some years.

In part this was due to the fact that considerably fewer women left their kitchens in search of jobs, since the prospects of getting them appeared far from bright. But a more important reason was the fact that Canada's youngsters were apparently content to remain in school in order to get better education or more advanced technical or professional training.

With the closing of school in June, however, there was a very sharp increase in the number of young men and women looking for jobs. During June the labor force increased by 160,000 over the total in the same period a year ago, a far more rapid increase than had been taken place in recent months.

EVIL DAY POSTPONED

What may well have happened is that the influx expected last year has now been postponed to this year with the possibility existing that the labor force could be going expanding rapidly at a time when a declining economy is unable to provide new jobs.

Over the past five years, the major source of the federal government to the problem of unemployment has been to increase the purchasing power of the Canadian people through such devices as tax cuts and increased social welfare payments, the end result being a tremendous series of budget deficits.

"In the short run we had an out objective the expansion of domestic demand to take up the slack in the productive resources of the country," Mr. Fleming explained in his budget speech last April.

In the government once again reverts to heavy deficit financing as a means of reducing the worst effects of unemployment, it is in serious danger of precipitating a new flight of capital from Canada and a further balance of payments crisis that could further endanger the whole economy.

But since the problem of unemployment has today become one of the major responsibilities of the federal government, it is doing nothing it is courting the danger of political disaster.

The dilemma, however, goes beyond the political one. The real problem is how to get the economy growing at a rate that will overall basis. Unemployment does not exist in a vacuum. It also means less Canadian production out of which to pay the taxes which will eliminate the budget deficits — which in turn will improve our dollar problem and help revive foreign investor confidence. The trouble with austerity is that it became a short run necessity which hinders the long run solution. Austerity will only help more than it hurts if it is short lived. The underlying problem is not to cut down but to get moving.

Bering sights on American mountain

It all started with Peter the Great of Russia in the early part of the 18th century. Peter looked westward for new lands and also men who would help him modernize old Russia. He also looked eastward to Asia and to Alaska and Asia to expand his empire. He had heard in Holland of the old coast of sailors and explorers for a northern route to the Orient and Alaska. Perhaps he would find it by going east.

In 1725, shortly before he died, Peter ordered Vitus Bering, a Dane who had served in the Russian navy for some years, to build a ship on the east coast of Siberia and sail eastward to find out "where it is joined to America." Then he was "to reach some way by European promotion, and to enquire what it is called, and to make a note of it."

It was not easy for Bering. The nearest European colonies were thousands of miles away. Even to get started on his voyage he and his men had to haul a ship-building equipment across 5,000 miles of mountain and forest to Siberia's Pacific coast. Bering discovered St. Lawrence Island, now part of Alaska, and established that the Asiatic and American continents were separate rather than joined. He was buried on his return. Learned armchair geographers, consulting maps drawn from sailors' yarns and their own memories, determined that he could not possibly have been where he said he had been. Then it was given new and more elaborate instructions to establish a small navy in China and chart the entire coast of Siberia as well as the coast of the North American south to Mexico.

For the next ten years Bering and his sailors explored the Siberian coast and the Aleutian lands to the east. In May 1741 the ice broke up and Bering sailed from Avacha Bay. On July 18 he sighted a great snow-covered mountain. Bering had found America. He was off the anchored. Instead of Alaska. It was St. Elias Day, and he called his mountain Mount St. Elias.

You Are the Detective

Where is the entrance to the old, ivy-covered science hall on the university campus, you are met by the sober-faced Dean of Men, Dr. Tim Dee.

"I'm glad you've arrived!" he says heartily. "Something unusual . . . not only Dr. John Anderson's tragic death, but also the dying accusation that his student assistant pushed him. I want you to fall down that steel stairway in his death.

Dr. Timlin leads through the open doorway into the science building, and at the other end of the hallway you can see the narrow stairs ascending one story.

Dr. Anderson's laboratory is on the third floor, the door half ahead a foot beyond the top of the stairs. He rushes to Anderson's assistant, and to enquire what it is called, and to make a note of it."

"Did this or is it Allison now?" you say.

Dr. Timlin conducts you across the campus to another building and into his oak-panelled study where the sullen-faced young student, Richard Allison, sits huddled in a chair staring moodily out of the window. He turns around as the Dean tells him you wish to talk with him.

"And so the old man didn't even let up on me with his last breath!" exclaims Allison. "He was always on my back about this and that, and nothing I could do in that lab or his classroom was right. Nothing to think anyone could be so vicious as to push him."

"Suppose we sit down to facts now," you break in.

"About my pushing him down these stairs? Well, you can forget that. As a matter of fact, I wasn't even up there in the lobby . . . especially after the bad session we had yesterday afternoon. I argued with an ounce of sense would assume that he tripped over that loose sill at the door of his room. He wasn't a very graceful character, you know."

You sigh and, gazing fixedly at the young man, say: "I don't know what you're trying to get at, but I'm going to have a little more explaining to do."

Why are you suspicious of Richard Allison?

SOLUTION

Allison claimed that he had not left the lab after Anderson's accident all that day. If this were true, he did not know about the loose sill which had been kicked loose "not even two hours ago."

Dairy farm group tries stop decline in use of products

Dairy Farmers of Canada have taken a giant step towards arresting the declining per capita consumption of dairy foods.

The directors of the national producer body supported the granting of a year-round advertising collection with an objective of one cent per cwt. of milk.

A system of regional producer committees with a national representatives was included in the plan which would ensure a new and broadened administration to be called the Dairy Foods Service Bureau.

A partial, and a eventual complete separation from Dairy Farmers of Canada was part of the plan which was presented by a special "set-aside committee" which had been set up to study the structure of the farmers present advertising operation.

The directors will now report the development to the regional dairy groups they represent in order to secure universal support from producers.

The plan includes provision for an advisory board, comprised of dairy processors, consumers and federal and national advisers

IMPROVING WITH AGE

The reporter had been sent to a small town to interview its oldest resident, a well-preserved old man. "May I ask how old you are?" the reporter queried.

"I'm just a hundred," replied the old man.

"Well, do you think you'll live to see another hundred?" said the reporter.

The old man though a bit then said, "I don't know, but I'm younger now than when I started the first hundred."

Who said that opportunity only knocks once? TV is given us a second chance to see movies we missed first time.

IMPERFECT TIMING

A father was initiating his small son into the mysteries of fishing from a mountain stream that was all but dried up.

"You see," he confided, gripping a palm like trickle with a flourish, "You do it like this—"

"Dad!" protested the boy, "You aren't going to drink THAT!"

"Of course not," he said, and emptied his cupped hand into his mouth.

"It is gooey" came in an awed whisper. "It tastes like pollywog."

A man who gives in when he is wrong is smart. A man who gives in when he is right is married.

Q. Would it be all right for us to give an engagement announcement party in honor of our son and his fiancee? Her parents never served this.

A. No. You may, however, give a "celebration" party. The announcement must be made by the girl's parents, and if they are unable to do so, the people of a party, they can do so very well through the local newspaper.

Q. When meal is passed at the table, and the portion held closest to you is too big for you well done, or doesn't suit you, is it all right to switch through the portions and fill you feel a suitable piece?

A. Yes, if you just accomplish this without taking too much time and without disarranging the whole dish.

Q. Is it necessary to write a thank you note after you have been entertained informally at dinner or lunch?

A. No; when leaving, tell your hostess how much you have enjoyed her evening. And of course, write to her the proverbial next time, too.

Q. When a man is entering his car and another woman is in front of him, which one does he help first in her step?

A. The woman guest.

Hey fellows, quit your snoring

This appears to be a cozy arrangement for the above set, except for the snoring, of course. But otherwise he seems to be quite comfortable and spends most of his time right there. At times he was been playing with the young pigs and at times he finds the most comfortable place to sleep is right on the back of the pigs. As for the son, well she thinks it's just great, so she seems to have adopted the feline. —Photo by Peter Nickel.

Modern Etiquette ...

Q. My daughter has become engaged to a young man whose home is in a distant city. She has not met his mother, but would like to write her a note. Don't you think his mother should be the first to write?

A. Yes, his mother should write a letter of welcome to your daughter — and, if necessary, her son should ask his mother to do this.

Q. How are canapes eaten?

A. Canapes that are served before a meal are eaten with the fingers and with cocktails in the fingertips. At the table, however, they are eaten with the fork.

Q. Is it considered bad manners to take anything to drink while there is food in your mouth?

A. Yes, since this might leave particles of food in the beverage. Then, too, one should avoid the appearance of "washing down" one's food. It is amazing how many people are guilty of this breach of etiquette.

Q. Is it all right for the bridegroom's mother to invite her friends to her son's wedding?

A. She must not do this herself. She may suggest the names of her son, and he passes them on to his fiancee, who does the mailing of all invitations.

Q. When a toast is proposed to a person, should this person drink from his glass, too.

A. No; he does not rise from his chair, nor does he drink the toast.

Q. Is it proper to tip the hotel doorman who lifts your bags out of your car in the sidewalk?

A. No.

Q. Is it proper for a girl to borrow another girl's lipstick?

A. While this is frequently done, I still think that lipstick is just a bit too personal an item to borrow.

Hail flattens crops in Ryley, Round Hill

A hail storm spanning a width of about two miles swept through the area from Hay Lakes to Round Hill last Wednesday afternoon causing extensive damage, particularly in the vicinity of the Bill Bowthorpe farm, where crops and gardens were completely wiped out. Accrding to a report received from a Round Hill resident, Mrs. E. Wagner, several windows were broken and the sidings of buildings were damaged. Besides the loss of crops many farmers report that pigs and chickens were killed. Ted Rakowski and his son were out of doors when the storm struck, and they were covered with bruises when they finally reached shelter.

SIZE OF GOLF BALLS

The hail stones were reported to be the size of golf balls at the Bowthorpe farm. Windows were broken here, too, and two ducks on the Bowthorpe Game Farm were killed. "I was surprised there were any animals left at all", a member of the Bowthorpe family commented later.

The storm lasted about 10 minutes at Round Hill.

District Agriculturist Larry Wilson accompanied Art MacKenzie of Camrose on a flight over the area after the storm. "The hail seemed to hit intermittently from Hay Lakes east", Mr. Wilkens told The Mercury yesterday. "The storm travelled east through Round Hill and then swung northeast to Gard and Holden. Crops of wheat, oats and barley were flattened to the ground. Many of the wheat crops were conservatively estimated at 40 bushels to the acre".

Sweeping on towards Ryley and Meadow, the storm also damaged crops in the area south of Ryley, many of them up to 100 per cent.

There have been no further report, of hail in the Tofield area since last Wednesday.

Flagstaff-Beaver auxiliary hospital question again brought up at council

At the regular meeting of the council of the Town of Tofield held Monday, August 6, the matter concerning the creation of hospital in the Beaver-Flagstaff Auxiliary Hospital Unit again came up for discussion. The Town of Tofield has signified its intention to make payment of a requisition from the hospital board, on the ground that the hospital, which is to be located at Killam, 45 miles south of Tofield, would be too far from the town to be of much benefit.

The question came up again at the meeting when a By-law was received from the department of public health, with an explanation of why Tofield was included in the Flagstaff-Beaver Auxiliary Hospital District No. 20. The act says that any municipality wholly surrounded by another municipality is automatically included in whether they wish it or not. No action was taken by council following the reading of the letter.

The major "power train" components generally covered by the new Chrysler Corporation warranty for five years or 50,000 miles whichever comes first, are the engine, transmission, the propeller shaft and universal joint, and the rear axle. "The new warranty marks a significant advance in the field of virtually surprise free personal transportation for the motoring public," said Mr. Regehr.

The new warranty will apply to all 1963 Chrysler Corporation cars and trucks sold in Canada.

The new Chrysler Corporation "5-50" warranty will be a "bonus" warranty which, of course, will also include the warranty of one year or 12,000 miles on the vehicle's presently common in the industry. The new Chrysler Corporation warranty also applies to all 1963 Dodge and Fargo trucks.

In general the warranty includes parts and labor needed to correct malfunctions which require removal of the head or pan in the case of the engine, or disassembly of the transmission, propeller shaft or rear axle. Detailed provisions of the new warranty will be available at Premier Motors with the introduction of the 1963 models.

Ed Regehr announces first five-year warranty in automotive industry

The automobile industry's first five-year or 50,000-mile warranty covering the principal components of the "engine to rear axle power train" on Chrysler Corporation cars and trucks beginning with the 1963 models was made known in Tofield this week by Ed Regehr of Premier Motors.

Double crop of barley?

At least two farmers in this part of the province will be looking forward to doubling their crop of barley this year, if whole fields like the abnormal growth of the samples shown The Mercury office by Ed Lewis of Ryley. Both farmers have two sets of grain growing from one stem.

The first came from Elmer Sowers who farms three miles west and two miles south of Camrose, a double-headed stem of Husky barley.

A Ryley farmer, Frank Urlacher had a similar sample, except that his was of the Oil's variety.

"I wouldn't mind having a whole field of this," remmarked Mr. Urlacher. "But this is the only one I could find."

Wanted: nominations for junior citizenship awards

It's always a pleasure to be able to tell our readers about a new project which we feel will make a worthwhile contribution to the life of the Province. Such a program has recently been announced by editors of Alberta weekly newspapers and Calgary Power Limited.

"We felt we wanted to give deserved recognition to our many fine young citizens who add so much to the life of their families and communities," commented G. Milligan, Director of Public Information and Consumer Services for Calgary Power Ltd. "With this thought in mind we decided to join with Alberta weekly newspaper editors in sponsoring a program of Junior Citizenship awards," Mr. Milligan continued.

The area of eligibility is wide. It covers every boy and girl in Alberta 6 to 16 years of age who, between September 1st, 1961, and September 1st, 1962, performed an act of physical heroism, or did outstanding work with a church, school, social or service organization. It includes any boy or girl who organized a worthwhile project, achieved outstanding scholastic success under adverse circumstances or who showed great courage in illness.

In this area alone, we feel there must be many such young people and we urge the readers of this newspaper to send in their nominations to this editor. Your nominations should include the name, address and age of the young person you nominate, together with your name and address and details of the particular feat which they accomplished. Nominations should be made not later than September 30th, 1962.

There will be six JUNIOR CITIZEN AWARD winners who will receive a Canada Savings Bond, and a framed citation of their achievement presented to them by Calgary Power officials in Calgary.

"Entries are now being received by editors throughout Alberta," Mr. Milligan added, "but we are anxious that no worthy boy or girl be overlooked, so we suggest that you send your nomination in promptly."

A place for reading . . . Guest editorial—

in The Christian Science Monitor

One often hears the complaint that children today don't read the way they used to even ten, twenty, thirty years ago. Having been involved with books for most of my life, I have given the reasons for this lapse in the reading habit quite a bit of thought. There are the obvious reasons like TV, and growing up sooner, and the hectic organized activities of youth and adolescence. But there's one reason I've never heard mentioned. Obvious, too. Simply that there is no place to read!

The trundlebed of the typical house of today opens directly into the livingroom. At a glance, one can see the entire room, usually the dining room, or dining alcove, and often the kitchen besides. There are no nooks. No corners. No places to be discovered. All is immediately and completely revealed. The sofa tables of today are apt to be bare—or perhaps have a magazine or two, or an ornament on them. The bookcases of today tend to be incidental, half-empty, and seldom seem to be an integral part of the room.

Where are children to do their reading today? Houses have no attics. Families are large — frequently two or more offspring to a bedroom. Yards are small — often treeless. Where, oh where, can a child find that partly secluded, semi-detached nook or crunny or branch or corner where he can curl up with a good book and be at once immersed in its world and at the same time aware of the ordinary world of practical concern going on around him, but mercifully a notch removed?

Perhaps I was more fortunate than most in having a shack to read. I always had my own room which contained both a comfortable chair and a desk. There was always an attic in our house and I was thoroughly at home in it perhaps this is why I have never minded spiders. They were tolerated, unclamoring companions of many bookfilled hours under a small, cobwebby window.

There were invariably accommodating trees in our yard one particular horse chestnut with a branch at just the right angle so that I could straddle it, back against the trunk, and hook my left arm over a smaller branch for the sake of anchor and balance. That left the right hand free for holding the book. I would read and dream and dream and read. The busy comings and goings below made me feel secret and safe. I was a part of all that, of course, and glad to be; but for the moment I was deliciously detached and happy with that special happiness that the pre-verbal king must feel in his castle.

But the prize spot, the place of all places for reading, was the windowseat in our seashore summer home. Deeply recessed, it had a built-in bookcase at each end. The cushions were covered with yellow and black crevicene. The view, through a thoroughly justified and true picture window, was over the bay westward to the grassy islands and magnificent sunsets.

Here I would snatch an hour before or after dinner. After a day outdoors at the edge of the sea, the house seemed small and close. I felt squeezed into proper clothes and scrubbed. And if my nurse had managed to corral me long enough to tackle the tumble of wiry hair (it was the effect of salt air on naturally curly hair, my scalp was usually still tingling. But sprawled on the windowseat with the book of the moment Water Babies, Little Women, Beautiful Joe, Otto of the Silver Hand—I would enter into other realms, completely separate from all humdrum considerations and the faintly stirring, bustling house. I had a place to read.

Even in present-day living arrangements it is sometimes possible to provide such a place. One time we rented a garage apartment. Our son, then six or seven, craved a private retreat of his own. His room contained a useless bubble alcove with one tiny window, the whole thing elevated above the bedroom floor about three feet. We bought a folding stepladder, built a triangular plywood door, installed a stout seat a light, and he would climb up there to pore over his pet projects or books by the hour. We had to find someplace else to put his clothes; but he had a place to read!

Perhaps, as the Space Age unfolds, we will have private sanctuaries available for those who still hope for a little old-fashioned privacy for literary pursuits. A few hours around the earth would enable one to get a good start even on one of the mammoth compendiums currently called novels. Or, if and when fallout shelters become obsolete— and who doesn't hope they will — what fine concrete-bound seclusion they could provide. Or, someone might start a nation-wide petition to architects: "Privacy, please!"

The possibilities are intriguing. Where there's a will there's usually some way. And with individuality so generally under fire today, we can afford to give a little extra ingenuity to endeavoring to provide a child with a corner to call his own. Contemplation is the breeding-ground of all book-knowledge; will the apes ever outgrow the need for it?

The Rogers pass

Three important factors combined to change the tourist situation from Calgary to Vancouver over Number One highway but the opening of the Rogers Pass is probably the most important. Eating and lodging accommodation along this route has been taxed to the limit during July and August and is far more pressing than the most optimistic persons guessed. The World's Fair at Seattle and the exchange on the U.S. dollar has something to do with the influx of tourists but most people feel it is the condition of the Canadian highway.

Looking down on the highway from any vantage point for a few minutes one gets the vision of a busy ant hill. Cars are going and coming steadily all day long. Service stations and eating places along the route are so busy they have no time for service. There are line-ups at the most respectable looking places. With every second vehicle pulling a trailer or loaded with tenting equipment there is still a shortage of sleeping accommodation. Unless reservations have been made well in advance, the tourist is just out of luck.

An aggressive chamber of commerce in Golden, B.C., has men on the street offering to help the tourist find accommodation in private homes. Eating places there, like in most places, are begging for experienced and dependable help. Girls who can and will give service are taking their share of the business dollar in tips. A dollar per table, per sitting, is not uncommon. Unfortunately there are too many waitresses who will not or cannot give this type of service.

Several people have stated that opening the Rogers Pass has opened up a whole new economy. Trucking companies are finding that Calgary is a market place for many of the areas in the mountains that formerly had only Vancouver for an outlet. Businessmen in Alberta are also finding that the interior of B.C. is a completely new market area because of its availability, due to the condition of the highway.

Anyone who has had the opportunity of travelling over Number One highway where it has been built to dominion government standards, will admit it is the most scenic and pleasant road to travel in the North American continent. Nothing else can compare to the changing beauty as you coast along over a wide belt of pavement at up to 60 miles per hour. All that is needed is more and better accommodation. When this is provided, more and more people will travel through the Canadian Rockies.

Summerfallow historic plan for grain crops

WINNIPEG—Larger wheat crops of the west are put down to the practice of summerfallowing, in a review by W. G. Maisner of Steinbach, Man.

With preliminary estimates of the Western Canadian wheat crop placing at an average of approximately 20 bushels per acre, despite a spring that got hot dry period in July, one of the main reasons for the better than average yield is not difficult to find. It is, without doubt, the high proportion of wheat now seeded on summerfallow. Had it not been for this fact, the 1962 wheat crop—and for that matter several other wheat crops in recent years—would undoubtedly have been much smaller.

It is now exactly 75 years since Angus Mackay, pioneer farmer in the Indian Head district, because of circumstances existing in the North West Rebellion, found himself without horses to prepare his land for spring seeding and was forced to leave it idle until the following season. In the succeeding year, when crops seeded on stubble were almost a complete failure because of a drought, he reaped a full yield and thereby established the value of fallow for Western Canada.

There are many today who view the practice of summerfallowing as a wasteful and unnecessary one, particularly in northern areas where moisture is not usually a limiting factor. The bare fallow of earlier years has been largely replaced by strip cropping, trash cover and rotation strip cropping and there has been a complete revolution in the types and operation of tillage implements used. However, the practice of summerfallowing in one form or another, seems to remain as much a part of the average farmer's program as it ever did and there is not as much difference in this respect between northern and southern areas as one might expect.

There has been a slight decline in the acreage summerfallowed in recent years but the area in summerfallow, at 34 million acres, is still about 14 million acres more than the ten year average of 1949 to 1958.

It would be plausible arguments for reducing the acreage placed in summerfallow or eliminating it altogether in certain areas but an occasional break with disaster only served to strengthen the dependence that pioneer, upon this means of weed control. It will, therefore, probably take a long time before things change very much in this respect.

Turkish rug quality high

ISTANBUL — In spite of rising costs and a poor market, thousands of hand-looms in Turkey are turning out carpets with better color, quality and design than ever before.

This historic, father-to-son industry is eventually conservative in spirit, and some of the old hand-linked traditions such as Kula Mesarcik (all proudly use the ancient Turkish knot) have survived even from China, Persia, Afghanistan and Caucasia. Others have introduced many modern designs assembly the traditional ones.

Carpets are a "must" for a Turkish house, and there is always a lucrative demand for hand - woven carpets.

In some parts of Turkey, young girls start work on the looms at twelve.

At Isparta, in southern Turkey, artisans are famous for its thick and soft carpets and its altar of roses. The area divide their time between rose-gathering and the looms. When the roses are in bloom in the spring, they gather them, singing the while, in colorful, sweet-scented gardens. After their work is done, they return to the looms again.

The girls sing songs while their roll-framed hands are busy at the looms with a knife, a pair of scissors, a small but heavy comb, called a tarak, and plenty of colorful wool at hand.

Making carpets grew out of rug-making in Asia, Nineveh and Egypt, 2,500 years before the Christian era. Through the centuries, carpetmaking became established as an industry in Central Asia, spreading later from there to other parts of the world. It became the national art of the Turks, and according to officials of the Kula Mesarcik concern, "fathered" the modern carpetmaking industries in Persia, the Soviet Union and Iraq.

The most important special feature of these carpets is the harmony of color and the richness of design. Today, many European museums exhibit old Turkish masterpieces.

Free-choice economy

(By C. J. Harris)

A good many critics of the present-day pick on advertising as a prime target of their gibes. Oddly enough, though advertising people are expert in the business of communication, they seldom seem to put up a good rebuttal, at least in public. A recent and noteworthy exception is J. Edward Lobaw, advertising director of the Du Pont Company.

"Many of advertising's critics", Mr. Dean said in a recent speech, "fail to look beyond the immediate target. They are of the type that the ancient call 'aborigin critics'. The aborigin critic attacks without knowledge of either cause or alternatives. He would hold the critics of advertising have a stranglehold on the competitive process." Some of them are possibly so wedded to the idea of Government controls that they would like to see us adopt a system that would place all business under the direction of a central authority.

"But most, I suspect, would be quick to cry out in alarm if competition among producers should be curtailed, and indeed our whole body of law and tradition is committed to the virtues of the unrestricted market, with the consumer as the principal beneficiary. The only way the shopping list may be started at times by the chiefs bears bidding for her attention, but I have never known her to fail.

"Vigorous rivalry among producers is part and parcel of our free-choice economy. Don't you think the uproar over advertising merchwds would strike the citizens of Moscow as rather strange if they were to become aware of it? They are spared the indignity of listening to commercials which sing the praises of low-cost automobiles. They are also spared the automobiles.

Advertising has its shortcomings, as does the free-choice economy, but they are subject to correction. They are faults in the facade, not in the foundations, of our economic structure.

By George!

General Electric is building a walking machine. Intended for travelling where wheeled vehicles cannot go, it will have legs 12 feet long and will be able to travel over almost any kind of terrain at speeds of 35 miles an hour and more. The idea is to make the machine so that it will be able to pick itself up again. This type of machine is part of a new program to develop machines like men, to be known as "cybernetic anthropomorphous devices". The walking machine, of course, will have a man at the controls which will function as his innards.

Such a machine may mean an unimaginable change in the thinking of future generations who may be buying "walkers" instead of cars. For instance, instead of looking for a garage when the machine is not running (pardon me, "walking") normally, he will naturally take it into the hospital.

"What seems to be the trouble this time?" Dr. McIloil will ask.

"I'm not sure", replies the owner, "but it seems to have a limp. I think it all started when it was bitten in the ankle by a St. Bernard. For all I know, it may have rabies."

"Well, I think if you use this prescription it should be cleared up in just a few days", advises the doctor. "Just put two quarts of this stuff in its gas tank every six hours, and if it isn't feeling more peppy by next Tuesday call again and we'll give it a complete check-over."

"Fine", agrees the owner. "I might have to come in for that checkup regardless, though, because I'm thinking of taking out some more insurance on it, and while I'm here you'll have in mind until I can prove my machine is medically fit!"

And can't you just imagine the fun the advertising men will have in bringing out the highlights of various models:

"When you're in the market for a walker, don't bug until you've seen the new Hi-Stepper. This year's model has extra-long legs which means fewer steps to save wear and tear on the feet. The feet, too, have been improved and are now available in a quad A width for easier parking in small spaces. For pickup, this machine cannot be equalled - any time it fails, it can pick itself up and be on its way again in just nine seconds. And for sheer good looks and streamlining, just check these measurements. Its feet 24-26-8. Step into a Hi-Stepper and enjoy walking as you've never before enjoyed it."

By the way, what's showing at the Walk-In theatre tonight?

LABOR UNDER THE SOCRED SHADOW

Are the followers of Social Credit taking over the labor-union movement in Quebec? This prospect is quite real and freshening to labor leaders in the province, says Laselle Chisholm in The Financial Post. They view Social Credit as basically an anti-union party which in its Quebec genesis has strong pro-tenets of the Quebec labor code.

Despite this, Social Credit has made inroads in areas where labor-union sentiment is numerically strong. "It will take months and months to restore properly the damage and to plan our counter-strikes," one labor official said.

Some early plans in the massive campaign by labor to revive the sympathies of the members include: A public-poll analysis of the June 18 federal vote to ascertain definitely the voting pattern in districts where union families live; a survey by a labor newspaper of union members who will be encouraged to answer candidly why they voted for Social Credit and if so, why? A searching re-examination of a political education program that has been going on for years within the unions, with apparently no effect.

The irony of the result is already obvious. Now our members are free of the unions and, "We have been pushing for 15 years about the dangers of domination by big business. Now our members have our message and misinterpreted it."

The operator was about to close the door of the crowded elevator when a well dressed but old woman and gentleman pushed his way in. As the car started up he tried to turn around to see the door, but was wedged in so tightly he could not move. The other passengers stared into his blank face with a mixture of curiosity and hostility, when the strain became quite painful the drunk cleared his throat and remarked, "I expect you wonder why I called this meeting".

Eating' crow

The metal strips used to bend birds are inscribed: "Metal Fab and Wild Life Service, Wash., D.C.", and they used to read "Washington Biological Survey", abbreviated to "Wash. Biol Surv." This was changed after a farmer shot a crow and discreetly wrote the U.S. Government, "Dear Sirs: I shot one of your crows from my cellar day and followed instructions etched in it. I washed it and ribbe. You should stop trying to feed the people with things like this . . ."

BARGEN TAKES OVER

"I'm, due to health reasons, Mr. Chapin resigned from the management's position in 1952. During the past ten years, Stanley Bargen, who was Mr. McCall, Mr. Jackson, Mr. Steele and Mr. Chapin's right hand man at the Co-operative Association was ready to take over.

Then, in 1955, Johnny Bargen became manager, with Mrs. Geo. Fosbaug as assistant, and since then time has been spent on remodelling. A number of people are responsible for this beautiful new building, but a large part of the credit must go to Johnny Bargen, as well as rural residents who have helped by their store and who will certainly be a great deal to the town of Tofield. The staff is put into the new premises and members of the Co-op has been most friendly.

Members of the present board of directors are: Mr. Heinz Hennig, chairman; vice-chairman, Mr. Heinz Lehmann; directors, Mr. Ed Lancaster, Arvids Johnson, George Abernathy and Carne Nemetz, directors.

The Solitude Friday night outdoor supper was served at Aaron Hill's at 8:30 at the home of Mrs. Rev. who was assisted by Mrs. Ed Hill and Mrs. Ed Hill.

Mr. Anderson in a very moving speech based on Psalm 103, brought to a satisfactory conclusion a very full summing of the past psalm, and also put thought and responsibility of Christian to all who were present. Mrs. Anderson sang a solo, and Peter, an apparent victory, of the duration of the service. Mrs. Joy, assisted by several ladies and the summer people, served a very enjoyable and satisfying lunch after a round of games and recreation and rehearsal for the evening's program.

SEED MONEY

Alberta's provincial department of education grants cover by far the major portion of costs, there is still heavy expense connected with the operation of these schools [illegible] and the group feels the need for [illegible] a small sum of its own as soon as possible. For this reason, it has not its sights on a fund of $25,000, and is selling memberships at the basis of $2.00 per family, or $1.00 for individuals. Membership now totals 75. Other fundraising programs, such as the Christmas Tea, are also being planned. Mayor Ida and other funds will be sent to Mrs. Ken Nyback, Camrose.

Mr. Burgess pointed out that special events can make use of a film which has been loaned to the group, and can make arrangements for its use by phoning him. He would also welcome offers to board out-of-town children during the school-week.

TROUBLE APLENTY

Four local boys, Ray Price, Bob Gruden, Fred Hunley and Garry Stevenson were on a holiday trip to Jasper and reported a most eventful time. Leaving Tofield in Fred's car they travelled some miles when they met a broken horse. Finding a weeder and a mower there they managed to repair the damage but a few more miles further on they had the misfortune to have a blowout. When they got the spare tire and to replace the blowout they found it had a large as they drove on. Finally in a service station they discovered the cause when the owner informed them he had decided to put a new tube in the tire and to charge them for it. Needless to say the boys were glad to get home after their eventful trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hunley and family left on Tuesday for a holiday visit to Edmonton and district. They will visit relatives in Edmonton, Mayerthorpe, Lac La Nonne and Mundare before returning home

Real trouble

National Socred Leader Robert N. Thompson is having Real trouble these days . . . Real Causette trouble!

One cannot help but feel, judging from his behavior since the June federal election, that Mr. Caouette is most unhappy in his position as deputy leader of the national party. Indeed, he said as much —"If you can't say something nice, say nothing at all."

Premier Bennett of B.C., also avoided criticism of Mr. Caouette saying that there is nothing wrong with a man expressing his own personal opinions.

It almost seems that a party split is inevitable. While the Social Crediters from Alberta seem to have viewpoints and policies quite different from the British Columbia variety, they are almost blood brothers when compared to the followers of Real Caouette. But since Mr. Caouette delivered 26 Quebec seats for the Socreds in the last election, as compared to only four from the West by Mr. Thompson, we would suspect that if the Quebec leader is intent on splitting the national party, he has the power to do so . . . unless, of course, his twenty-five followers become as annoyed with his behavior as others appear to be.

Tax free

Tourists, as well as Albertans, are being wooed by merchants in many travel and resort centres this summer with one of the smarter plays we have seen for some time. Taking advantage of the fact there is no sales tax in Alberta, they are using big window displays reading "Buy Now in Alberta . . . Tax Free".

It's going over, too, and any of these merchants will tell you how happy travellers are to avoid the sales tax, which they have to pay to all our neighbors, Saskatchewan, British Columbia, Washington, and many others. We're ringed about with tax collectors, and it takes either a trip away from home, or a tourist here to tell us how lucky we are.

It is to be hoped Provincial Treasurer Hunman will have a chance to talk to these people as much as he does to those who in this province who see the introduction of the sales tax as one of the answers to the perennial need for more money. A sales tax is the easy way out for the government, but it spells misery for the sales clerks and storekeepers, as well as injustice for the poor taxpayer In addition, it would add thousands of dollars to the costs of administration, and take scores, if not hundreds, of workers to administer We don't for a minute think this is behind Mr. Hinman's suggestion, but wouldn't it be just awful if this were one of the major reasons for the minister's continued support of a sales tax?

Let's buy now . . . and tomorrow . . . tax free in Alberta.

Loss to Canada

Maybe Canada's loss took place more than half a century ago, but it is not generally known that in the passing of Vilhjalmur Steffanson the world lost another of Canada's contributions. Born of Icelandic parents, in Manitoba, William Stephanson was fascinated with the Northto legend of his forebears and converted his name to its earlier equivalent.

The development in northern research and knowledge made by Mr. Steffanson is almost legendary . . . and indeed, large numbers of people would be surprised to learn that this man, whose name was already a part of history in the Canadian north, still lived in 1962. Ruggedly independent, he enjoyed matching his abilities with the elements or with human adversaries, and even though possessed of mild nature and disposition, he rarely failed to establish his point.

Canadian or Icelandic, he left a record of genuine accomplishment and achievement for the world to remember.

By George!

The news last week of the abduction of a Beyerwold girl in Ontario brings to the fore once again the matter of sex deviates and what is to be done about them. It is all very well for us to express our sympathy for the victim and the families concerned, but something, something of this nature seems to occur frequently, community or area. Why? Would we know if more interested in seeking out these deviates and bringing the number of a offenses to a minimum? Well, then, the time has come for action.

Earlier this month such an incident occurred in a small community just a few miles from Camrose, but fortunately, after a struggle, the victim—a nine-year-old girl managed to escape from her assailant before any serious offence was committed. She and a younger sister were playing in their own yard when the incident occurred. The parents of the child immediately reported the matter to the police. The man was charged and sent to prison.

During the trial, the offender admitted sexually assaulting several other young girls, most of them older than his most recent victim. It is almost unbelievable that these offences were never reported to the police and action could be taken. Perhaps the victim, for one reason or another, did not tell their parents. Perhaps the parents refused to take any action because of the embarrassment it might have caused them. But the fact still remains that the criminal was permitted to commit several offences when he should have been arrested after the first. In other words, if, for instance, ten offences had been committed, nine of them might have been prevented.

Certainly, if anyone had reason for ignoring these pain-seek, it was the parents of the man's latest victim—the people who finally did report him—because, after all, no serious offence was actually committed, even though the intention was there. They could have let the man go his way, to molest other young girls. But they didn't, and the other residents of the community can be thankful.

When a father prays

Build me a son, O Lord, who will be strong enough to know when he is weak, and brave enough to face himself when he is afraid. One who will be proud and unbeaten in defeat; but humble and gentle in victory.

Build me a son whose will not be afraid to know what he should be; a son who will know, that to know himself, is the foundation stone of true success.

Hear him pray not in the path of ease and quiet, but under the stress and urge of difficulties and challenges. Here let him learn to stand up in the storm; here let him learn compassion for those who fall.

Build me a son whose heart will be clean, whose goal will be high. A son who will master himself, before he seeks to master other men. One who will learn to laugh, but never forget how to weep. One who will reach for the future, but never forget the past.

And after all these are his, add I pray, enough of a sense of humor so that he may always be serious yet never take himself too seriously. Give him humility so that he may always remember the simplicity of true greatness; the open mind of true wisdom; the meekness of true strength.

Then I, his father, will dare to whisper meekly, "I have not lived in vain." — from "The Traveller".

Minutes of county school committee meeting

The committee was informed that due to a recent inspection of the schools by J. D. Edwards, assistant manager of the United Grain Growers Insurance Agencies Limited, and a reduction in coinsurance to Jubilee Agencies, the fire rate on the schools in the County had been reduced from 1/2 to 1/4. A copy of the proposed schedule comparing the coverage suggested, to that now carried, was also referred to the committee, also the account of the appraiser in the amount of $125. After some discussion on the schedule, it was moved that at a number of places to obtain rooming accommodation without success. He also referred to the difficulty for some of the office staff to obtain accommodation, and suggested that consideration should be given for the construction of a three-room teacherage at Ryley. If this is found necessary, it would be necessary to either apply for a five-year loan to cover the cost or else to pay for the building out of current revenue; this of course would result in a deficit in the operation of the schools for 1962. The committee concurred in the opinion of the secretary-treasurer, and it was moved and carried that the building committee look into this matter and make the necessary arrangements.

It was finally informed the committee that Mr. G. Heidebrecht of Tofield had requested the loan of the stacking frame from the school for the ensuing season to be held in Tofield. It was moved and carried that the request be granted.

There being no further business, it was moved at 3:30 p.m. that this meeting now adjourns to the call of the chair, or to the next regular meeting. CH.

Martin-Sitler rites at Mennonite Church

The Salem Mennonite church, near Tofield, was the setting for a lovely wedding on Friday, August 17th, at 2:30 p.m., when Audrey Lucille the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Sitler, of Camrose, and William John Martin, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Martin, of Dartmoor, were united in marriage. Bishop Harold Boettger performed the ceremony before the altar which was decorated with bouquets of white and yellow gladioli and mums.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked radiantly lovely in a floor-length gown of white satin, overlaid with organza. The fitted bodice featured a round neckline accentuated with lace to the shoulders and bell-point sleeves. Two roses and leaf-motif lace trimmed the upper back part of the skirt, which was joined over a hoop. She carried a cascade bouquet of red Sweetheart roses.

Before the vows were exchanged, the mixed chorus sang "O, God Our Help In All Ages" and "Jesus Loves Me". After the vows had been exchanged, the young couple knelt in prayer, and the Policeman wounded in Camrose shooting reported 'improving'

Paul William Stangowitz charged with attempted murder; to appear Sept. 10

Cpl. Verne Smith, in charge of the Camrose Detachment, RCMP, informed The Mercury Tuesday afternoon that Constable Gordon Shields, who was wounded in an early-morning shooting near the City Police Headquarters on Saturday, "is showing considerable improvement" in St. Mary's Hospital. Constable Shields was struck in the left side by a .22-calibre bullet as he was getting into his car in front of Hoveland's Funeral Home after coming out of the City Police office between 2:30 and 3:30 Saturday morning. Paul Stangowitz, 21, of Camrose, has been charged in connection with the shooting.

HEARS SHOT

Constable Shields had gone to the City Police office in connec- tion with another matter, and while there mentioned that he and Cst. Smith had stopped a car outside of Camrose in which several young people, one of them Stangowitz, had been drinking and that he had issued a summons at that time.

Shortly after Const Shields left the office, City Constable Jim Munro heard a muffled sound like a shot, and on looking out the win- dow saw Const Shields lying on the pavement beside his car. Both Const Munro and Cst. Duff rush- ed to the wounded policeman and the police car and he was rushed to hospital.

Meanwhile all available city policemen were called in, and after a search of about 20 minutes, Stangowitz was found in a car parked several blocks away. He was taken to the police station for questioning by Cpl. Franklin and Rev. Father Frank McDonald of St. Francis Xavier Roman Catholic Church. Stangowitz agreed to turn the rifle over to Const. Jack Bell of Camrose City Police.

APPEARED SATURDAY

At seven on Saturday the left be- spectacled Stangowitz appeared be- fore Magistrate J. L. Sparling to hear the reading of a charge of attempted murder. Cst. Sparling explained that since the charge might be heard by a judge and jury, he would conduct only a preliin- ary inquiry. Cpl. Franklin acting as prosecutor, asked that the case be remanded for 30 days in order that the accused might undergo a mental examination.

Dr. J. Ramsay Weir testified that he had examined the accused just prior to the hear- ing, but that the exam'nation was limited to the mental state of the accused. "At the time of examination", Dr. Weir stated, "the appeared ration- al". Asked if the accused's bal- ance of mind appeared disturbed, Dr. Weir replied that he couldn't answer that question, since it would be impossible in determine this without a psychiatric examina- tion. Dr. Weir was asked if he were prepared to make a further examination, and his answer was "no".

ASKED ADJOURNMENT

Prosecution then asked for an adjournment for the maximum time, indicating that preparations for the preliminary hearing would take about 30 days. Cst. Sparling ruled that the case would be ad- journed for eight days, to 10:00 a.m., Monday, Sept. 10th, at which time consideration would be given to the progress made in the in- vestigation. He ordered that the accused be remanded in custody in prison. The preliminary inquiry, he said, would be resumed "subj- ject to the readiness of the prose- cution".

Constable Shields underwent sur- very Saturday morning. The bul- let, it was discovered, had entered his body from the back on the left side, passing right through, and damaging the spleen which had to be removed. The line on which the bullet passed through Const. Shields' body led police to believe that he was, in all likelihood, bent over to unlock his car door when he was shot.

ONE SHOT

Police believe that only one shot was fired, since only one empty cartridge was found near the truck in which Stangowitz was found. A search at the scene of the crime Saturday morning failed to turn up the bullet.

Camrose City Police are in charge of the investigation.

Contest for gardeners

(Peter Nickel)

Due to the abundant rainfall this year, many larger than average vegetables have been grown by gardeners in this area. As a mat- ter of interest, the photographer is planning a contest to see who has the largest such vegetables, with a prize of a 10 x 12 inch photo- graph of the winning produce in each class.

Mrs. Ivan Mitchell has started the ball rolling, and her entries are the potato from here in this issue. If you have any vegetables which you think might be the largest in size or weight, please call Peter Nickel at 141 or 137. Records will be kept for next year, when the contest will be continued.

FALL POP

Two-year-old Karen Jacobson, pictured above, probably did not know much about the crowning of ath this, but she did know the meaning of the crowning of fall pop! The pop was given to kiddies, along with hot dogs and ice cream, at the Co-op opening on Aug. 30. Helping pretty Karen with her drink was Linda Turner.

Tofield Co-op opens for business

(Peter Nickel)

A crowd, estimated at 1,000 men, women and children, attended the official opening of the new Co-op shopping centre in Tofield last Thursday, most of whom took ad- vantage of the bargain specials offered. CYCW announcers were on hand for the afternoon, broad- casting the opening ceremonies and conducting several interviews among shoppers and kiddies as well as reporting other events of the opening. They distributed four hundred records of the number seven theme, mostly to the kid- dies.

Youngsters were lined up at the hot-dog stands for their free hot- dogs and drinks, while the older folks took advantage of the coffee and doughnuts at the Legion Hall.

The store was crowded through- out the day with persons inspect- ing the new premises, and those engaged in shopping. Hosts were brought in from other districts to serve the shoppers as quickly and conveniently as possible.

Officials taking part in the open- ing were President Harold Schultz, master of ceremonies for the day; attendant the welcoming address Swift, member on behalf of the Mayor of Tofield; George Arnett, speaking for Ed Watson on behalf of the Tofield Chamber of Com- merce; Frank Fane, M.P., and Earl Barker, M.L.A.; and Harold Weatherill on behalf of the County. Special guests were the Tofield and P.I.G. Hank Boles of Holden- ville informed the opening ceremo- nies. Guest speakers were R. T. Fox, Edmonton Branch Manag- er, Fry-Cooper Co-operatives Ltd. Mr. Swift, acting for the Mayor, cut the ribbon, letting the crowds pour in.

Over 1500 students in Tofield, Ryley, Holden schools

(Peter Nickel)

Some 1500 pupils returned to school in the Tofield, Ryley and Holden districts Wednesday morn- ing. To break it down, there are 620 pupils in Tofield, 495 in Ryley and 380 in Holden. The pupils will be taking a few days to get acquainted with their teachers be- fore settling down to serious studies.

The supervision of all schools in the three communities comes under the school committee of the County of Beaver.

Not all of the 1500 students, of course, will be returning to school because for many of them it will be the first time they have entered a classroom. Figures on the number of beginners this year were not available at time of writ- ing.

Bardo wins Power Line baseball cup

(Peter Nickel)

The Bardo baseball team won this years' Power Line League trophy, teams participating, being from Ryley, Round Hill, Tofield and Bardo. The semi-final games were played in Tofield between Ryley and Bardo on June 27. This was a sudden death game, result- ing in a score of 8 to 5 for Bardo, with Curt Nelson being the win- ning pitcher and Blain Lysne the losing hurler. Another semi-final game was played in Bardo on July 4, when Bardo defeated Tofield 5-1. Mervin Yoder was again the winning pitcher and Harold Pe- ersson toiled on the mound for the losing team.

The first of the finals were play- ed at Barns, Ryley taking the en- counter with a score of 4-2. Wes- ley Knudsen was the game Knudsen and losing pitcher was Yoder. Round Hill was left out of the picture when losing to Ryley by default. A tie game resulted be- tween Ryley and Bardo in the second of the finals, the score be- ing 5-5. The third game of the finals was held in Bardo the home team emerging victorious by a 7-5 count Yoder again being the winning pitcher.

The fourth and last game of the finals found Bardo at Ryley re- sulting in a 15-3 win for Bardo. Yoder once again was the winning pitcher. This was the windup for this year and Bardo took the cup home. Last year's winners were the Ryley team. Bardo last held the cup in 1951.

SCENE OF SHOOTING

Farmer killed as tractor overturns

Mrs. C. M. R-ds

BARDO, Sept. 3- Floyd Wide- man was killed Sunday morning when the tractor he was riding in flip in the canal upset, pinning him beneath. This is the second fatal accident in this area within a week.

'Belligerent Billy' amuses boys

(Mrs. Campbell)

This incident has just been told to us, and we trust that Billy won't mind sharing it with others.

Mrs. Hatt s Thazyk has her grandsons from B.C. visiting with her . . . she also keeps a goat, which is a great playmate for the boys. One day last week Mrs. Thazyk was carrying two pails of water from the well, when "Billy" decided he charge —knocking Mrs. Thazyk to the ground, spilling the water over her. This wasn't so funny, for she was badly bru ed. However, she ventured, "where were the boys?" . . . hiding, of course, and convulsed with laughter . . . Per- haps their turn will be next!

Safety time . . . again

Whether it's safety time again or still is a question that might be argued, but the fact remains, drivers should all think once again of the hazard of children crossing roads as they thread their ways to and from school.

The school crossings have been empty for the past couple of months, and it's easy to develop habits of carelessness. So it's not a bit too early to suggest building new, careful habits of keeping the mind on the job in hand, and watching what's going on.

There's only one time to prevent an accident, and that is beforehand. Afterwards, no amount of concern, and no amount of prevention can undo the harm which has been occasioned, whether it's loss of a life, life-long injury, or merely an endorsement of a driver's license.

Stay away, U-2

Russians issued growls of protest recently, when three American U-2 planes landed in Britain. They were working for the U.S. Strategic Air Command, their mission being to carry out a high altitude sampling program over the North Atlantic. Obviously, the sampling program would be to measure possible increases in radio-activity in the upper atmosphere.

Russia warned that "the planes should be kept far away from us", and a senior British labor party spokesman on aviation matters commented "The government has been wrong to agree to the U-2s being based in Britain. I think the timing of it is inappropriate."

The U-2, it will be recalled, was the amazing high altitude plane made famous by Francis Gary Powers, when he was shot down over Russia in May, 1961 and precipitated one of the worst crises of the cold war. Russia is still bitter about the brilliant reconnaissance flights these aircraft planes made over their territory, and hence the warning to stay away.

But today there may be some logic in asking "how far is up?" Or more properly, where do territorial rights end? Russia didn't hesitate in the slightest to send her astronauts circling around American territory more than a hundred times recently, and flying over the United States at the same time.

There's a difference, of course. The Russian astronauts were a hundred miles out in space. The U-2 was flying at 70,000 feet, or very roughly fourteen miles up. But we wonder if the principle isn't the same. The Russians objected to the U.S. planes cruising along and taking pictures over their territory. Who knows what sort of pictures the Russians were taking as they flew over American territory? Haven't the Americans the same right to demand cessation of flights over their country as the Russians exercise in objecting to overflights made by the U.S.?

The Soviets could easily end the problem by agreeing to international inspection of arms, of course, but until that happy day comes, it seems to be all a matter of perspective: or what are the limits of territorial right in the atmosphere.

It will be recalled that Russian fishermen insisted on territorial rights at sea remaining as close as possible to the coast. Maybe the United States could play at the same game in the air.

Man unchanged

World famed evangelist Billy Graham made a startling observation in a recent Wednesday night sermon in Fresno, California. The preacher declared "I am convinced that if Christ came back today, he would be crucified even quicker than he was 2,000 years ago."

It's fascinating to think on.

We're convinced Mr. Graham has seen a great deal more of the world and its attitude toward Christianity than we have, and we're convinced there is probably a great deal of truth in what he suggests. And we're convinced, too, he wasn't thinking about Russia, or Nazi Germany, or the dark continent when he made the statement. Most of his life and work is on this continent, and he probably was thinking about white people, on this side of the world, in towns and cities like our own, who live lives much the same as we do, and pursue much the same objects in life.

Oh, we'd prove Mr. Graham wrong, of course, if Jesus of Nazareth returned to earth. We'd all recognize Him, and immediately change our ways, just as we do when a police car is following us.

But how would we behave if Christ returned in the form of a trucker, or a computer operator, or a Fuller brush man? Would we react like the chief priest and the scribes?

It's interesting to think about.

(By John Stother)

"I think I'm losing my memory", "How long has this been going on?"

"How long has what been going on?"

W. C. Fields, the late great comedian, once said: "A woman drove me to drink, and I'll be he s beholden, I never wrote and thanked her".

A visitor from Texas was invited to dinner at an exclusive Washington club. During the meal he loudly proclaimed the magnificence of his home state and expanded on the extent of his personal holdings in oil, cattle and real estate: "I . . . and of course Ah have my own airstrip", he concluded.

The friend who had invited him nudged him and whispered: "Look, Joe, these are important men here. Most of them have their own airstrips".

"Is that so?" said the Texas bigheartedly, "...in their Living Rooms?"

Next Sunday the Reverend Dr. Jones will preach on "Skiing on the Sabbath", or "Are Our Young Women Backsliding on Their Weekends?"

History of Red Cross services

(By Eric Abell)

The greatest Humanitarian movement the world has ever known was founded by a Swiss banker, Henri Dunant, who as a child was deeply concerned with the welfare of others. Dunant, in order to further his business ends, travelled to Northern Italy in 1859 seeking an interview with the French Emperor Napoleon III Thus he became an eye witness to the horrors of the battle of Solferino, one of the fiercest battles of the century between the French and the Sardinians against the Austrians, which resulted in 40,000 dead and wounded.

Dunant was confronted by the sight of so much tragic suffering, organized immediate help in the nearby town of Castiglione. Churches, schools and even the market place were used as improvised hospitals. Straw was spread on the streets where the wounded lay. The townspeople used what little they had, tearing up their household linen for urgently needed bandages. Noble ladies, barons, and peasants worked side by side helping friend and foe alike. Learning from Dunant's example that in time of suffering humanity knows no barriers. They murmured as they tended the wounded. "Tutti fratelli" (all men are brothers).

Known as the "man in white", Dunant worked night and day, himself, bringing hope to the wounded and comfort to the dying. Having organized local help, he went to the French army to beg for the release of the captured Austrian doctor, bringing back with him medical supplies and food.

Dunant's burning desire to relieve suffering in time of war inspired him to write "A memory of Solferino", in which his vision of the Red Cross took shape. While he travelled through Europe soliciting support, his Swiss friends formed a "Committee of Five" to help him. But more was needed, so Dunant set out to win the heads of Europe's well-organized armies to the cause. He begged for their assistance in the formation of International Humanitarian Law to:

1. The wounded and sick of the Armed Forces in the field;
2. The wounded, sick and shipwrecked members of the Armed Forces at sea;
3. Prisoners of war;
4. Civilian persons in the time of war.

Tofield Community League discusses hall rental

(Peter Nickel)

Tofield Community League members held their first meeting of the season last Tuesday, with several matters on the agenda.

Main topic for discussion was whether to allow outside orchestras to rent the hall for dances to be held after the show on Friday nights. Several problems and difficulties were raised, and it was decided to table the matter till the next meeting, pending further investigation.

Mayor Freebury offered a suggestion that possibilities for more recreation in Tofield be looked into, and that a letter be sent to Edmonton to contact a representative to come to Edmonton, and invite him to a special meeting when the matter would be discussed.

Originally intended for July 2nd, it was decided to raffle the $100 bill on September 15th, during the dance at the Community Hall. Plans for a turkey bingo in October were also discussed.

Peter's Patter

After sounding off on the condition of Tofield's streets last week, I would like to comment this week about the fine community spirit existing in Tofield. I am referring to the co-operation given by other businesses towards the promotion of the new Co-op store. I have been told by many people here and from distant communities that it is very seldom such a large percentage of the local businesses, many of them competitors, will take part in such a promotion.

This truly shows the fine community spirit in our town, and those who took part in the promotion are highly respected not only by our own community, but by others near and far.

So, at this time, I would like to express my feelings toward the businessmen of Tofield and say that we have an exceptionally fine group of businessmen who are doing a great job of not only promoting their own enterprises, but the town itself. It is instances like this that give us a feeling of pride to be living in such a fine town, and it is pride that makes us grow.

MacDuff Ottawa report

Light-hearted soul search

OTTAWA The hundred or so Conservative M.P.'s who should have been doing some soul searching in their post-election caucus this week emerged surprisingly light hearted. Some of them were even a little light headed successful as members are reported to be persuaded by Elsie Patterson that it is as good as it ever was and always has been. They could even think with a good chance on the floor of the House of Commons were now the official Opposition party.

There was also a distinct impression that the Conservatives had not lost any seats in the election. They are convinced the Liberals got from 265 to 116 as an actual result of a swing to the Conservatives but that it made an extra dent in the Tory ranks. The Prime Minister feels justified in his first appearance on public platforms since with having brought us the time dissolved it as the people who could tell why we took a sickening pot in there."

The Party's national director Allister Grosart, had an explanation and one that at least makes some sense if it is viewed in the light of the pollster estimates. After the early pre-campaign figures which showed the Liberals well in advance, he argues the government shock was more or steadily as the campaign co-ed. Then came the forced dissolution and hence of the Canadian dollar at the beginning of May, a move that had been planned for after June 18. That was a temporary setback but as the campaign progressed it was more than made up again in Conservative popularity. From all this he reaches the conclusion that if the campaign had lasted another two weeks the government would have been returned with a comfortable majority. It was just had luck.

NOT GOOD FOR CANADA

No responsible leader in the House of Commons wants the government defeated this fall. Mr. Pearson in true to on the issues of a dilemma. In the interests of party prestige he will not dodge non-confidence motions and gain the appearance of keeping their Conservatives in office. On other hand he knows better than the Prime Minister himself the possible consequences of defeat. The dilemma has been lessened considerably, however, with the arrival in Ottawa last week of the New Democratic Party leader T. C. Douglas with his assurance of government support. Some of the Conservatives are talking about ready to vote even for a fourth election in two years rather than a straight defeat but the unexpected lack of enthusiasm for the NDP at the polls.

Political considerations aside a government defeat and uncertainty of an election campaign in the late fall could bring the May 10 market crash all over again. In spite of the improvement in stock prices since the end of June a second slide of depressed American capital for investment could send the market tumbling. Canadian savings and capital also will be insufficient to offset foreign interest and dividend payments. In spite of official denials the government is now facing at this time probably on the eve of a recession seems inevitable. If so it is to these normal business transactions these should develop an atmosphere of confidence in Canadian investment and the Canadian dollar. Which these sense members have had faced before and as a result have advice and suggestions are being taken heed.

Perhaps a few are familiar with the name of the late older members. For instance Sunday Sundquist, who died unexpectedly, Mr. Casselle by himself can upset no apple cart.

CAPITAL HILL CAPSULE

The Treasury Board has finished all Lou Stanbury of the Government's estimates and is ready to start preparing its revised estimates. The total cut-back is in the neighborhood of $100 million. If anything more is added it will be a surprise. Whole shebang is still short of the $200 million billion cut-back promised by Prime Minister. A quite an achievement at this stage of the fiscal year when a good portion of the money has already been spent.

By George!

The annual gathering of Alberta weeklies to swap stories, secrets and publishers is little more than a week away. This is an event which I foresee every weekly publisher in Canada will envy and many already likely their boards of directors will insist upon attending. One of the most interesting and educational features of our annual convention for me, at least, is the opportunity it affords to meet many of those who are no longer with us but still remembered as they were. Many of these have been with newspapers in this province for over 50 years, and to listen to them recall incidences like these. There is seldom a time during any of the convention business sessions or informal "bull" that a problem arises which these senior members have not faced before and as a result have advice and suggestions are being taken heed. . . . and well-

Perhaps a few are familiar with the name of the late older members. For instance there is H G Thannell, publisher of The Viking News, and Tom Halliwell, former editor of The Macleod Gazette and The Coleman Journal in southern Alberta. Then there is Mr Barton, who has operated The Cardston News for longer than many years, and Len Verstait, who a few years ago turned his Vulcan Advocate over to his sons.

All this brings to mind a story about a crusty old newspaperman whose pet hate was editors who don't bother to check handy reference manuals, but instead write last-minute queries to correspondents in Ottawa who may be thousands of miles away. Some years ago he was covering a Florida speedboat race in which Car Wood was participating. He had compiled his story and sent it to his newspaper, but late that night he received a telegram from his publisher which read:

"Please add Car Wood."

The reporter, disgusted with his lazy editor, wired back: "Old Car Wood fine. How you?"

Shower honors bride-elect Carol Wiens

Miss Carol Wiens, bride-elect was honored at a miscellaneous shower recently at the United Church kitchen when about 40 ladies gathered to extend best wishes and present gifts to Miss Wiens.

Miss Wiens was seated at the table with a "shining veil," which the guests filled with good wishes. Miss Irene Johnson and Karen Albrecht conducted several contests and Miss Geraldine Kozak presented Carol with some very lovely gifts from all, wishing her much happiness in the future.

Miss Louise Wiens helped her sister unwrap and display her gifts. Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Jack Scambler, Mrs. Tom Armecho and Mrs. Bob Rahm, who served a delicious lunch.

REXALL'S $3,000,000 ANSWER

Much has been said lately about Canada's poor economic health. George McFadzean of Tofield Drug and the Rexall Drug Company think there has been too much talk and too little action. Their answer and their action is Operation Challenge. Rexall's Operation challenge is a spur of promotion on Canadian made products, to help give the national economy a boost. Hundreds of trucks similar to that shown above, are now carrying a special cargo of over $3,000,000 worth of Rexall health and beauty aids to independent Rexall Drug Stores across Canada. Mr. McFadzean and Rexall believe that if other retailers and manufacturers were to team up in a similar way, the Canadian economy would be soon headed for a new level of prosperity.

Drumbeat . . . Heartbeat

Just listen—listen to the beating of our drum. Hear it. We beat it on every page and we've been beating it since the beginning.

What drum? We're beating Canada's drum. Some people apologize when they say it and others blush, but we'll shout from the rooftops that we're Canadian and we're hysterically excited about it.

We hope you're with us too. Small business is Canada and Canadians. Small business is Canada's mainspring. Small business is Canada's works. Small business is Canada's guts.

There's a growing tendency by some people to negate or to reduce the importance of anything and everything Canadian. If it's British it's good. If it's American it's maybe even better. And thank God the engineering brilliance of the Germans, and the various national excellences from every corner of the globe.

But, what if it is Canadian? To increasing numbers the reaction is: so what?

We condemn that attitude. We favour a healthy nationalism. There's a difference between the nationalism of nineteenth century Europe and the kind we indulge.

We hate nobody. Our sort of nationalism has nothing to do with militarism, colonialism or the love of this country to the detriment of all others.

No. Our nationalism is pride in ourselves, in our land and as a people. The likes of which has not been seen in this country since the day of Confederation.

It's a healthy pride that's all but absent and we want to bring it back.

—The Independent Businessman

Alderman Mrs. Wilson on wrong track

Mrs. Wilson of Edmonton is on the wrong track in her suggestion that civic elections should not be held every year.

It may not seem too important in Camrose what decision is taken in Edmonton, or Calgary, where the matter of elections once every two or three years is being considered. But the pattern established there is very likely to be the pattern here, too.

Mrs. Wilson objects to the waste of money, and the politicking that goes on each year for several weeks before elections, as well as to the voters' lack of interest in non-mayoralty years. But isn't this last point condemning us as electors, rather than condemning the system? We have never heard any suggestion to abolish the elections between presidential campaigns in the United States even though they too, draw less interest as well. It seems to us that the principle of democracy is the slow treadmill which follows elections. Each year we see taxes gradually appearing at the civic table rather than the sudden shock which would surely follow if all members of council were to be elected at the same time. It is not fair to argue that sudden swings are the form in the provincial and federal governments for here the civil service carries on the day to day part of the operation and elected officials do decide what is to be done.

In other words so that instead of revolution, should be the aim in a democracy.

Mrs. Wilson decries the politicking, and the play for the voter's attention, but is this such a bad thing? Might we not have better government consistently if the elected representatives had their eye on the voter more of the time? Insofar as the charge of wasteful extravagance is concerned, there is no doubt but what annual elections cost more than if they were spaced two or three years apart though we doubt if the charge is as serious as Mrs Wilson makes it. Even so, this is no more of the known and accepted penalties, if that is the word, of democracy. No one ever charged the democratic form of government with being a model of efficiency or of economy.

For our part however, if it ever became a choice between democracy and efficient executive administration, we'll take all the democracy we can get, every time.

...f in a season all bus drivers have been warned by the school board officials that they are to have a note from the children who intend to miss school as part of the bus area, other than that at home. This note MUST be signed by the parent or responsible guardian and must explain why the child is to get off the bus. When the bus driver receives these notes he is then relieved of all responsibility for this pupil after he or she has been left at the said point. If the child is not produced a note by the bus driver and such person for whom he must be responsible to the principal who will look into the matter and take necessary action.

Now as a bus driver myself, on behalf of all the other bus drivers, I ask for your co-operation in this matter.

HIDDEN BEAUTY

This beautiful flowered driveway belonging to Mrs. Bodner of Ebents should be seen by anyone having the opportunity to do so. Rarely does one spend as much time and have as great pride in flower arrangements as does Mrs. Bodner. The driveway is alongside the highway but a row of trees hides the beauty from travellers passing by. Among these flowers are many varieties of blooms in all colors and very neatly arranged. Mrs. Bodner remarked that there is a great deal of work involved in having a display of this kind, as all the roots and bulbs must be dug up and brought inside for the winter. Her work is very rewarding, however, and she is delighted with compliments and comments she receives from persons seeing the flowers.

Stitch in time

The new vocational high school at Camrose may open its doors just in time for the rural youth of our area, if the statement made last week by the president of the southern Alberta branch of the university is accurate Speaking to the convention of Alberta weekly newspapers, Dr Malcolm Taylor declared it will be the young people of rural Alberta who, in this province, bear the heaviest brunt of unemployment in the future

In a period when the importance of training or skill is being stressed as it never has been before, it is the rural youth who are continuing to drop out of school with less training and education than their city cousin. In a period which will see less and less labor needed on the farm, requiring between 85 and 90 per cent of farm youth to seek employment in other areas, there is need for more and more training before boys and girls leave the classroom Even those returning to the farm will need more skills in more fields than has ever been the case, he declared

If Dr Taylor's forecast is accurate, and he has much support those days, then every parent in the Camrose area should welcome the new vocational and academic high school which in even now being built here Not just for the city youth, the school will offer many courses useful to the farmer, to the logger, to the industrial worker, to name only a few. Typewriting will place an emphasis not possible which it has never done before, and seems to turn out graduates with the equivalent of a year's training in a business college, or the Civil Service Applicants for either job will find they have acquired merely a modicum of training with a typewriter, but no knowledge of office practice, or who can name the parts of an engine, but wouldn't know how to repair one

In short, the aim is to turn out young people capable of accepting, and holding, a job.

Naturally, it can't and won't train everyone for employment . . . some must continue to further schooling for specialized training. But the school may be opening just in time to help alleviate the burden of unemployment due to lack of any training which was so deplored by Dr. Taylor

It behooves both parents and pupils to take a long, serious look at this alternative to the strictly university entrance senior matriculation, geared for not more than one-third of all pupils anyway.

Poor planning

Poor planning or construction seems to be evident on the new four lane highway from Red Deer north, which has been in the process of construction for the past couple of years. South of Red Deer, for example, where the road has recently been linked to the old road with an interesting overpass, there are apparently no signs to warn travellers of the amazingly rough road, and they are left to find out the hard way. When you consider the diligence with which crews place the red markers on other areas, or "Warning, Bumpy" signs, it seems amazing a few couldn't have been found for this spot. For that matter, there aren't very many indicators of any kind, and the driver has to feel his way through.

Again, Highway 12 west of Lacombe has been torn up for two full summers now, even though it leads to the busiest provincial park in the province. The road has been so rough for most of this time that 15 miles per hour was the limit, and little need was found for more than one sign reducing speed to 25 m.p.h. Surely with heavy construction machinery all over the area, and with heavy traffic using the road all the way up to the new oilfields in Rimbey, it should not be necessary to leave the road in frightful condition for this period

We already know but what the condition contributed largely to the tragic collision which took place there this summer?

Professional jealousies

It's time the professional groups in the country rose above their individual differences, and professional jealousies, and combined their efforts on behalf of the public generally. Every one reason which can only be ascribed to differences such as these there is even now to be one bank operating in Alberta

Even though a big start was made in the province a few years ago the movement fell flat, and nothing precisely has been accomplished yet Warmly endorsed by the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, whose recent call for funds above quotas in the five tank exercises a program when would use the eyes of the devil for immediate transplant to living persons, thereby restoring them to sight

There is nothing new in the process, as I understand it, as many times Medical men have advised against any attempt to transplant eyes, because of the possibility that they would be rejected in the new body. Yet three years at least after the first attempt was made in Alberta, it has failed to get off the ground, because of red tape practices at the professional level.

It's time to stop. And it's not fair to my table

(By John Stobbart)

A newsman was having a discussion with his 8-year-old son over part "As I understand it", said he, "the basic idea of communism is to divide everything with your neighbor"

"Not quite", replied the Russian. "The basic idea of communism is to make your neighbor divide everything with you"

Home cooking: that's what a man misses when his wife isn't.

A drunk staggered to the hotel desk late at night and demanded another room "That you'll get the best room in the hotel sir", stated the desk clerk.

"I don't care", was the answer "I want another room and I want it quick"

The clerk turned to Pat "Is there a room available in the hotel" he asked in a low voice "Sure, why you don't like Suite 202?" asked the puzzled clerk

"Sure", replied the gent, "the darned thing's on fire!"

By George!

Having heard just a little of the training routine records of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in an interview in the space of the next few days they are likely to learn the variety of duties and myriad lines which they perform in the course of their work. ... [illegible] ... the first thing one ... [illegible] ... the summer ... [illegible] ... the age we didn't have anything else to ... [illegible] ... fresh peaches. I took my mother and ... [illegible] ... and hadn't lived over the hills to get some ... [illegible] ... I knew I'd be treasured for ... [illegible] ... the whole crew for supper. Finding a source ... [illegible] ... peaches wasn't easy, but I managed to ... [illegible] ... Everyone was very glad to see me ... [illegible] ... I was home a week and quietly ... [illegible] ... I was nearly ready to go back to the south ... [illegible] ... I'd decided to stay ... [illegible] ... I can say the decision was the right one for me. I was where the right kind of action I would show ... [illegible] ... I was just on the edge ... [illegible] ... At that time ... [illegible] ... My plan was ... Bardo Church scene of Ramstad-Johnson rites

(Mrs. C. M. Rude)

BARDO, Sept. 10th — Baskets of mixed gladiola graced the front of Bardo Lutheran church at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon of September 1, when Miss Bertha Lorraine, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Johnson of Tofield, became the bride of Mr. Stanley Roger Ramstad, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Ole Ramstad of Tofield. The Rev. O. Dan officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the Wedding March. She was radiantly lovely in a floor-length gown of white silk organza over rayon taffeta and net fashioned with fitted bodice and full skirt, trimmed with appliqued lace. The bride's lace-edged headpiece veil was held in place by a crown of sequins. She carried a white Bible with a prayer scribed and bright red carnations centered with white pompons.

Miss Patricia Severtson was the bridesmaid. She wore a floor-length gown of pink organza over taffeta and lace, with matching headpiece and pink carnations. Miss Linda Johnson, cousin of the bride, who was flower girl, wore a floor-length dress of pink organza and lace, with matching headpiece and carried a basket of pink carnations.

Mr. Ramstad had Mr. Allan Banks as his best man. Ushers were Mr. Larry Ramstad, brother of the groom, and Mr. Allan Banks, cousin of the bride.

As the couple knelt at the altar, Mr. Arthur Frisch sang "A Wedding Prayer" and during the signing of the register he sang "The Perfect Love". Miss Patricia Severtson was the organist.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Johnson chose an ice-blue brocaded sheath dress with green and white accessories. Her corsage was of yellow sweetheart roses. Mother of the groom wore a 2-piece brocade dress, with beige and white accessories, and yellow roses en corsage.

Following the ceremony, a reception for 120 guests was held in the Tofield United Church parlors. The bridal table was centered with a 3-tiered wedding cake, baked by the bride's mother and beautifully decorated by Mrs. Norman Saulnier. Rev. O. Dan proposed the toast to the bride, to which the groom ably responded.

For the honeymoon trip to Banff and Jasper, the bride changed to a black and white tweed sheath dress with white hat and gloves and black patent leather purse and shoes. She wore a corsage of red Sweetheart roses.

The newlyweds are both employed in Camrose and upon their return will reside at 6911 — 38 St., Camrose.

You can't buy friendship

Says Tolstoy, "Money is a new form of slavery, and distinguishable from the old simply by the fact that it is impersonal —that there is no human relation between master and slave."

Recently Canada borrowed some money from the United States to help bolster the Canadian foreign exchange reserves, and the price of this money is now beginning to reveal itself. As pointed out recently by The Financial Post, borrowing money from the U.S. has apparently put Canada into the class of other "foreign aid" recipients and has made Canadians targets for abuse for some Americans who think a U.S. loan means the borrower must slavishly follow the whims of the U.S. Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon even went so far as to express his regrets in lending Canada "a thin nickel" because Canadians are not anxious to cut back lumber exports to the U.S. Other congressmen, according to The Post, are saying the same thing and some U.S. government officials seem to feel somewhat similarly.

It appears to be the old story of lending money and losing friends, although we have every doubt that this international situation will amount to anything serious. The wealthy Americans simply must learn that they cannot buy friendship, and that it is not always the man who pays the piper that calls the tune. Canadians, on the other hand, must learn that there are bound to be hidden strings attached to borrowed money.

Golden touch

It was old King Midas who is fabled to have possessed the golden touch, so that whatever he touched, even including his daughter, turned to 24 karat gold.

Today's counterpart of King Midas would seem to be the finance companies. Over last weekend, we received in the mail an invitation to invest all our surplus cash teh, he has a new finance organization, which hoped to organize something less than a quarter of million dollars. Estimating its annual income on the basis that all funds would be employed all the time, the firm's prospectus suggested it would earn in discounts and fees fully 56% of the capital out. There were a few expenses to charge up, of course, and by the time income tax had been estimated, the net profit was down a bit, to the point where it was only earning slightly less than 30% net profit.

The moral seems simple. King Midas with his monopoly seems to have made 100% capital gain, and since he was king it wouldn't be subject to income tax. For ordinary mortals, it's only necessary to establish your own finance company.

Or maybe to avoid paying into one.

Hitch hickers

Many have had occasion during the year to see and sometimes pick up hitchhikers. Whether this is a good practice or not can be debated from several standpoints. The annoying thing that most motorists find is that whether they are crowded or not, they wonder if they should be picking them up. An article in the Digest some years ago, took an almost emphatic stand, that because of what happened it is not a good practice. Be that as it may, hitchhikers invariably are still walking on the same side as the traffic and at night this is a dangerous practice that affects both the driver and the hitchhiker. It is almost impossible even at night speeds when oncoming lights are facing you to see a person at the edge of the road any great distance ahead. This practice of walking on the dege of the road puts both in a precarious condition and is one of the faults of some of the many road accidents. One must drive carefully but hazards can make good driving a strain. —Bashaw Star.

If wheat fails west turn to canary seed

The down-Easters have a lot to learn about their Canadian West. Wheat and the West are synonymous. One might say that all that is ever heard in Eastern Canada about the West is that it grows wheat and the Dominion government pays the wheat farmers a subsidy.

Stand by for a surprise! New crops are being introduced to the West. Farmers are growing cash crops of mustard and canary seed. Time was when canary seed came from foreign countries. Now the Canadian canary population has reached the point where it is profitable to grow domestic supplies. We do live and learn, don't we?

What will they think of next?

Oscar Olsen of Bawlf, is the possessor of an automobile recycle-pedia, printed in 1922, which I had the pleasure of thumbing through last week. This book contains over 1200 pages, and covers not only the parts of every kind of automobile on the road in those days (and believe me, there were lots of them) but also the maintenance of all models. Also included is a section on "useful accessories", and this I found most interesting. Here are a few of the accessories which were available at that time:

Windshield Cleaners . . . these were made in a number of different forms. An accompanying diagram showed a half-circle cleaner "which is fitted to the windshield by drilling the glass. It will instantly remove rain or snow in this half circle." This was a hand-powered wiper, of course, but there was a more deluxe "automatic" type which was operated by "the suction from the inlet manifold. When once turned on, the cleaner swings constantly, and removes the rain or snow until stopped."

Mirrorscope . . . this was nothing more than a rear-view mirror for mounting on the front fender, to "enable one to see the cars in the rear."

Other accessories included a compression whistle, a clock which would withstand the vibrations of the moving car as well as extreme temperatures, front or rear bumpers. The author noted that "bumpers . . . will often save the lamps, fenders, body and radiator" and added that "insurance rates are reduced in most policies where cars are equipped with front and rear bumpers."

And finally, an item which no car owner could afford to be without . . . a "petrometer", better known today as a gas gauge. This particular gauge "can be placed on the dash and will indicate the amount of gasoline in the tank in the rear of the car . . ."

This book also covered the gear which one might take with him when going on an extended automobile trip and this will be reviewed next week.

(By John Stobbe)

George Bernard Shaw was having lunch in a London restaurant one day, when an orchestra struck up a particularly noisy tune. Without any intermission, it followed with another. Shaw called the head waiter and asked:

"Does the orchestra play anything on request?"

"Yes, sir" the man replied "is there something you would like them to play?"

"Three ha'," said Shaw. "Ask them to play downstairs until I have finished eating."

The couple were spending the evening in the quiet of their own home. The children were low, the fireplace was a mass of glowing coals and soft strains of "Auld Lang Syne" came from the radio. The wife was in a restful mood and lost in romantic thought when the head of the house broke the spell: "Wonder why a windshield rubbed with a raw potato doesn't freeze?"

Mother to five-year-old child who has had a substitute teacher in kindergarten: "How did you like your new teacher?"

"Oh, she's much smarter than Miss Jones. When she sang, she played the piano with only one finger, and Miss Jones has to use two hands when she plays".

Hansen-Osness wed at Kingman Lutheran

(Mrs. J. A. Anderson)

KINGMAN, Sept. 10.—The Salem Lutheran Church at Kingman was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, Aug. 18th, when Verneal Carol, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Torkel Osness, became the bride of Raymond Hansen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hansen of Edmonton. Pastor E. Roe performed the double-ring ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiantly lovely in a floor-length gown of silk organza over net and taffeta. The dress which was slightly an train, featured a round neckline and long lily-point sleeves. The bride's fingertiered veil was held in place with a sparkling coronet, and she carried a semi-cascade bouquet of roses.

The bride was attended by her sister, Delores, as matron of honor. Joanne Hansen and Louise Olson as bridesmaids, and Jewell Hansen as flower-girl. They were identical dresses of blue organza over cotton, with matching headpieces. Craig Hansen, ring-bearer, wore a navy sailor suit.

The groom was attended by Sven Hansen and Eddie Hansen, brother of the groom, and David Osness, brother of the bride. Ushers were Ordean Melsness and Lyle Isratnat.

Jim Holton of Edmonton, soloist, sang the "Song of Ruth" before the ceremony, and the "Wedding Prayer" while the couple knelt at the altar.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Osness chose a turquoise linen sheath dress and hat, and pink tea roses en corsage. The groom's mother chose a blue silk dress, and a corsage of yellow roses.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the Kingman Hall for 180 guests. The three-tiered wedding cake was baked by the bride's mother and beautifully decorated by Mrs. C. Bretzel. Mr. Eddie Hansen, brother of the groom, was master of ceremonies, and Mr. Roy Kinner, uncle of the bride, proposed the toast to the bride, to which the groom ably responded.

The bride's gold, away outfit was a mone-green suit with light brown accessories, and her corsage was of red roses. Following a honeymoon trip to Vancouver, Seattle and Salem, Oregon, the young couple will reside in Edmonton.

Peter's Potter

This week brings us around to Junior Red Cross Week, when 76,000 strong, members from Alberta will be recognized for their voluntary time and effort spent through participation in classroom projects to promote good health, good citizenship and international friendship with classmates in other lands.

Through classroom efforts these youths help hundreds of children in other lands to have the opportunity to attend school.

Whenever a fire disaster occurs in Alberta or a major disaster strikes anywhere in the world, Junior Red Cross health kits are mailed to the stricken area. Children's Christmas parcels made by Red Cross youth members, contain the necessary items for good health care and also include a small gift item to friendly recipients from the young Alberta donors.

In many Alberta communities JRC members give hours of voluntary service to brighten the days of hospital patients and shut-ins; they assist their senior society in the recruitment and registration of donors at blood donor clinics; help with distribution of campaign and water safety materials; entertain veterans and residents of Senior Citizen homes; help raise thousands of dollars to provide medical treatment for handicapped children in this province; undertake special projects such as providing reading material, toys and games for children and hospital patients in Canada's northland, and stand ready to volunteer their time and talent wherever and whenever they can be of service to their community.

In 1961, Alberta Junior Red Cross members raised close to $25,000 for assistance to needy children at home and overseas, sent 32 chests of clothing and bedding and at least 25 boxes of their classmates in Canada's north and nearby half of games, books and other reading material to Indian and Eskimo children in Canada's north. In this province, members last year provided medical assistance for 27 children in need of special treatment.

NEW FEED SERVICE FOR BEAVER COUNTY

The high concentration of livestock numbers on farms in the County was the determining factor in Jim Christensen selecting this district as the location for his Mobile Feed Service. Mr. Christensen indicated that he had taken a close look at a number of areas in the province and there settled for this district as it offered the greatest potential inasmuch as there was a wide variety of livestock in the district. Few districts he said had such substantial numbers of hogs, dairy and beef feeding enterprises. Jim, who has been in the feed business all his life, said he felt, would provide year round work for his unit which is essential for successful operation.

Mr. Christensen a married man, operates, excepting some, when necessary, without his background and his reason for going into the feed business was stated that he was raised on a farm near Mt. Lina district of Northern Alberta, and while there he had been a long-time member of the Mt. Lina Beef Club, through which he learned the value of balanced feeding. Following graduation from high school he attended the Vermilion School of Agriculture and upon graduation he farmed with his father until early this summer when he decided to embark on the Mobile Feed business.

Asked why he chose the Mobile Feed business, he said that during the past year he had investigated a number of business opportunities and his prime reason was that the feed manufacturing business is the fastest-growing sector of the agricultural industry. In looking into various phases of the feed industry he soon found that a Mobile Feed Service offered the type of service which would most appeal to farmers because it eliminated completely the time-consuming factor of labor or machinery as required by the farmer. A very important factor in this area is farmers were looking for means to reduce the labor and capital requirements.

Questioned further on his past loss a Mobile Mill operated and what it could do Mr Christensen stated that the Mobile Mill was a complete feed mill mounted on a truck and would travel from farm to farm. The mill consists of a hammer-mill, a grain-mixer, steam and batching, a roller mill for rolling of grain for cattle feeds, a mixer and molasses blend attachment. The mill is also equipped with its loading and unloading devices which eliminates any necessity for manual handling of grain. Grain is sucked into the mill from the grain bin ground mixed and then blown into the farmer's self-feeders or feed bins.

Mr. Christensen has established his headquarters at the Ryley Farm Equipment Garage in Ryley and will be prepared to serve customers anywhere in the County.

Regular meeting of county council held on Sept. 13th

The regular meeting of the County of Beaver No. 9 Council was held on Thursday, Sept. 13th. Present were the chairman, Cr. F. M Magnuson Crs W A Dorn A. L. Gibson, W. D. Johnston, W Kropielnicki J H Ruddick and H. Weatherill

BUSINESS ARISING FROM MINUTES

In connection with the request that the Railway Crossing east of N E. 7-48-15-W4th be opened, dealt with by resolution 411 at the August meeting, the secretary-treasurer referred to the meeting a letter from the Canadian National Railways. The letter indicated that before the County would undertake to grade the road allowance to the railway crossing from the intersection with the east and west road one mile north, the Railway Company could not see its way to open the crossing.

It was moved that the letter be received and filed and that Mr C. J. Ostberg be advised of the decision of the CNR Cd.

The secretary-treasurer informed the Council that the information as to yield of wheat per acre by townships in the County had been forwarded to the Prairie Farm Assistance in Regina, with a copy in the Department of Municipal Affairs on Sept. 10th.

In connection with the County's request for permission to erect certain signs on Highways 14 and 26 dealt with by resolution 4-6 the secretary-treasurer referred to the Council a letter from the District Engineer stating that permission could not be granted Although the Council was somewhat disappointed in the ruling, it was resolved that nothing further could be accomplished, and it was moved and carried that the information be received and filed.

CORRESPONDENCE

It was moved and carried that letter from Tofield Rural Fire Protection Association thanking the Council for the grant of $2,000 be received and filed

A letter from R. W. Verrette of Ryley, requesting that signs prohibiting discharging of fire arms, on meetings, the area around Park The letter indicated that before them the Council passed some 72-calibre rifles had been fired indiscriminately, thus endangering visitors to the park.

Moved that the letter be received and filed, and that the posting of suitable signs be investigated. Cd.

A letter from Dr. Allen Klein of Viking, representing the Viking Chamber of Commerce regarding a small parcel of land on Lake Thomas, was referred to the Council. The letter indicated that this parcel of land was a popular picnic area where families from Town of Viking as well as from the surrounding County area came for picnicking and swimming The Town of Viking felt that some 10 acres of land should be obtained at this point to be converted into a recreational area and the letter was a request from the Chamber of Commerce for financial assistance in purchasing this piece of land. The letter indicated that, if the land was purchased and put under the jurisdiction of some local Government, the Department of Highways possibly would grant a campsite building. Cr. Ruddick informed the Council that Mayor Selmar Huber of Viking intended to interview the Council on the same subject.

It was moved and carried that action on the letter from Dr. Klein be deferred until Mayor Huber appears before the Council.

Letter from Mrs. Peter Kendrick requesting improvement of the road allowance S.E. 13-49-15 was read passing S.E. 13-49-15 was referred to Council Cr Magnuson who had received a copy of the letter, stated that he had investigated the situation and that, in his opinion, the condition of the road was not too bad, and he stated that he was unable to do anything

Another black mark

It will be interesting to see how other nations of the world — particularly those of the Communist bloc — will use the present race riots in the United States for propaganda ammunition. Living in a country which teaches and practices democracy, Americans in the small town of Oxford, Mississippi, are setting a very poor example for the rest of the world in refusing admittance of Negro student James H. Meredith to the University of Mississippi. What an effect this could have on the countries of Africa, many of which are uncertain as to which countries are her friends! How shameful that the people of Oxford have carried racial prejudice to extremes which have forced their federal government to send armed forces into the town! Truly, it is another black mark for the United States in the eyes of the world.

An acquaintance of ours who returned recently from a tour of Europe told us that the people of Europe seem to be very anti-American. The opinion of many Europeans is that the U.S. . . . and not Russia will start the next war, and probably accidentally. The reason? Because the Americans are emotional, far too dramatic, and will panic easily.

This week's demonstrations at Oxford, Mississippi, and similar actions by the people of Little Rock, Arkansas, in 1957, would tend to bear out this observation by Europeans.

Certainly, Canada, too, has its problems with the Sons of Freedom Doukhobors in British Columbia. Even now the marching Freedomites are approaching the federal prison at Agassiz to be near sixty-three imprisoned Sons, but it will come as a surprise to most Canadians if there is any rioting or bloodshed in connection with the Sons' trek. The Canadian male, in the eyes of certain Americans may be "tedious, tepid and sublimely dull," but no wonder! these are entirely unwanted characteristics.

By George!

Last week we mentioned a book on 1922 automobiles which is owned by Mr. Ed Gallagher of Tofield and was loaned to me by his son, Gordon, of Edmonton.

Among the many facets of motoring covered in the automobile encyclopedia is a list of items one should take when going on a transcontinental tour. The lists are made up under the headings Car Equipment, Passengers' Equipment, Food, and Personal Equipment. It also gives instructions on how to cook food, and under Kitchen Equipment utensils are described in detail, right down to the exact measurement of each frying pan or kettle.

The comprehensive list of Personal Equipment must have left nothing to be desired, for it includes a total of 48 items. The author stated that this was "the minimum for a long trip, and, of course, may be added to according to the tastes and ideas of the individual, but more is entirely unnecessary and should be avoided. If possible", 8 one of the items listed are:

1 pair tan shoes, light-weight (don't wear new shoes); 1 pair canvas puttees, light-weight (don't wear leather); 2 pairs khaki riding breeches, laced below the knee (don't wear corduroy); 3 pairs light wool drawers and light-weight shirts to match; 3 light-weight khaki coat; to wear in the car; 1 pair light-weight gauntlets for driving; 1 khaki hat with narrow brim cord, "ventilating holes on each side"; 2 blue or white bandana handkerchiefs. Tie up ends to your neck and don't wear loose ties or pictures of cowboys; 1 pair light-weight moccasins, for wear around camp and to sleep in; 1 Ingersoll watch with fob; 1 pair yellow goggles (don't forget these); 1 pair white goggles; 1 pair mosquito netting (don't forget these as hangnails are a great source of trouble on long trips); 1 package bachelor buttons; 1 silk sleeping cap, to pull down over ears. Other items on the list were more personal items such as razor, tooth brush, leather belt and so on.

Aren't we fortunate in this day and age? Two or three hours of packing and preparation, and we're ready for a month-long trip, with plenty of room left over in the car for passengers!

Cause to pause . . .

(By John Mohler)

To wives were discussing their spouses: "My husband doesn't show the slightest interest or concern in what I do," remarked one. "All he ever cares about is whatever it is he does in that place, wherever it is, that he writes."

Hotel walls are a problem. They are thick when you're trying to listen and thin when you're trying to sleep.

A guest at a dude ranch was fascinated watching a cowboy roll a cigarette. "It's a wonderful", he marveled, "thing that you can can do that with one hand."

"Taint nothin'," said the cowboy. "Gettin' the filter in is the hard part."

My "shrewd" nephew was offered a job at seventy-five dollars a week but brid out for two hundred a month and got it.

OBLIGING

A hotel manager, upon finding out the shortcomings of a guest who had left without paying his bill mailed him this note: "Dear Mr. Skipper: Will you kindly send me the amount of your bill, and oblige."

In a few days the manager received this answer: "I'm glad to be able to help you. The amount of the bill is $92.00".

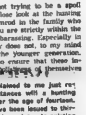
SPORTS in REVIEW



By Bert Taylor

For what it is worth and I'm not trying to be a spoil sport — you had better take a pretty close look at the hunting regulations if you have a budding sinner in the family who is under the age of sixteen. Unless you are strictly within the letter of the law it could be very embarrassing. Especially in view of the fact that the existing law does not, to my mind at least, try to curtail hunting by the younger generation. Rather I think the law is designed to ensure that these individuals are protected against [illegible] themselves and others.

The way the situation was explained to me just recently was that under no circumstances will a hunting licence be issued to any person under the age of fourteen. Rumor has it that some licences have been issued to thirteen-year-olds, but unfortunately this is contrary to existing legislation, and whenever game wardens and the like run into these persons they simply withdraw the licenses.

Perhaps the one place where the law is broken most frequently is where it pertains to persons between the ages of fourteen and sixteen. The act governing migratory and upland bird hunting states quite clearly in the summary of bird game seasons and limit 1962, which every licensee gets at the time he purchases a license):

"Note: No person shall, either directly or indirectly, apply for or in any way obtain a license or permit who is

(a) under the age of fourteen years, or

(b) over the age of thirteen years but under the age of sixteen unless written application for the permit is made by the parent or guardian of such person.

A person licensed pursuant to subsection (b) shall while hunting be accompanied by his parent or guardian.

Sound reasonable? Actually it's a pretty fair law if it weren't for one word in subsection (b) thirteen. At first reading it would almost appear that an individual of thirteen years could legally be licensed, but I know of at least one young chap who is going to be waiting one year longer than he thought before knocking those birds out of the air.

I don't know exactly how the game branch defines the word "guardian." Does this word apply to any individual who is over the age of 21 who happens to take the minor out, or is it the individual who is responsible for the welfare of the minor for 365 days of the year.

Personally, it doesn't make too much difference to me. I'll look after my own offspring until they are old enough that are legally of age to go out hunting by themselves. And, under no circumstances will they be allowed to go out in company with somebody else even if that individual is the most responsible, solid citizen you can find. And further, even though the Alberta government says that one of my boys can legally go hunting by himself, if I don't think he is quite capable of doing so safely and intelligently, he still won't be going by himself.

I've not anticipating any trouble here, as a matter of fact it could very easily develop into a situation where the "old man" is being looked-out-for by his son. After a single year of attending Knights of Columbus Gun Club sessions he is more safety-conscious than I am, and on a few occasions he has let the "old-man" know certain practises just don't fall within the realm of safe gun handling.

I've known for months now that gun clubs at this type are doing worthwhile work amongst our youngsters, but what I hadn't realized was volume of subject matter covered during the course of a session. The one here in Camrose at least, gives instruction in safe gun handling, and then as a social feature develops a love of the outdoor among its members, while at the same time developing the art of self-dependence in nearly all situations involving the out-of-doors. It is also a aid day when such clubs choose to abandon this work.

HERE AND THERE . . .

By the time you read this the World Series principals should be decided. Yanks are in for sure . . . Several football fans are impressed with Camrose Lutheran College this season. The club will mount its big test tomorrow when it meets Wetaskiwin on the local field. . . . Duck hunting locally is still good and even for odd ones is falling for the lucker amateurs.

Double-ring ceremony for Ratke-Foran rites

The principals of a lovely autumn wedding on Sept. 15th, 1962, in the Bellevue Lutheran Church were Marilynn Grace Foran, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Foran of Holden, and Robert Carl Ratke Jr., eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ratke of Edmonton. Pastor E. B. Fox performed the double-ring ceremony.

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father, wore a floor-length gown of ivory bouvelle and a detachable veil of French illusion net, held in place with a Swedish tiara. She carried a Bible covered in matching brocade and Christian roses.

Attending the bride were Miss Jean Foran, maid of honor. Miss Janet Chapman of New Westminster, B.C., bridesmaid, and Miss Yvone Dorn, cousin of the bride of Sylvan Lake, junior bridesmaid, wearing identical dresses of gold brocade with matching headbands. They carried cascade bouquets of yellow baby roses.

Best man was Mr Richard Ratke, brother of the groom, and Dale Foran, brother of the bride and Mr. Howard Tebbutt were ushers.

During the signing of the register, Miss Helen Tiedeman sang "Because We Met", accompanied by Miss Cathrine Hutchinson at the organ.

The bride's mother was dressed in a print, two-piece dress with nylon overlay in shades of autumn brown with matching accessories and corsage of gold miniature roses. Mrs. Ratke, mother of the groom, wore a grey suit with blue accessories and corsage of pink roses.

A reception followed in the church hall when Miss Marianne Mirbitz was in charge of the guest book.

Pastor E. B. Fox was master of ceremonies and Mr. G. R. Mesling proposed the toast to the bride.

For a going away outfit the bride wore a brown knitted suit with yellow and gold accessories and corsage of golden roses.

After their honeymoon the couple will reside in Edmonton where Mr. Ratke is a fourth year student at the University of Alberta.

Eileen Williams weds in Autumn ceremony

At a recent afternoon wedding in the Tofield United Church, vows were exchanged between Miss Eileen Elizabeth Judith Williams and Mr John Woodcock.

Rev. McDonald read the double ring marriage service for the daughter of Mr. George Williams.

Bouquet of pink and white decorated the church for the ceremony at which the bride was given in marriage by her father.

For her wedding, the bride chose a floor length gown of white organza over taffeta with three tiered lace surrounding the bottom. The gown had a scalloped neckline with lily point sleeves, the waist held in place by a lace sash bow trimmed with organza flowers. She carried a white Bible from which extended deep mauve and white streamers.

The maid of honor was Miss Louise Woodcock who wore a dress of blue organza with matching headpiece and shoes. Bridesmaids were Miss Gwen Grover and Miss Nora Williams wearing identical floor length organza with matching headpiece and shoes. They all carried lace-shaped bouquets of carnations.

Mrs. Lorraine Lawrence Williams and Grace Sellon attended the guest book. Ushers were Harold Williams and Harry Woodcock.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodcock proposed the toast to the bride at the reception which was held in the Tofield Community Hall.

central assessment and the County would be able to claim 25% of that cost. The Division passed the resolution but it was pointed out that the County would have to provide for a new special levy to cover the possible loss in revenue next year, and that, without a doubt, new areas of coverage would at no time be the cost of the assessor to provide a better and more accurate assessment. He had therefore informed the secretary-treas. of the County of Ketchikan No. 10 that the County of Beaver No. 9 was definitely interested in obtaining new aerial photographs and that the County would be prepared to have that work done in connection with surrounding Municipalities.

It was moved and carried that information be received and that the secretary-a action be concurred in.

The tenders for the old Grader Shed at Holden were now considered. Two tenders had been received, one for $117 from Steve Knudtsen and one for $257 from Jack Hawrah. The secretary-treasurer pointed out to the Council that in the advertisement offering the building for sale he had stipulated that the building had to be removed by October 15th.

It was moved and carried that the tender submitted by Nick Hawrah of Holden for the Grader Shed, situated on Lots 23 to 28 in Block 1, Plan 3949 W, Village of Holden, in the amount of $257, be accepted.

The secretary-treas. reported that taxes of taxes collected in August of 1962 amounted to $4,889.89, and that the outstanding arrears of taxes amounted to $151 198.51, being $16,810.72 less than at the corresponding time in 1961 Collection of current taxes to August 31st, 1962, amounted to $162 471.27, compared with $64,478.95 for the corresponding period in 1961. The tax sale Revisions were considered very satisfactory, and it was moved that the report be accepted. Cd

The road complaint, made to the School Committee at its meeting on Sept. 11 and by resolution 12 of that meeting referred to the County Council for action, was now discussed. The road in question was located north of section 7, and NE. of section 7, east of section 18 and 19, north of part of section 13 in township 50-19-4th and north of section 24 and section 13 in township 50-19-4th and 23 in township 50-19-4th and 24. Mayor Magnuson the local member of the School Committee meeting was unable to do any work on this road unless he was allowed an over-expenditure The Council felt that this was an emergency and that it was necessary to put the road in such condition that the school bus could travel over it, and it was moved and carried that Cr. Magnuson be permitted an overexpenditure, over and above his Public Works allotment, so as to be able to put sand or gravel on the road in question, with the understanding that he would keep the over - expenditure as low as possible.

Quotation for the supply and installation of a gas heater for the Millarville River Machine Shop was now considered. Quotations had been received from Bitner Electric Ltd. and from C. H. Heating Contractors and Supply. The quotation of Bitner Electric Ltd. of $1,100.00 for the supply and installation of a gas heater in the Millarville River Machine Shop was accepted.

Tenders for the supply of gravel for the 1962 road program were considered. Only one tender had been received, that of Watson (Tofield) Limited for supply and crushing of 60,000 IRT. Tofield Heater complete for $460.25 be accepted.

Mr. John Naherniuk interviewed the Council in regards to acquiring gravel on road allowance quarter of a mile of section 5 SE 5-49-17-W4th from the road intersection to his gate He stated that in wet weather the bus cannot get over this road. The matter had been re-graded in the fall of 1961 and was in very good condition but required, as he stated gravel or coal shale. He stated that a supply of coal shale was available at farmyard of Mr. Naherniuk and that he had requested Mr. Magnuson to purchase such shale. It was explained that the Municipal District has gate to pick up coal and turns around in the yard. Cr. Magnuson stated that he would be able to obtain the shale much closer later on the fall and that he would be prepared to do the work at that time.

It was moved and carried that Cr. Magnuson look after this matter.

R. McFeride, district engineer Department of highways, and D. A. Bussard, assistant district engineer, attended the meeting at this time to discuss with the Council the Special Contingency Grant which can be applied for 1963. The district engineer was quite agreeable to put Highway 35481, the Holden-Hayland road, into the County's south boundary, through to the Village of Holden, should he applied for. He suggested that two bridges, one small and one large, would be required on this road and that application should be made at this time for bridge Branch for these two bridges in the 1963 Bridge Program. It was also decided that the work should start in the south end of the County as the north part of this road had been re-graded only one or three years ago and was in reasonably good shape

It was moved that Council apply to have the road from the south-east corner of section 2-51-20-W4th north 13 miles to the south side of Holden constructed under the Special Contingency Grant Provisions in 1963. CL

Cr. Weatherill stated that it was necessary to construct a road south of section 13-51-19-W4th to the Beavercross for school bus.

Moved that Cr. Weatherill obtain an assessment for this road and arrange to have the road from the south-east corner of section 2-51-20-W4th north 13 miles to the south side of Holden constructed under the Special Contingency Grant Provisions in 1963. CL

Cr. Weatherill stated that it was necessary to construct a road south of section 13-51-19-W4th to the Beavercross for school bus.

Cr. Weatherill referred to the approval of various subdivisions where the Council approved of these subdivisions provided the County was not to be responsible for any road or other improvements in or to the subdivisions and stated that in the case of the road to block subdivision the developer had made no provision for the access road and that the same could occur in regards to the subdivision at Lake Lake, and he was of the opinion that some arrangement should be obtained in this regard as to who eventually would be responsible for the access roads. The secretary-treas. stated that he could obtain a list of subdivisions from the Town and Rural Planning, or obtain information from the developer might be responsible

The following no further business it was moved at 5.35 p.m. that the meeting now adjourn to the call of the chair or to the next regular meeting CL

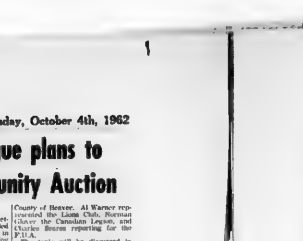
HALF FARE, SAME AS BASS FIDDLES



The passenger being seated in the tourist section of a big American Airlines jet in New York by stewardess Joy Tilles was strictly a square, she says. He wouldn't eat, eat or drink. But he was very sensitive. He was kept in his seat with a special safety belt. The passenger was a carefully crated Sperry gyro guidance system bound for North American Aviation's Palmdale, Calif., plant for first-time installation in the Air Force's prototype triaxic RB-70 Valkyrie jet. The clerk who searched fruitlessly for rate schedules finally said, "Half fare, same as for bass fiddles."

Peter's Patter

Although I am one who does not like to admit it from time to time. When I see an article in a paper on fire prevention I am guilty of not reading it. I wonder how many other people are guilty?

The reason probably is that when you see something every day and everybody knows all about it, you think you don't have to read it over and over.

As next week is fire prevention week, I thought for once I would read some articles pertaining to such. To my surprise, it got me to thinking of what would happen if a fire broke out in my home. Would I be prepared? Would you be prepared if fire broke out in your home tomorrow? Would you have an escape path worked out?

According to the Underwriters' the best way to save lives in case of a fire is to have a quick exit already planned. Fire authorities advise warning and it tends to breed panic, unless people are thoroughly prepared from any part of the house to be warned and safely out! And to do this, they know that it will be up to me.

It would be wise to make plans for this serious delay. Here is how it's done.

Figure out two possible escape routes to the ground from any room. Then, in this way, if one route is cut off by fire, you still have an alternate exit. Every member of the family and also visitors and baby sitters should be familiar with the escape routes.

Have a meeting place.

Its not jump except as a last resort to save your life. Jumping usually needlessly. If it becomes necessary to jump first throw mattresses and pillows or anything else soft to break the sudden your landing. Then carefully lower yourself from the window till to reduce the distance to the ground, and drop into the cushioning.

I would like to add another personal thought. Just an hour before writing this column, I had the experience of the school bus catching fire while driving. Luckily I had a few extinguisher to use, which put out the fire immediately. If I have never yet seen a fire extinguisher in a car, so, if you haven't got one and cannot get one it would be wise to keep a portable bottle or something of the sort filled with water and stored in some handy place in the car for such emergencies.

Oh, by the way, if you suddenly see me jumping from the upstairs window, it won't be because of any wife chasing me, or trying to commit suicide. No, I'll just be practising my fire escape

Spilstead congregation honors Andersons

(Mrs. L. Griffin)

The Spilstead Friday evening service of worship on Sept. 21st. was held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hoflin, where a record congregation gathered on one of the season's visits of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Anderson.

Mrs Hoflin's boisterous lunch was very much enjoyed at the late hour, and as an informal occasion, the girls and boys did well as waitresses and waiters

As event not customary at three weekly gatherings, took place in the procession of men and women entering the dining room carrying bulging bags and boxes which were laid at the feet of Mr. and Mrs. Anderson for their devoted ministry through the summer months.

There were vegetables, fresh and canned, pickles, preserved fruits and home baking enough of everything to have lasted an interval out of the shopping centres for weeks to come.

The Andersons Blake and Joyce were so deeply moved by the spontaneous of the warm-hearted donors, that even Blake's usual words come so readily and eloquently, could speak only with difficulty as he tried to thank the givers for their gifts.

The farewell supper of the entire congregation followed the Andersons as they took their departure

Lunch for Friday last evening had been decided to be by the coming winter's cold, dark nights and difficult roads and to hold these weekly services of worship not only one each month instead of once each week. The third Friday of each month was suggested as a convenient time for the meetings

Tofield to have harvest festival

(Peter Nickel)

The Tofield Chamber of Commerce and the Tofield Community League have a big day planned for Tofield and district on Saturday, Oct. 27th.

The Chamber of Commerce will endorse a harvest festival program similar to the one held last year along this time, with CFCW in attendance.

The Lions Club will again have a slave auction, and the Community League will be holding a community auction in the evening. All this should add up to a big day for all residents of the community, one they will never forget.

As the 27th is not very far away, anyone having something to donate for the community auction, should do so as soon as possible by contacting any member of the Community League or phone Mr. Stinson at the town office, phone 37. All donations will be greatly appreciated for this worthwhile cause to raise money to meet the payment on the hall.

Color supplement for The Mercury

Starting with next week's issue The Mercury a distinctive type carrying "Rural Alberta", a full color tabloid supplement.

The brainchild of E. Dave Walton, formerly with The Calgary Herald, the supplement has been in the planning stage for the past year.

While it is expected that the supplement will contain 16 pages of tabloid size, it is hoped that the addition of the supplement will not necessitate raising rates, but be an increase in Canroc Cash subscription rates. It is to be included as an "extra" for our readers—an extra which we feel any subscribers will enjoy.

Mr. Walton comes originally from a small Alberta town, as do several members of the staff, so that Rural Alberta can be expected to bring to readers of The Tofield Mercury will be of article popular among readers in Canada's greater, western communities.

Vialta Lodge has 34 residents in August

The regular meeting of the Board of Directors of Vialta Lodge Association was held in the staff dining room of Vialta Lodge on Wednesday evening Sept. 6th, with Chairman Mrs. Ed Hansen presiding. Also in attendance were Mrs. Jessie Hansen, Mrs. Ed Hansen, matron Mrs Jerry Pascha, assistant matron Miss Kathleen Borthwick, and secretary-treasurer P. O Nordstrom. The meeting was called to order by Mr. Hafso at 8.30.

The financial statement for the month of August showed an overdraft of $1,160.89. The operating deficit for the month was $73.10, as compared with an operating surplus for July of $164.22. The cost per guest per day was $2.14, as compared with $1.87 for July This report was adopted on a motion by Tom Anneko.

The residence report showed that 34 persons had been in residence during the month, and that at the end of the month 31 guests were in residence as of from July.

Two applications for residence were received, and considered. Mrs. Ida Jones, 35 years of age from the Department of Public Welfare in connection with foundation, were read to the meeting. It was felt that it might be wise to have three or four foundations get together for meetings, but to have any one would become too large and cumbersome

The matron reported that the pilot light on the furnace had not been working, but that Mr. Pascha had cleaned off the contacts and it now seemed O.K

The matron inquired as to the purchasing of plastic bed sheets, and after discussion it was decided to order 30 of these sheets

Outstanding accounts were approved for payment.

The meeting was adjourned at 9.25 on a motion by J. H. Riddell, seconded by Mrs. Ed Hansen.

Ed Hansen suggested to endorse the program at which CFCW will broadcast direct.

Also in discussion was the hospitality committee. Letters written concerning the matter have not been answered, as were considerable discussion, the Chamber members felt that the letters should have been doing a fine job and should be left in office

Stangowitz to be tried for attempted murder

To face Supreme Court in Wetaskiwin Oct. 15th

Paul William Stangowitz, charged with the attempted murder of RCMP Constable Gordon Shields on September 11, was ordered to stand trial in Alberta Supreme Court before judge and jury, following a preliminary inquiry held Oct. 1st before Magistrate J. L. Sparling of Camrose. Stangowitz will appear at Wetaskiwin on Monday, October 15th, according to R. A. Cawsey of Wetaskiwin, crown prosecutor at Monday's inquiry. Defence counsel was W. G. K. Bloor of Edmonton.

MENTALLY FIT

In reading the charge on Monday, Magistrate Sparling stated that statements had appeared before him September 1st, 10th and 17th, by three doctors, all stating that Stangowitz was mentally fit to stand trial.

Following his appearance on the 17th, Stangowitz had gone to Dr. Oliver Mental Institute for observation, and the latter report submitted that Stangowitz is "deliberately evasive and lacks freedom". It added that he has a drinking problem, and that he has been drinking heavily for a few years. In the sisters opinion Stangowitz was mentally fit to stand trial

No. 10, according to the report

168 to 170, a high average grade.

The first of 17 witnesses called to testify on Monday was Cpl. Beverly Shields, wife of Const. Gordon Shields, and the principal target of the eight shots fired. She has a driveless pedestrian Shields is employed by the R.C.M.P. in Camrose.

Cpl. Shields described how on Sept. 11th, at approximately 2:30 a.m. Const. Shields left their home to answer a complaint of a disturbance at the Stangowitz residence. He walked from their park lights on, which they did, and he passed out of sight. Shortly after their return to Camrose, Constable Shields was to the Camrose Hospital, where he died.

Cpl. Shields testified that she heard the report of a gun shot, and then another, and another, and another, and another, and another, and another, and another

Is the student a vessel or a lamp to light

Like ours the children of Russia have just gone back to school like ours, they have a far from perfect school system But unlike ours, they face the most rigorous curriculum in their country's history All of them study six days a week for 10 to nine a year from age 7 to 15 By 1970 when the Soviet educational reorganization is complete 11 years of school will be compulsory Except f r a choice of foreign language, their subjects are also all compulsory. Every Russian child learns trigonometry, for example, as against only 8 of American high school students. Moreover as Arther Trace's book What Ivan Knows that Johnny Doesn't made clear, the Russian child learns to read sooner than the American, and by the fourth grade has been exposed to a vocabulary of 10,000 words. whereas most of the readers used by our fourth-grade children are deliberately limited to 1,500 words

Russian primary education is more rigorous than American in reading, writing, arithmetic, geography, history and foreign languages — humanities as well as science. The Russian grade-school reader early introduces the pre-Soviet classics—Pushkin. Lermontov, Tolstoy, etc — while comparable American readers are littered with the monosyllabic works of Laura E. Richards and Mary Louise Friebele Russian kids work harder and have a better command of fundamentals than most American kids So, by and large, the German, French, Swiss, Dutch, Belgian, Scandinavian and English kids

Those facts are not new, nor is a full comparison all in Europe's favor. But the controversy got fresh fuel early this month when Congress released Admiral Rickover's fact-filled testimony about the new English school system she deems a far superior to ours). And the battle for higher standards in European schools is far from won, indeed the forces for it are not yet fully mobilized.

Ever since Sputnik, dissatisfaction with U.S. schooling has spread faster, and so have conscientious efforts at reform. But in a system as vast, complex and anarchic as the American, with 35,000 largely autonomous school districts and considerable disagreement on what education is for, standards cannot be raised uniformly overnight nor by any single means. In Rickover's view, the reform m vement has so far produced more voltage than current Certainly a lot of it is still misdirected It is discouraging to learn, for example, that to answer the question "Why Johnny can't read several million pupils are this year being subjected to even more elaborate psychological testing -LIFE, Sept 21

The misguided equitarians of the progressive movement, who dislike "fortunate devotees" (their name for bright children) and don't believe in right or wrong grammar or spelling, are still too influential Too many teachers colleges are still time-wasting seedbeds of boredom and illiteracy In the swamp of American pedagogy, the rigorous European system has the look of solid ground, especially when described by the eloquent Rickover. Nevertheless it would be a mistake to import it wholesale, for two reasons

The Russian system is not only laced with repellent Communist indoctrination, but has the defects of any excessively Spartan system, which is a tendency to produce order-taking automata instead of thinking human beings Soviet academicians have recently been criticizing their curriculum on those very grounds, and complaining it does not produce enough original or speculative thinkers. Says one "A student is not a vessel to be filled but a lamp to be lighted." The same defect, to a lesser extent, can be found in West European schools.

American education, insofar as it can be characterized as a whole, tends to treat the student as a lamp rather than a vessel. And the ferment in American education, though spotty and tragically limited by the shortage of well-trained teachers, is producing much healthy change and hopeful experiment. Johnny IS doing better (LIFE, April 7, 1961), or at least many of his teachers are trying harder. Math and physics courses have been revamped Foreign languages are being taught earlier and better Bright students are being encouraged by acceleration programs and given college work in many high schools Lower grades are being wholly merged in some schools to make possible more individualized instruction, while "team teaching" experiments are raising its quality The productivity of good teachers is being increased by the growth of educational TV.

If the average quality of American education were close to the level of our good public and private schools, we would not have to worry about foreign models But it isn't. And until the average is vastly higher, the critics and compairers must be listened to It is no answer to boast of the ambitious quantity of U.S. education; quality is the issue. Here, in our judgment, are some of the critics' more attention-worthy recommendations.

Dr Trace wants a radical improvement in primary schoolbooks, especially readers. They should unfolde at least a 10,000-word vocabulary by the sixth grade and aim at the literary quality of the old McGuffey Reader, giving Mrs. Friebele a rest Collateral reading lists, too, are hospitable to current junk to the neglect of the classics

Rickover, a more sound-and-branch reformer, is not only for more ruthless ability grouping, the elimination of all frill courses and the de-emphasis of sports, but would virtually abolish professional school administrators, letting the teachers run the schools as in Switzerland. No wonder the professional educationists hate Rickover. But two of his recommendations, at least, should enjoy wider support.

One is more classroom hours per year. Of 51 nations surveyed by UNESCO, 37 — including practically all of Europe — require longer hours than we do American students, by and large, are underemployed.

Second, Rickover would set up a national committee on education standards which would publish yardstick examinations and requirements in basic subjects, strictly competitive, whose mark at least provide a criterion for what any particular school diploma means, if anything. It would give the public and school boards a better handle on quality control in their perpetual battle with the school bureaucrats, who are often timid and public-relations-minded apologists for mediocrity.

Whatever else you may think of Rickover's diagnosis and cure, he is right about one thing: Educational mediocrity is not the necessary price of democracy. If it were, democracy would be self-doomed. A democratic education is one in which the starting line, not graduation day, finds all students abreast. Said Jefferson: "We must dream of an aristocracy of achievement arising out of a democracy of opportunity."

A brief or political hay?

Yesterday morning, a forty-man delegation, representing the Citizens' Mineral Rights and Justice League presented a formal brief to the executive council of the province of Alberta Among other things the delegates demanded a share of the profits of the oil industry and lower taxes genuine free enterprise, no more 'skim-milk socialism" and less foreign domination and finally, a return to democracy and less dictatorship by government boards, for all Albertans.

The inclusion of the latter demand causes one to wonder whether the League is presenting this brief in a sincere effort to help its members or as a means of political expediency The fact is points seem to deal definitely with fiscal industry and mineral rights but the third additional the impression that Mr Leibrandt and his followers are going farther afield

Earlier this year Premier Manning claimed that the Citizens Mineral Rights and Justice League has political ambitions, and that it would block be the nucleus of Alberta's next political party. This claim was not denied by Mr Leibraf

Today's brief appears to be another stepping stone to that end. There may be no harm in the formation of another political party or in a petition. Possibly it is considered desirable by many But if this is the ultimate goal of the League, many feel that it has reached the point where it can not dispense with the smoke screen and come out into the open If it wishes to enter political, then the League must be well advised to confine future briefs and statements to mineral rights and the oil picture in general

WARBLE AND LICE CONTROL IN CATTLE

There is considerable interest in the control of warbles and lice in cattle this fall and the Agricultural Service Board is anxious to co-operate in promoting this program and giving assistance to farmers in organizing warble-free areas. The following quotation from a research station weekly letter referring to Forestburg area is well worth quoting here.

"With systematic insecticides and simplified methods of their application it is advisable to encounter area control of cattle grubs, as one such project at Forestburg, Alta., approximately 18,000 cattle were treated in three consecutive years in an area 15 by 36 miles resulting in significant reduction in grub population. The effect was most marked in those cattle in the central parts of the area that were at a distance of 5 miles from untreated herds. In these cattle grub population dropped from 14 grubs per animal to one. Revived as much as 9 to 1 cents in that area some farmers reaped pound extra for warble-free animals sold during the winter season.

The chemical cost of about 65 cents per adult animal for warble and lice control is a very significant future expected to be lessened by these pests through warble loss, devaluation loss, and the hide loss to the packer. In addition, grubbing caused by adult flies may reduce milk production by 25 percent and summer beef gains by 30 to 75 pounds per head.

The systemic insecticides CO-RAL and BAYLESS are safe and effective for controlling warbles and lice in beef animals and non-lactating dairy cows.

The application of these chemicals is quite simple and should be done as soon as possible after a warble flies are detected.

Space does not permit a detailed outline of actual procedure in the application of these chemicals, however, farmers are invited to contact their District Agriculturist, local veterinarian or the Agriculture Board office for further information.

Farmers having small herds would be advised to use the BUTZLINE spray system if they do not have high pressure sprayers. CO-RAL and BAYLESS are safe and effective for controlling warbles and lice in beef animals and non-lactating dairy cows.

The above herd owners may use BUTZLINE on their own initiative. CO-RAL provided that proper spraying equipment is used. Farmers who wish to have their cattle sprayed are requested to contact our office if they prefer to use the County sprayer. We have worked out a table for rental rates and if the number of applications will justify hiring extra help and remaining tractors we will be pleased to do this on a cost basis.

BRUCELLOSIS VACCINATION

As in previous years the compulsory vaccination of calf heifers from 4 to 11 months of age will be carried out this year by an organized basis. Township supervisors will do all the calf vaccination duties and farmers are requested to notify the supervisor in charge of their township of the number of calves to be vaccinated before the end of October.

In a Bulletin dealing with the vaccination procedure in the County it is stipulated that all calves between 15 3 and 34 in Range 15 and all the area in the County east of Range 15. By J. Roberts and Ryley will be the western limit of the County, west of Range 15 also townships 47 and 48 in Range 15

1080 COYOTE POISON BAITS

We must know by October 31st how many baits are to be placed in the County this winter. Requests have been received so far 1000 must be used in remote areas at least one mile from any dwellings. The area must be protected with signs and notices of locations are to appear in local newspapers.

Baits will be placed only in areas where proof of damage to livestock by coyotes is evident. New districts for baits will be considered as soon as requests are received.

Paul Stangowitz found guilty of attempted murder

(Wednesday, October 17th)

Paul William Stangowitz, 21, of Camrose, was found guilty of attempted murder this morning by Justice Peter Greschuk of Edmonton, in a supreme court trial held yesterday and today at Wetaskiwin. Stangowitz was charged with the attempted murder of Constable Gordon Shields of the Camrose detachment of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Constable Shields was shot in the back early on the morning of Sept. 1st when he left the Camrose City Police office and was about to get into his car which was parked in front of Hoveland's Funeral Home.

TO BE SENTENCED

Justice Greschuk had not passed sentence by noon today when the court was adjourned until 2:00 p.m. so that a probation officer might give a report which he had made concerning Stangowitz last June and the judge also had suggested he make up another report during the noon recess.

Speaking on the sentence to be imposed, the crown prosecutor suggested that Stangowitz be given treatment, perhaps psychiatric, so that "something might be salvaged from this man and return him as a useful member of society". He felt that such treatment could be had at the penitentiary. He asked that the dominating factor in the passing of sentence be the protection of the public, adding that sentence by the court be respected and protected.

Defence counsel asked that Stangowitz be given a thorough psychiatric examination before sentence is passed and suggested that he be remanded to Ponoka for 30 days. It was at this point that the crown prosecutor suggested that the probation officer might give his report.

R. A. Cheavey of Wetaskiwin was probation officer, while W. G. K. Wise of Edmonton was counsel for the defence.

TRIAL BY JUDGE

At the preliminary inquiry held in Camrose Oct. 1st, Stangowitz had elected to be tried by judge and jury in Alberta Supreme Court. However, at Tuesday's trial yesterday, defence asked that the accused be allowed to re-elect. He pleaded not guilty, and elected to be tried by a judge.

Mr. Cheavey gave a brief outline of the case for the crown, saying that he would call 11 witnesses. First of these was Dr. F. J. Smith, of Camrose. Dr. Smith testified that he had been called to the hospital in Camrose on the morning of Sept. 1st, and found Constable Shields on a stretcher in a state of shock. He went on to describe the bullet wound and said an operation to remove it was done.

Next witness was Cpl. Lorne Anderson of Red Deer who described a diagram he had made of the area near the Hoveland and Stith Streets in Camrose, and photographs he had taken on Sept 1st.

SHIELDS TESTIFIES

During his testimony, Const. Shields told how he and Cpl. Vern Smith of the RCMP had entered a car which Stangowitz was driving near Ryley on the night of Aug. 31st, seizing some beer and issuing Stangowitz a voluntary appearance ticket charging him with illegal possession. Shields also quoted Stangowitz as saying "I never fully realized what I've fought". He said that Stangowitz went on say that the police officers could throw the book at him, but that they could not get him into court. Stangowitz at this point threatened to shoot himself according to Const. Shields' testimony.

In his testimony, Cpl. Smith said he had overheard Stangowitz's threat in the room with himself, but that he did not take the threat seriously. Const. Shields also testified that he did not take the threat seriously. Both Shields and Smith said that while Stangowitz had been drinking, he did not appear to be intoxicated.

Defence counsel went on to explain how he had gone to the City Police office before returning to Camrose from the night patrol on the night of Sept. 1st. He said he left the City Police office about 2:15 a.m. and while unlocking his car, heard a report and felt a sharp pain. He fell to the pavement and rolled over several times.

He saw Const. Jim Munro coming out of the City Police office with his gun drawn and after was placed in a city police car and taken to hospital.

DRIVE TO BAWLF

Wellesa B. Brown of Edmonton testified that he had been with Stangowitz on the evening of Aug. 31st, and that they had had a couple of drinks together. Later they and Miss Lorraine Hill of Edmonton drove out to Bawlf where they were joined by Miss Hill's fiancee. Later in the evening Dennis Brown's car was involved in a collision with the RCMP patrol car driven by the police, and Brown testified that he said he was going to kill himself and "some cops".

Const. Shields stated Dennis Brown had said he would shoot himself and some policemen with a rifle. Brown said he told Stangowitz he didn't have any shells.

During the cross-examination, Brown said that a 12-oz. bottle of whiskey which the two had taken with them when leaving Stangowitz home was almost two-thirds full and that they had had drinks from this bottle after they had been checked by the police near Bawlf. Brown said that Stangowitz had driven back to Camrose and that he was a good driver.

"PRETTY RUGGED"

Lorraine Hill testified that the drive to Camrose from Bawlf was "pretty rugged". She estimated that Stangowitz had driven at between 80 and 90 miles an hour and that he was driving on the left side of the road part of the time. She said that Stangowitz had threatened to take his own

Students to begin magazine campaign

(By Barbara Arnett)

For the fourth years the Tofield High School Union has been collecting magazine subscriptions as a money-making project for the school. This year the students are again collecting them, with the hope of raising a higher goal. It is hoped the public will support this project as they have done in the past, for it is greatly appreciated.

Although nothing definite has been decided as to what the money will be used this year, it will either be for the scholarship fund or one of the local students or be donated to some charitable organization.

COMING EVENTS . . .

The CWL will be holding its annual bazaar, tea and bake sale in the meeting room of the Community Hall early in November. Tickets are now on sale for a $50 money pillow to be raffled at the tea.

Press-time news

Stangowitz sentenced to 10 years

Justice Peter Greschuk this afternoon sentenced Paul William Stangowitz of Camrose to 10 years in prison for the attempted murder Sept. 1st of RCMP Constable Gordon Shields.

After hearing a report on Stangowitz by Wetaskiwin Probation Officer G. W. Payne, Justice Greschuk said that passing sentence in the case "presented him with a problem." He noted that the maximum penalty for attempted murder is life imprisonment. In his view, he said, it was clear that the attempted murder was planned and the offence deliberate, and that he sensed in Stangowitz that he was stable recovered. He felt that the accused was not prepared to co-operate with the police, but that he has a psychopathic personality and that drinking brings about a perversion complex and depression. He said that if the accused's behavior in prison is good, he may be eligible for parole.

With the 10-year sentence, Justice Greschuk gave a strong recommendation that Stangowitz be examined by a psychiatrist and given treatment if necessary.

Stangowitz showed no emotion as the sentence was pronounced.

C of C meets with Tofield Town Council

A special meeting of the Municipal Council of the Town of Tofield was held Thursday, Oct. 11, at 7:30 p.m., the notice having been given by prescribed method.

Present were Mayor Freebury and Councillors Ilkenhue, Kallal, Swift, Allan, Jefferson and Paterson.

The meeting was called for discussing with Tofield Chamber of Commerce, matters relating to traffic intersection and progress trying to enhance the value of the Town in the Community at large. Messrs McFetridge and Patrie represented the Chamber of Commerce and Mr. McFadzean was spokesman.

Topics for discussion covered were the Trailer Court, Street intersections, sidewalks, weeds, snow and ice on walks in winter, signalling of streets, etc.

The Council was able to report that steps had already been taken to put the streets in better condition, having engaged Art Rowland as grader operator, and who has had many years' experience.

As to gravelling, this was being done and Council hoped in the 1963 to much improve the streets and avenues.

Application has already been made for more street lights at intersections and the entrance to Tofield from Highway 14.

Various other items were discussed, following which the Chamber of Commerce members thanked the Council for the opportunity to meet officially.

School has room for more retarded tots

Bob Burgess, president of the Camrose and District Association for Retarded Children, announced at an executive meeting, held in Camrose, that a nursery school for retarded children, with the aim of helping them be accommodated in the local school, is being started. The school can be helped by attending such a meeting, but is not compulsory. Information may be obtained by phoning Mr. Burgess at 672-2202.

The problem of the mentally retarded, which has been largely ignored for centuries, is finally receiving the attention it deserves. About 3% of all new-born children are destined to become mentally retarded regardless of economic status, religion or creed. Consequently, many a mentally retarded child has been shut away or kept from with little or no help and no hope in life. It is one of the most misunderstood of children because his crowding is not always obvious. However, there is hope today as never before.

In the knowledge that retarded children can be helped an Association for Retarded Children was formed in the community last June. Already classes are under way, helping mentally retarded children to become more self-reliant and self-sufficient.

Trick with mirrors

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics has again given Canadian Press a chance to put the farmers in the limelight. CP teletyped to all daily newspapers and radio stations a news item, which it stated "Canadian farmers as a whole had a record high cash income from their farming operations in the first half of this year." As some kind of an after thought it added: "The figure does not take account of production costs." The item also mentioned the following: "The gain in Alberta was nearly nine per cent . . . In addition to the DBS figure the farmers in the four western provinces received $86,300,000 in acreage payments and from the Prairie Farm Assistance Act. In contrast, a year earlier $7,600,000 in this way."

The P.U.A. wants to add the following footnotes to this news item:

Despite this "record high cash income" hundreds of farmers have left the farm! A laborer's job in the city gives them apparently more security and a higher income than they have as a farmer.

A simple explanation of this "record" is: faster movement of grain, thanks to the sale of large amounts of grain to Red China; the mailing out of the final payments for farmers' sales to the Wheat Board; drought conditions forcing farmers to sell cattle, and devaluation of the Canadian dollar. Consideration should also be given to the fact that Canadian farmers have never asked for acreage payments. They were chosen by the government as a way to raise the price of domestically used wheat to a level in line with the standard of living in Canada.

Interim and final payments by the Wheat Board are nothing else than payments made from farmer's money, because he delivers his products to the elevators and receives at that time only a partial payment. The Federal Minister of Agriculture decides when they will be made. This year the cheques were mailed out shortly before the election. They were larger than usual due to larger grain sales and the fact that the Canadian dollar fell below par compared with the U.S. dollar.

Payments under the P.F.A. Act are not subsidies. They are monies returned to the farmer from funds to which he makes yearly contributions

Changes in cabinet

Monday's announcement from the legislature indicates there will be several new ministers in the Alberta cabinet, with more changes expected in six weeks, probably when Public Works Minister Hartley is expected to resign. The hint is a Calgary representative will be named likely means Fred Colborne, provincial treasurer without portfolio, and sufficiently able that he may well be named directly to the works department, without requiring a general shuffle, which was made possible when Jorgeson dropped out of the government.

Premier Manning faces a tough problem, and he has our sympathies. Even with the entire house, almost, sitting on his side, it's a major problem to find thirteen or fourteen members actually capable of handling a department as minister.

Austerity program?

Few shoppers recognize quality or lack of it just by looking at the articles they're shopping for, it seems, and in many cases quality judgment seems to be based entirely on price. Recently the Edmonton Better Business Bureau drew attention to this quirk in its bulletin with the following case history, under the heading, "How Can Business Please the Public, a Bewildered Merchant Wonders".

Recently a merchant was offered a good buy on a case (30 pairs) of shoes in a discontinued line of top quality. He passed along the savings to his customers by offering the shoes at a nominal mark-up, for $5.95 a pair. After three weeks he had sold exactly two pairs. He withdrew the Special, and contacted the supplier with a view to returning the shoes, if possible. However, since this was close-out stock at a special price, he was stuck with twenty-eight pairs of shoes. About two weeks later he placed several pairs in his window display marked at $10 a pair. The entire stock moved in three days. Is the housewife ashamed to wear a pair of shoes that cost her only $5.95? Perhaps husbands should institute an austerity program, and insist that wifie do a little more comparative shopping!

By George!

During the past weekend I was one of the 421 United Church delegates attended the annual conference of this group held at the Banff Springs Hotel this year. We were welcomed to the conference by Rev. Donald Cameron, who is the man mainly responsible for the development of the Church branch of the University of Alberta. We were interested to learn that since the school was started in 1942, over $1,000,000 has been raised by the Presbytery and his committee in order to expand the school's facilities, some of this money coming from grants and a good deal of it being donations from groups and individuals. Each year more buildings are being added to the school, and we gathered from Senator Donald Cameron's talk that the Presbyterian plans for still more facilities for this institution

"Banff the Beautiful" was not quite as lovely as it has been on previous years during the autumn season. The autumn colors which are usually seen there at this time of year had disappeared, and the mountains were overshrouded for most of the weekend. Still, many of the delegates took advantage of a visit to the Sulphur Mountain gondola lift, while others took the trip on the upper bow-jumping road. One hardy doctor from Grande Prairie went up Bulwar Mountain on the hard way — climbing. And to illustrate just how hardy that fellow was, he was wearing a jacket, climbing boots . . . and swim trunks, even though the snow on the mountain was underfoot in places!

Delegates were cordially received at a banquet held on the first night of the conference by Mayor Ernest Hunt, who is the town's mayor for the 12th year. Apparently these animals still present a bit of a problem. A moose was started a few years ago to mark bears which had been causing nuisance by slapping red paint on their posteriors. The boys handling this work are very thorough: As Northern Alberta Minister Donald said, among the offending bears, not a sieva has been left untinted!

Fashion Note: There will be little change in men's pockets this season.

A WISE CRACK

"I know a place where women don't wear anything except a string of beads once in a while".

"Where?"

"Around their necks, stupid".

TIME RAN OUT

Parked in a one-hour zone in an Ottawa parking lot, a man noticed another man in the car ahead of him. He was really reeling, getting out of his car and pacing up and down. Later he pulled out something from his pocket and hung it on the parking meter. Then he had driven off the other man read the notice: It said, "Drive it up, Sarah. Give it time by bus . . .

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q Is it considered a mark of delicacy or courtesy to leave a little food on your plate at the end of a meal?

A At one time this was thought the right thing to do — but now it's considered sheer waste. We do not leave food on our plates unless we really cannot eat it. It is always polite to leave a little food on the serving platter, since someone else might possibly want another helping.

Q When a bride is writing her thank-you notes for wedding gifts received, does she also write to the bridegroom's parents and to his sisters and brothers for the gifts they gave?

A. This is not necessary, if she has been able to give them her sincere, verbal thanks

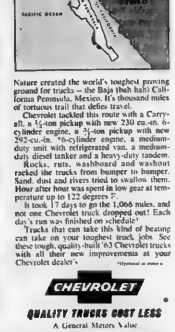
Tough new '63 Chevrolet Trucks
. . . THE ONES THAT WHIPPED THE BAJA RUN . . . TOUGHEST UNDER THE SUN . . . TO SHOW THE WORTH OF NEW ENGINES, FRAMES AND SUSPENSIONS!



Nature created the world's toughest proving ground for trucks — the Baja (bah hah) California Peninsula, Mexico. It's thousand miles of torturous trail that defies travel.

Chevrolet tackled this route with a Carryall, a ½-ton pickup with new 230 cu.-in. 6-cylinder engine, a ½-ton pickup with new 292-cu.-in. 8-cylinder engine, a medium-duty unit with refrigerated van, a medium-duty diesel tanker and a heavy-duty tandem.

Rocks, ruts, washboard and washout racked the trucks from bumper to bumper. Sand, dust and rivers tried to swallow them. Hour after hour was spent in low gear at temperature up to 122 degrees F.

It took 17 days to go the 1,046 miles, and not one Chevrolet truck dropped out! Each day's run was finished on schedule!

Trucks like that can take this kind of beating can take on your toughest truck jobs. See these tough, quality-built '63 Chevrolet trucks with all their new improvements at your Chevrolet dealer's.

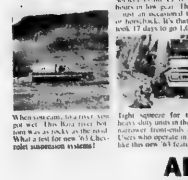
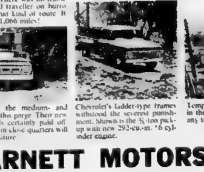
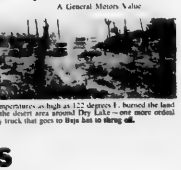
A General Motors Value



When we came to a stop for lunch, we got wet. This Baja race's hot sun was as toasty as the rain! What a test for new '63 Chevrolet suspension systems!



Eight squeeze for the medium- and heavy-duty units in the gorge. Their new coil-over front-end certainly paid off. Users who operate in close quarters will like this new 90° feature.



Chevrolet's ladder-type frames withstood the severest punishment. Shown is the ½-ton pickup with new 292-cu.-in. 6 cylinder engine.

Temperatures as high as 122 degrees F. burned the land in the desert area around Dry Lake — one more ordeal any truck that goes to Baja has to shrug off.

his Const. Charlie Stutchbeck of the city police, and three or four others. She said she thought Stangowitz had moved his throat

Mrs. Shirley Skiba testified that Stangowitz had called at her home early in the morning of Sept. 1st and had picked up his rifle which had been in the basement. She said he also asked for the keys to Carl Baker's car. She said Stangowitz had been drinking and said he was going "shoot some cops". She said she didn't take him seriously and knew he was drunk, and so she home to bed.

ASKS FOR SHELLS

Hendrick L. Vandermey and Insp. P. P. Lundberg told how Stangowitz had come to them at their various asking for shells but neither had any to give him. Lundberg said that Stangowitz had told him he was going burning as the motto of Sir Vandermey testified that Stangowitz had told him he was going to "shoot some cops" but that at the time he didn't take it seriously. The next morning Sergeant Vandermey reported he went to City Police and at that time learned of the shooting.

Angelina witness Agnes J. McKay testified that Stangowitz had visited her late early on Sept. 1st and threatened to shoot Constable Stutchbeck but she didn't believe he would do it.

Robert G. Erickson of Camrose City Police said that he had been called out for special duty on Sept. 1st and assisted in a search of the used car lot across from the police station following the shooting of Const. Stutchbeck. He said he found the accused sitting in the cab of a GMC truck near the rear of the lot with about six inches of a rifle barrel showing. He testified Stangowitz said "I have some guy's beer or I'll start shooting". The constable said that he shouted to the other policemen that he had found the man in the truck.

Constable Jim Nunes and Constable Stutchbeck told how they had found an empty shell casing near the truck later that morning.

Cpl. Earl Pysader of the City Police testified that after Constable Stutchbeck had shouted he was arrested in the cab of the truck with the rifle barrel under his leg. He called to the accused to come out of the truck and later asked if he could come up to the truck to talk to him. Stangowitz agreed to this, and the Cpl put his gun in his holster. Stangowitz agreed to this, and the Cpl opened moved to within eight feet of the truck. He said Stangowitz told him he knew what policeman he had shot at and that he had emptied the gun. He said it took a good deal of persuasion to convince Stangowitz that the policeman was not in fact killed.

Stangowitz told Cpl Frankham that he had seen the police man's hat, took aim at his back, closed his eyes and fired. Asked why he had done it Stangowitz replied "Hate, I guess", and later said that he had been persecuted by the police all his life.

BRIEF CALLED

Later, Father Frank MacDonald of St. Francis Xavier Roman Catholic Church was called to the scene, and was given permission to talk to Stangowitz privately. Some time later Stangowitz handed the clip of his rifle, and then the rifle, to Const. Jack Bell of the City Police, according to Canst. Bell's testimony. Stangowitz then got out of the truck and was taken into custody.

The crown prosecutor read a report from the Regina RCMP criminal laboratory and also a letter from Dr. A. H. McPherson of the Provincial Mental Institute at Oliver, B.C. This report the court was advised to Wednesday morning at 10:00 a.m.

Stangowitz appeared in court this morning in the courtroom during the trial

Harvest bus tour conducted for Vialta Lodge residents

At the regular meeting of the board of directors of the Beaver Foundation, held in the staff dining room of Vialta Lodge at Viking on Oct. 10th, Mrs. Mary Pysehny matron, reported that the bus tours of the districts north and south of Viking during harvest season had been well attended and were much appreciated by the Lodge residents. About 45 residents, she said, had gone on the tours, accompanied by herself and Assistant Matron Kathleen Bedwinick.

SECOND ANNIVERSARY

The board will be celebrating its second anniversary on November 15th, and for the occasion the residents and directors will be providing beer cutlets, tea and cookies for visitors.

The financial statement for the month of September was presented, showing an overall deficit of $1,177.77. The cumulative surplus for the month was $116.26 as compared with an operating deficit of $72.10 for the month of August. The cost per guest per day was $3.91 as compared with $3.71 for August.

The audience report showed that 74 persons had been in residence during the month, 39 male and 35 female. There were 1,440 meals served.

Two applications were received and considered. The applications were both accompanied by satisfactory medical reports were approved.

The department of public welfare advised that no new fees in the department would be available for inspection of the lodge in regard to the heating and ventilating units.

J. H. Baddeck agreed to contact C. W. Gelka about piping, etc., re the heating system and the hot water tank.

The secretary was asked to check correspondence regarding the matter of an incinerator, and to write again if necessary.

Arnett finishes school committee term

Regular meet held Oct. 9th

George D. Arnett, who has represented the Town in Tofield's Board of the County of Beaver School Committee for the past 3 years, ended his term on the final meeting held Tuesday, October 9th. Councillor Chas. Jones J. H. Baddeck expressed his thanks to Mr. Arnett for his work on the committee. This was the regular meeting of the school committee, held at Ryley

In reply Mr. Arnett said that he enjoyed the work very much and expressed the hope that the committee would be successful in its work during the coming year.

STREET REPAIRS

Other business at the school committee meeting of interest to Tofield residents concerned the street intersection at Clarkson Avenue and King Street in Tofield which is very low creating a hazard every time drainage water reaches it, letting it flow down the gutter. Cr. H. Beckford said that it created a problem for both teachers and pupils in crossing from the avenue to the school grounds, and suggested that the school committee assist the town in having the depression filled. The committee agreed to assist the town in the repairs in the amount of 50 per cent of the cost.

Tofield 4-H Beef Club eager to re-organize

Following a highly successful year which was experienced last year members of the Tofield 4-H Beef Club are eager to re-organize for the coming year.

Two major successes were scored by the Club in 1962. The Club won the Hardy Trophy, emblematic of the most outstanding 4-H Club in the county, and Don Wood placed all-important trip to the Toronto Royal Winter Fair in competition with 4-H members from the entire province. This is an enviable record and one which the club will try to maintain in the coming year.

John Moore, club leader, has arranged for the re-organization meeting to be held on Thursday Oct. 25th, tonight at the Tofield Community Centre at 8 p.m. All interested prospective members are urged to attend. Parents with children in the 4-H age group 12 to 21 years, are also encouraged their children to join the club. The training and experience gained in 4-H work are invaluable in training people and in many instances 4-H experience opens up job opportunities which children.

demand some measure of experience in organization.

The Tofield 4-H Beef Club has an enviable record of achievement and training for its members and all boys and girls should avail themselves of the opportunity to obtain this training.

All interested boys and girls can receive all the required information by attending the first meeting on Oct. 25th. Parents of both members and prospective members are urged to attend together with their children.

Peter's Patter

Time is running out on me so I will have to make this brief

October 31st is fast approaching and I don't think that I or Halloween are very much appreciated here in the Peter's household. I remember in the days of my youth, Halloween was a real event. Not only did we have a real treat on the night, but for days and weeks before we were planning pranks and dreaming up ways to get even with our neighbors. Some of the pranks played were real mischief makers. Gates were taken off their hinges and carried to the middle of the road, outhouses were tipped over, and all sorts of other pranks were played. Some of the pranks played were real mischief makers. Gates were taken off their hinges and carried to the middle of the road, outhouses were tipped over, and all sorts of other pranks were played.

The request is the same as in former years is that each boy and girl bring out your tricks please, don't harm the property belonging to anyone else. But most of all—have fun!

Rural intersections

Last Friday afternoon two vehicles collided at a rural intersection two miles east and two miles north of Camrose. Two weeks earlier, at an intersection one mile west, another collision occurred. No doubt there have been others who were not reported. In any case, two such accidents within a mile of each other in the short space of two weeks might indicate that more caution is needed on rural roads. There are two logical reasons for the increase in frequency of such accidents. For one thing, rural roads — at least in this area — are being improved every year, and drivers are tempted to drive at higher speeds. Adding to the temptation are smoother running cars with more powerful engines capable of higher cruising speeds.

It is all very well for the public to suggest that all intersections should be marked with "stop" or "yield" signs, or that "intersection" signs, but such an undertaking would be expensive, and we doubt that many ratepayers would favor the program. Nevertheless, many of the more dangerous intersections have been marked, and several of the main roads are protected with "yield" or "stop" signs.

The onus is on the driver. Caution must be taken at each intersection, and particularly at the time of year when snow and ice make quick stops almost an impossibility. Even under the best of conditions, two cars approaching an intersection from different directions at high rates of speed will find trouble slowing down to avoid a collision, and especially when roads are covered with loose gravel. The matter of right-of-way seems insignificant when serious injuries or death are the result of these rural intersection crashes. Before that our minds should be concerned with driving in such a manner that accidents can be averted, than worrying about which driver has the right-of-way.

An ominous picture

Reactions to President Kennedy's lightning action in the Cuban situation are extremely varied, and this is natural. Fed on anti-Castro propaganda for months and years, United States speakers keenly applauded Kennedy. Other non-Soviet nations were clearly less certain of the immediate and longer term results of the action.

Much can be said on both sides. It will take real skill to avoid an open outbreak, and a headlong plunge into what could be global war. For it is not Cuba, or even at whom Kennedy is aiming, but Soviet Russia. One thing that may be said is it may now be possible to understand the Russian reaction each time the U.S. made a new military alliance encircling the Soviets and potentially pointing terrible destruction at them.

Mr. Hinman's tax kite

We always thought spring was the season for kite flying, but Alberta's treasurer, the Hon. Mr. Hinman, has dug out his sales tax kite again and is busy sending it aloft to see how well it will fly this time. Mr. Hinman has been flying this kite for a number of years now, assured that it will eventually succeed, in spite of the assurances of Premier Manning only a year ago that the government is "not now" considering implementation of a sales tax.

Mr. Hinman's experts have done a good job in dredging up the interesting information that a three-per-cent tax could lower property taxes by as much as half. In response to the ever louder plea for some other tax base, for some other source of revenue than property. Maybe it could, as Mr. Hinman says. But would it?

Most ratepayers have observed over the years that taxes rarely drop, and if one budget fails to absorb all the monies available, or contracts somewhat, then another department expands to soak up all the savings. Even Camrose saw this feature in the past couple of years, when school mill rates were lowered by the foundation program, only to have civic levies increase in proportion.

So what Mr. Hinman is really proposing is an additional three per cent.

His timing is really skillful, too, coming just on the eve of the convention of aldermen in Red Deer at the annual meeting of the Union of Urban Alberta Municipalities, where some member of the group is sure to propose reapportioning sales tax in order to lower property taxes.

The problem is not a broader tax base, as we see it, or new sources of revenue. It is simply a matter of how much can the taxpayers pay? And if the load on property is now too high, we aren't going to be much happier paying half as much on property, plus as much again in sales tax. The problem is in the total number of dollars being extracted, and the number of dollars we are all requesting the various governments to spend on things we want done for us, and don't want to do ourselves.

In all the howling over the height of taxes, we wonder if they really are. In dollars, yes, but converted into the number of days of pay they represent, are we under if property taxes are actually higher now than they were, say, twenty-five or thirty years ago.

The important thing is that we can still howl over property taxes and got some response. The sales tax is inevitable, but I just cry objecting to an increase from the suggested three per cent to the next logical step—five per cent—and see how much attention you get.

AN OPEN LETTER TO PARENTS

Over the past 14 years parents of 4-H members have responded nobly in helping to make the Tofield Beef Club tops one of the best clubs in the country. This spirit has appealed to you because of what it could do for your children. What about this year and next? Do you parents realize that the continuation of our club depends largely on you?

You can encourage your own boys and girls to join and you can invite your neighbors' children to become members. More important still is the fact that your interest and help will make your boys and girls stay 4-H members for many years, instead of dropping out after one or two years because of lack of encouragement at home.

Doesn't it make you feel happy to have your boy say: "This is my calf. Father loaned me the money so I could have a really good one." And mothers, you can help, too. 4-H members need a place to keep their 4-H booklets and records. Sometimes you need a little reminding to keep records up-to-date and complete on time! Father and mother can be liberal with time and help in filling out the 4-H projects. It's a good idea for girls can start their own projects for you to refer to. Their own books, setting 4-H circulars and booklets, so that will help you to understand 4-H work.

You can help them a lot if you guide their project work, but don't do the work for them. When they take part in contests, you can help them win or lose with the right attitude.

"You will enjoy going with your boys and girls to their club meetings and 4-H events and seeing what interesting programs they have, and they will be pleased to have you. It would be a fine thing for you to invite the girls to meet at your home occasionally. If the meeting place is quite far away, you can help your children get there.

"Talk about the activities of 4-H clubs and 4-H projects about your children's 4-H work at the family table, and make them feel that 4-H interests are an important part of the family activities.

"Compliment them when they do well, and encourage them when they lose interest.

It will only through your continued interest and support that the 4-H club can continue to be of value to our farm community and it's most valuable asset, our boys and girls. Interest, don't need your help and girls to our organization meeting.

Cause to pause...

(By John Stobbart)

EARLY START

When a parson came home from his latest marriage ceremony, his wife asked him, "Well, how did the wedding come off?"

"Pretty good", the preacher replied, "myself I asked the bride if she would obey her husband, and she answered, 'Do you think I'm crazy?' and the groom, who was in a sort of daze, mumbled, 'I do.' Then things began to happen".

NO EFFORT

Peter, the six-year-old, was visiting his grandmother and somehow the talk turned round to spanking.

Said Peter: "Oh, my daddy never spanks me now."

"What does he do?" asked Granny.

"Oh he makes speeches", Peter replied, "and I cries."

"I don't know I don't listen".

Everybody should learn to drive particularly those who sit behind steering wheels!

By George!

I didn't think it could happen in Camrose, but that's what I have been snubbed!

I was in conversation with a group of car owners the other day, when someone brought up the subject of alternators. I made the stupid error of asking, "What is an alternator?" My question was met with silence, for clearly I didn't have an alternator, and neither, I feared anyway, did they.

I found myself driving a car that is equipped with an alternator these days, and suddenly I'm a nobody. At least I didn't realize what I had until I began to brag on this line of friends. As the Lifebuoy advertising writer would say, "Even my best friends wouldn't tell me". I may have been treated like this since 1951, when my car was the only one in my old home town without a sun visor.

Finally I decided to approach an automobile mechanic — a stranger to me — and learn the finer points about alternators. For those of you who may find yourself in my predicament, I shall explain briefly that an alternator is an electrical gadget which replaces the generator on modern cars. Its advantage over the generator is that it keeps your car's battery charged even when the engine is idling.

Now I am "one of the boys" again. Even though my car does not have an alternator, I never admit this in company. I imagine all will go well until the day when I am discovered taking my car battery into the service station for recharging.

The moral of this fairy tale is: Don't show your ignorance here but it under your hat

o—o—o

And while I'm on the subject of stories with morals, here's one borrowed from the current issue of the Camrose High School publication "Hi-Lite".

The king was almost assassinated. A Count, identified as being behind the conspiracy was asked to name his fellow conspirators. When he refused, he was placed under the dreaded artificial lake in the bottomless dungeon. He felt the cool creatures that would feed on him very soon late. The king graciously learned the names of the others. Moral: Don't hatchet your cousin before they chicken

Touring Southern Alberta . . .

Central Alberta is five newspapers' party in touch with its news paper writers were guests of the Alberta Tourist Association for a tour of Southern Alberta. H George Meyer of The Camrose Canadian represented members of the Alberta Weekly Newspapers Association on this tour. This is the first of five articles, written by Mr. Meyer, which will appear in most of this province's weekly newspapers.

Ken Liddell, well known columnist of The Calgary Herald, must referred to Southern Alberta as the "Seaside Empire", and members of the Tourist Association in that part of the province liked the name so well that they have adopted it and use it in promoting tourism in their area. There are few who know this part of the province any better than Mr. Liddell, for he travels some part of it every week in search of unusual stories for his bi-weekly column. And so, it seemed only natural that, in arranging a tour of Southern and writers from widely scattered points, George Ledingham, manager of the Alberta Tourist Association, should choose Mr Liddell to act as his chief assistant and guide.

The tour assembled in Medicine Hat on Saturday, Sept. 8th and during the following week we visited Elkwater Lake in the Cypress Hills Provincial Park, Brooks and the Dinosaur Provincial Park at Stoverville, Drumheller with its Badlands, Lacombe, Banff, Sylvan Lake, Calgary, Bashaw, Innisfail, Bowden, Calgary, Banff, Fort Macleod, the Peace River Country, Camrose, Cardston and Coleman.

Comments on the tour were Mr. Liddell, Bill Powers of The Edmonton Journal, Caroline Hamacher of the Winnipeg Free Press, Prairie Farmer Weekly, Keith Dryden of the Saskatoon Western Producer, Clyde Reichelt of the Great Falls (Montana) Tribune and I represented members of the Alberta Weekly Newspapers Association

The first event of the tour was right-seeing in Medicine Hat, the city which has been called among other things: "The city with a bell for a basement". Which is not quite true, as Canada's Prairie Pittsburgh — as John Fluter The city has no less than two playgrounds for toddlers with all the equipment for them being produced locally by Scott Manufacturing, under the trade name "Blue Imp".

This city is best known to tourists, perhaps, because of its greenhouses and its glass and pottery plants. There are sixteen greenhouses one of these the several largest in Canada. A total of twenty-three acres of plants of all kinds can be seen growing under glass, and products are supplied to markets everywhere from Fort William to the West Coast. Needless to say, the heavy use of natural gas creates problems for the greenhouse operators, and are interested in that only one insurance company, Lloyds of London, specializes in insuring plants against gas leaks. The season at Medicine Hat is short, which is why the abundance of sunshine, and this is the reason for its many greenhouses.

Although there are two glass factories in the city, the Alberta Pottery and the Hycrest china factory in the Medicine Hat area, our party visited only the Alta Glass Plant. Here a specialty glassware is produced by imported glass-blowers. We saw ultra sand, imported from Minnesota, placed in huge furnaces heated to 2,300 degrees Fahrenheit, mixed with other chemicals such as potash and soda ash and removed in molten form in long blowpipes. It is then blown and formed into such products as vases, flower bowls, paper weights and ash trays, and sold at reasonable prices all over Canada.

The Alta Glass plant is open to visitors for tours at certain hours each day, as is the Goodyear Rubber plant just west of the city, which was also included in our tour.

At the Goodyear plant we were delighted to see raw rubber from British Malaya, mixed with synthetic rubber to improve its wearing quality, changed into uncured sheet rubber for retreads, and finished tires for all kinds of motor vehicles. We were surprised to learn that the raw rubber is not heated but rather, as it is mixed in large vats, it must be cooled by water. The rubber mixture we were told, never melts, but rather becomes softer. One is puzzled only when it is being formed into tires, as in the case of the retread material, when it is being applied to an old carcass. One hundred and sixteen men are employed at the plant.

A brief visit to the tourist bed at Medicine Hat revealed that over 37,000 tourists parked at the Transcanada Highway to seek information on the city and the province during the past season. United States visitors numbered 8,108.

The rest of the afternoon was taken up in a drive to Cypress Hills Provincial Park, about 30 miles south of Medicine Hat. In the park is Elkwater Lake which was visited by over 8,000 tourists last year, most of them residents of the Gas City who spend their weekends at the lake in tents and trailers.

At the time of our visit the hills were covered with snow due to a recent storm, but this is understandable when one realizes that this is the highest level of land between the Rockies and the Atlantic Coast. In these hills can be found large different species of insects and plants which are not normally seen north of the Big Muddy River in southern U.S.A. Geologists believe that the huge glaciers which covered this continent millions of years ago, deposited these species in the area during plants and insects resembling those found in Alaska. Fossils, mammoth bones, etc., are found as fossils.

Dinner in the towers dining room was a treat, and in spite of a few dry martinis, the food was a gourmet's paradise. It is stocked mainly with pike, although there are some perkeerel as well.

Upon our return to Medicine Hat where we spent the night, we were guests at a reception and banquet of the Medicine Hat Chamber of Commerce.

The next article in this series will deal with our visit to the Dinosaur Provincial Park at Stoverville near Patricia, Brooks and the Drumheller Badlands.

Chrystian-Gumpinger exchange nuptial vows

St. Francis Xavier Church, Camrose, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, Oct. 6th, when Lucille daughter of Mrs. Anne Gumpinger and the late Mr. Joseph Gumpinger of Camrose, became the bride of Louis Chrystian, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alois Chrystian of Ryley. The double-ring ceremony was performed by Father Pashak, after which Father Prefontaine said the nuptial mass.

The bride, entering the church on the arm of her brother, Richard, was radiant in a gown of white organza over net and satin with a sweetheart lace inset, and long pearl sleeves. A crown of simulated pearls and sequins held her chapel veil in place. She carried a bouquet of red roses, stephanotis and lily of the valley.

The bridesmaids, Lavorna Knox, friend of the bride, and Bernice Chrystian, sister of the groom, were identical street length dresses of gold velvet and carried bouquets of white roses and lilies of the valley.

The groom's attendants were Karl Chrystian, brother of the groom, and Leonard Gumpinger, brother of the bride.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. Doris Pearson of Salt Lake, Sask., and the soloist was Mrs. Joseph Humpinger of Camrose, became the bride of Louis Chrystian, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alois Chrystian of Ryley. The double-ring ceremony was performed by Father Pashak, after which Father Prefontaine said the nuptial mass.

At 5:30 p.m., a reception for 200 guests was served in the Elks' Hall, Camrose, with the groom's uncle, Mr. Fred Stolowski, master of ceremonies. He also proposed the toast to the bride, to which the groom able responded. The bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake baked by the bride's sister, Mrs. Sebastian Leibel and decorated by Rev. Sister Stephanie, of St. Mary's Hospital.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Gumpinger chose a blue two-piece dress with white accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. The groom's mother wore a two-piece dress of green lace with brown accessories and a yellow corsage.

The bride and groom left on a wedding trip to Banff and several points in B.C., and the U.S.A., where they attended the World's Fair at Seattle. The bride chose a suit of winter white-textured, all-wool bouclé with black accessories and a corsage of pink roses. The young happy couple will make their home in Camrose.

MacDuff Ottawa report

. . . The small question

OTTAWA Canadians who wondered after the election just how long a minority Government could function in the new Parliament may soon be fairly sure that the answer is indefinitely.

And those who wondered if a Government without a majority could govern properly and effectively may now be fairly sure that the answer is yes.

After a number of weeks of often exciting argument, the House of Commons has settled into a quieter, workmanlike mood. Government legislation, non-controversial though it is, is getting through the House.

In other words minority Government is working, and looks as though it could go on working for a long time.

But it would be a mistake to suppose that it could or should go on for more than another six or eight months.

For the one central question on which has been raised by the June 18 election, and evaded since then, has not been settled in any real sense. That question is: should the House of Commons defeat the Government at the earliest opportunity, thus re-calling the election campaign?

The central argument just hasn't been settled.

In a debate which reached heights of style and quality long remembered in Ottawa, the Liberals pressed the Government of electoral fraud in connection with change retail.

The Government, including the Prime Minister himself, replied that the Liberals during the campaign had deliberately down-graded Canada and had made a deliberate and vicious attempt to destroy Mr. Diefenbaker.

Furthermore, Mr. Diefenbaker and Finance Minister Fleming made a valiant attempt to prove that the exchange crisis really did not develop until the election weekend, so nothing had been concealed.

After listening to the debate, it had to be said that the Government had left something to be desired. The nagging question remains: did the Government consult facts to save its political skin, or as much of it as could be saved?

Reliable informants say that Prime Minister refused to implement an austerity program when it was presented as a necessity by Bank of Canada Governor Louis Rasminsky.

He is said to have told Mr. Rasminsky that he could never do that unless Opposition Leader Pearson agreed not to attack him for it.

It is public knowledge now, Mr. Diefenbaker himself revealed it, that Mr Rasminsky and Mr Pearson had a private meeting shortly after the election.

The Bank of Canada Governor was described as "almost frantic" during this meeting, because he couldn't get Mr Pearson did not agree to co-operate the Prime Minister promptly rejected the advice.

Mr Diefenbaker did not agree to co-operate with Mr Pearson because he is not in the public interest. This, it is believed, is the background to the "cooling off period" Mr Diefenbaker asked for, and for Mr Pearson's silence during the summer.

These crucial and decisive events must have left a residue of suspicion anger and resentment in both men.

Mr Diefenbaker no doubt firmly believes that Mr Pearson's attacks on the Government during the campaign played an important role in the dollar crisis.

Mr Pearson believes just as firmly that the Prime Minister of Canada did defraud the people, and that his actions perilously close to financial ruin for the sake of his own political career.

No one can solve these conflicting positions except the voters.

The key to the life of this Parliament is all no doubt come with the budget, which may be presented early in the new year. By then there are some real grafter lists, and the Conservatives allege, the Liberals and Creditors are not going to like it.

But by the same token the Social Creditors may find out they have voted for the Government once too often. They may never get a chance to register their dis approval. Armed with strong budget proposals with a throne speech that makes a serviceable election platform, Mr. Diefenbaker may seize the initiative and dissolve the House. He could then go to the country undefeated, with a program for action.

But in spite of the promises, the voters in that election will decide on one other important matter a small question of alleged electoral fraud

GAS WELLS DRILLED

There are several gas wells being drilled in the districts this fall. One has been completed over the weekend on the Rose Hamilton farm or better known as the Matt Engbrecht farm It is believed they are now drilling on the Sauerborn farm, near Rose Coulee.

The rain Saturday and Sunday should have again stopped the threshing and combining of those fields late crops. There are still a few in the district who have not finished threshing and several who are trying to get their balling done and hayings completed.

New theory of relativity

A newly adopted Canadian impressed us last week with an incisive condemnation of today's theory of relativity: that things are good or bad in relation to the degree in which they conform to behavior of the rest of the community. Dr. Herbert Himes, dean of the Canadian Memorial Chiropractic College, made the striking observation there is no black and white in sin or good behavior anymore . . . if "everyone else does it", then it ceases to be sinful, he pointed out. Or our modern morality makes it so, at any rate

Dr. Himes was not condemning Canadians alone for this, but just as much his native Americans

We are entirely in agreement with Dr. Himes in this. Certainly changing times bring changing standards in many fields, but there are just as certainly some areas where "absolute" standards prevail, and until the world is willing to accept this as a fact, and for as long as we condone the grey area between white and black as it applies to our behavior, for this long the world is sliding downhill.

Doing their duty

Much has been heard in recent weeks over the obstructionist tactics the Liberal party is applying at Ottawa, starting with Mr. Pearson's immediate and long heralded motion of non-confidence, and continuing almost daily as often as the members find the opportunity. Even many Liberals have found it hard to accept the behavior of their party as anything but childish. Many voters have grown completely fed up with the practice, and suggested that what we need is a good strong one-man rule

A recent argument of Frank Swanson, publisher of The Calgary Herald, is particularly worthy of notice

Effective opposition is a difficult assignment, Mr Swanson continues, pointing out they must everlastingly be on the alert for faults in the government's program. It is not their business to support good legislation or pat the government on the back for bringing in good legislation. Rather, it is to point up whatever loopholes may exist, and strive to eliminate whatever faults they can find.

This the Liberals have been working hard at. Maybe if we recall this, we won't resent their obstructionism so much in future.

Aftermath

Following the blow-up over medicare in Saskatchewan this summer, we were interested to read in The Swift Current Sun recently that six hospitals in the southwest area of the province are without resident doctors. While all hospitals are open, there are vacancies for eight doctors, vacancies which did not exist before the medicare crisis.

The statement was made by the regional co-ordinator of the hospitals. There is a lack of sufficient nurses, the co-ordinator continued, adding that efforts to recruit both doctors and nurses in the Old Country were being stepped up.

In fairness, it should be noted the speaker pointed out there has traditionally been a high turn-over of nurses and doctors in the area, and not all of the shortage is attributable to the plan. However, the government stepping into the field seems to have definitely increased the seriousness of the problem.

This is often the case when governments precipitate action as was done in the Saskatchewan government-Saskatchewan college of physicians case. On the other hand, talking recently with a newspaperman from a small Saskatchewan community, he told us that not nearly all the story was told by the major news sources when the crisis blew up, and that the government had indeed invited the college of physicians a number of times to send representatives to discuss clauses which would be written into the program. At no time did the doctors accept, he told us, nor would they even acknowledge the government's letters.

Score for Kennedy

Not everyone will agree, but it's our feeling that Kennedy and his advisers have pulled off one of the cleverest pieces of manoeuvering the U.S government has ever managed in the Cuban affair

There have been cries over why the United Nations was not sooner brought into the matter, but this, we think, is obvious. The United Nations under normal provocations, or the usual type of crisis, is slow to act, and ponderous. Kennedy knew that in order to prevent the actual accomplishment of the building of the missile sites, he had to intervene in a completely decisive manner, one which proved altogether that the States meant business

At the same time, in order to have public opinion at home and abroad behind him, he had to be able to present proof positive that the sites were indeed hostile launching bases, that they could have no purpose other than ruining destruction on the United States And this meant that he had to wait almost until the last moment before intervening, so that photographic proof was readily available. It was interesting to note how quickly world opinion swung behind the American policy when the before and after photographs were shown

With the one move, skilfully timed and skilfully executed, Kennedy has managed several things. He has seemingly averted the elimination of the launching sites in Cuba, he has demonstrated to the Russians that the States means business in the cold war, and that while it will go a long way to peace, there is a limit to endurance; and it has demonstrated to an increasingly concerned group of European nations that it will not likely back down in Berlin in the face of Russian pressure

There is no doubt that Russia may demand some measure in return, such as elimination of the Turkish base held by the United States But technological advances have made Turkey far less necessary than it was a number years ago, and even if it or some other gain has to be yielded, the important psychological gain has been achieved at home, in Russia, and indeed throughout the world

War Distasteful, So Is Cowardice

Camrose, Alberta.
October 24, 1962

Editor, The Mercury:

I am writing to express an opinion which I wish published for the general benefit of the press public of this area. It is in regard to President Kennedy's statement of yesterday regarding the sea-blockade he has set up on transportation to and from Cuba, and the aftermath that this statement has created.

It is indeed unfortunate that the majority of young people in this area feel as they do about this situation. Almost without exception, which I have talked to feel that Mr. Kennedy has done the wrong thing. Their general opinion is such that war should be avoided at all costs, and that in writing this letter I believe he is now in process of losing favour. things look indeed dim, and in view of the present Cuban situation and the Communist Chinese situation it looks to this writer at that time as though that much dreaded war may become a reality at any time. I for one do not relish the prospect of a war, especially the type of war this war is likely to be if it develops a nuclear content as that for young people around here, along with me. However they feel on for but one reason and as distasteful as the thought is, and reason is cowardice.

The opponents of a young friend of mine sum up more or less the feeling which I have talked to first hand with them. This fellow said to me, and I quote: "I'm only 18 years old, I'm just starting to build a life for myself I don't want to die."

Admittedly war is by no means a desirable state; there is no justification in my opinion, for the latter this being such Communism. Under Communism one would not be able to build this life for himself that he desires so much. Either he's a slave, and it is going to be that way, or he's dead in a war in the end, and all wars are senseless. I am a veteran of two wars, and I don't want to see my self or any other young man go through it again. This is not a selfish attitude, and I mean this most sincerely, but rather the attitude of the democratic way of life that is not likely back down in Berlin in the face of Russian pressure

There is no doubt that Russia may demand some measure in return, such as elimination of the Turkish base held by the United States But technological advances have made Turkey far less necessary than it was a number years ago, and even if it or some other gain has to be yielded, the important psychological gain has been achieved at home, in Russia, and indeed throughout the world and if at this time we are delved into World War III they will not be the only ones. One of them is the Kennedy's stand on Cuba's situation . . . and the public will believe. Khrushchev says that a peaceful solution can be reached for home defence purposes, and say defence rather the U.S.A. nor any other country has the right to invade or attack or should we have for defence purposes. But anyone who has enough intelligence to read this has the intelligence to figure out for themselves that any time a country has on its soil missiles capable of reaching distances of 2,400 miles it can hardly be for any other reason than aggression most especially a country the size of Cuba. And to this time neither Cuba or Russia have denied having these missiles on Cuban soil. In addition, Fidel Castro tells us that anyone wishing to inspect his country's arms had better come ready to fight. Need I say more?

It is therefore time that we did something to help, rather than hinder the present situation. Talk like a beaten nation, and a beaten nation you shall be. With your talk, you are doing nothing but lower the morale of this area and at any soldier can tell you a people with a low morale are an easy people to beat, for the simple reason that they deem they don't want to be beaten just to get it all over with

Let's stand up for our rights and give our support to our leaders for taking this decision they have made, and I for one would not be afraid to die in defence of my country under a democratic government but a not beat around the bush or try to ride the fence If you stay on a fence too long, someone is bound to push you off, and it will be left to look on which side you fell Let us give President Kennedy and the United States all of the support that we possibly can, and at the same time show our leaders and statesmen whose government they are supporting in this potential battleship to say so

Russia likens to not want war

Yours truly,
K. W. Enns

RESILIENCE

Two cross-country truckers were having coffee in a highway cafe. Shaking their head, one said: "I'll never! That narrow bridge just down the road got me worried. Why, I'll bet I broke over rust on it!"

"Shucks", laughed the other. "Nothin' to worry about there. Why, that old 'bridge ain't strong enough to HOLD two trucks!"

RECEIVING APPEARANCE

A man from a rural area made his first visit to New York City. He went into a restaurant and entered what appeared to him a rather meager meal. When the bill was presented, it totalled $10.56. He looked at the amount twice to be sure he had it right, then he turned to the waiter, smiled and said, "Waiter, you've made a mistake. I've got a lot more money than that".

By George!

The English language is not easy to be confusing for anyone trying to learn it. As a matter of fact, it is tough enough sometimes for the poor editor. For instance, the placing of the inconsistent apostrophe could mean the difference between a serious and a comical piece of writing. Many times the newspaper office from correspondents or clubs and societies, receives a story something like:

The Mrs. Allen Johns spent the weekend at John Smiths. Two of the ages children are ill with the measles and it is feared that only one will survive. Mrs. Alma Jones visited with Mr. and Mrs. Smith but should the sick couple or one before she left.

It could mean one of two things. John Smith is the only owner of the home and has to do all the cooking and cleaning for the two sick children, or the pair of sick children belong to the Smith family. Mrs. Jones spent the weekend with Mr. Smith. If the latter is the case, Mr. Smith is a widower perhaps. Mr. Smith has to add not like to see the story in paper. If he were not like to see it appear, that is a very low opinion paper well the editor might find himself involved in an embarrassing situation.

Then there is English spelling which must be equally confusing for those learning the language. A word is spelled "rough", why isn't self spelled "ruff"? Or if "rough is spelled plough why isn't "cow spelled "cough"?

The little poem seems appropriate:

The wind was rough
And cold and blough,
And the bee's knees made her snough

I blew a dough
And choked the brough
From the milk inside the couch

I fumbled her through
Her nose turned blough
And the wind the tastes rough

I blew no dough,
There came the smough
The weather was a cruel thing

It made her cough
Please do not smough
Her cheeks with her last blow cough

It was moved by Mrs. Grace Appleby and seconded by Mr. Hurnen that the minutes be accepted as read. Carried. There was no business arising from the minutes.

1. What do you think should be the next topic at Home and School meeting?
2. How do you suggest it be handled — Panel, a Debate, a Speaker?

Couple married in Tofield observe 50th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Maurer observed their 50th wedding anniversary Sunday, Oct. 21. To mark the occasion, open house was held for them at their home, to 175 relatives and friends. The beautiful day, which helped to make the anniversary such a pleasant one, was a sharp contrast to their wedding day which was cold with snow lating.

David Elmer Maurer and Anna Stauffer were married on October 20th, 1912, near Tofield. They were the first couple to be married in the original building of the Salem Mennonite congregation in this community. The ceremony was performed by Bishop N. E. Roth. One of the couples, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Stauffer, who were witnesses at the wedding, were also present at the golden wedding. The other couple, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Roth of Dorbena, Alberta, were unable to be present.

The Stauffers and D. E. Maurer were among the first Mennonites to move from Nebraska to Tofield. Mr. Maurer bought a farm 12 miles south-east of Tofield. With the exception of the winter 1961-62 they lived the entire fifty years on this farm.

Mr. and Mrs Maurer have six children: Lorene (Mrs. Wm. Wideman) and John of Tofield, Mildred (Mrs. Gordon Buechert) and Edna (Mrs. Neil Good) both of Chestnut, Erma (Mrs. Frank Maatz) of Kalispel, Montana, and Freda (Mrs. Paul Voegtlin) of Ryley. They have twenty grandchildren.

Among the many gifts and congratulations received by the honored couple were a lovely bouquet of yellow and gold 'mums from the grandchildren, a chime clock from the children, and a purse of money from friends.

Community auction a huge success

(Peter Nickel)

Tofield was the centre of attraction last Saturday, when farmers and town people gathered for the Tofield annual Shoppers' Festival. The auctioning of the Lacey Club stores, together with all articles donated to the community auction, took up most of the afternoon. On sale were such items as washing machines, chesterfields, dogs, lawn mowers, lamps various household items, pigs, a calf and many more articles too numerous to mention. Most of the items sold for a reasonable price and proceeds were considerably above last year's auction when only a bit more than last year, but still averaged four or five dollars each. Charles Kallal Jr., brought the highest some, $17.00, being sold to Ed Beattie. Mr. Beattie got off somewhat easier than year being purchased by CFCW radio. Just what this three hours labor consisted of I'm not known but it surely must have been easier than unloading a truck load of coal, as he did last year.

CFCW was in attendance throughout the afternoon broadcasting the event.

Peter's Patter

Last Saturday night found my family and I, along with the customary of our good neighbor and another lady, taking a fast trip to eastern Alberta.

Intending to return Sunday evening, the last minute I suffered a severe headache and was forced to postpone the return trip till the next morning. The next morning was nothing to save time. I decide to take the number nine highway which later joined onto the west-one I have never travelled this road before and was much surprised at the beautiful scenery. We all enjoyed the trip much more than going there on the number two highway. Towards the end of the journey we stopped in a little town for coffee before being escorted.

Walking into the only cafe in town, we marvelled at the beauty of the little small town. Why was it much nicer than many cities we would find in a city? But the beauty was lost when we could not find a place to sit. Here is the situation we found. The home were of a large size and there were only one or two tables in each booth, although there were a few empty stool at the counter to accommodate them. Feeling rather embarrassed once walking through the cafe, we finally sat down at one end of a long table the other end already being occupied. Patiently waiting for ten minutes with no one even so much as bring our table a glance, I went to the back and asked for coffee. Then I was told by the other occupants of the table, still getting no attention finally went to have their order taken. We still not received our cream. Lighting up a cigarette we were forced to use our saucers for ashtrays. This, to my mind, was very unsatisfactory. Being after we had finally got our coffee and cream, we got charging for our coffee, but being hasten I payed for ours but there was no attempt made to correct the error to the man ahead who was still standing there patiently.

After this ordeal, the thoughts running through my mind were that such a beautiful cafe for a small town is something to be extremely proud of but give me the good service and the smiling faces such as in our home town, rather than a modern new building with such disgustingly poor management such as we had encountered.

Guest editorial— . . . A timely reminder

From The Legionary!

There are some people who deplore the annual ritual of Remembrance Day. Why re-open old wounds and revive memories of the pain and sorrow of family bereavements, they ask? Why spoil the work of Time, the great healer?

The fallacy behind this sort of thinking is that by allowing time to dim the memory of our losses we might easily forfeit the freedoms for which thousands of Canadians gave their lives. Another generation, unappreciative of the tremendous sacrifices of the past, might not hold so dear the democratic principles for which we fought.

Only from the great recorded achievements of the past can we draw inspiration for the fortitude and courage required of us in the future. Canadians should realize today more than ever the tremendous debt of gratitude they owe to our war veterans and to our war dead. By their courage and supreme sacrifice they made it possible for us to retain our dignity, pride and integrity as citizens of a free nation.

Every year on November 11 we observe Remembrance Day in tribute to all those who in past wars gave their lives and sacrificed health and the prospects of long, happy years in order to preserve this country and individual liberty.

Every year we seem to observe it at a time of crisis. The rewards and satisfactions for which they fought and died are gravely threatened by war in some parts of the world and cruel suppression in others. This year is no exception. Tensions have been building up again in the long cold war between the Western Powers and Russia.

Our hopes of a lasting peace after World War I were shattered in a short 20 years by Hitler's goose-stepping hordes. After six years of fire and death we set up the United Nations, bright with hope and shining with faith. But it is being used as a public forum for malignant propaganda as well as rightful expression.

Now, as we listen to the news about Berlin and Russia's amazing distortion of facts about the Wall and the motives of the Western Powers, Remembrance Day calls us to stand fast, to remember those who came not again from war and those who, having returned, are broken. This is the answer to those who would have us allow Canadians to forget the past and let fade the painful memories of sacrifices made by so many of Canada's sons.

The roarin game

The roarin' game of curling is about to get under way in Tofield for another season.

There is little wonder that the winter season is referred to as the "social" season, for there is probably no other sport in the community which brings together a better cross-section of the population of the town and district than does the game of curling. And with this game go a great deal of old-fashioned visiting and good fellowship, as well as good sportsmanship.

The Mercury wishes a successful season to the officers and members of the Tofield ladies' and men's curlings clubs.

World fair comments

With the Seattle World Fair drawing to a close shortly, we have been interested in several observations from several visitors over the months.

In the first place, one discerning visitor gave Canada high points for the nature of the Canadian display, pointing out it was one of the very few which stressed non-military improvements in the way of life, in such fields as medical advances, techniques of pipelining, tidal control and so on.

In the second place, it was observed that pamphlets on Alberta were in short supply at various times, and more emphasis should be placed on seeing that stocks never run out. Finally, it was evident that girls staffing the Canadian booths were usually employed from Seattle, and had no more knowledge of life in Canada ("Edmonton summers would definitely require your overcoat") than they would have of life on Mars. Why would it not be possible to provide Canadian staffers at the big show planned for New York soon, so that more intelligent answers would be given, and the welcome mat hung out?

After all, our girls do speak the same language

Safety device needed

Recently a large truck wending its way down the long hill into the town of Peace River went out of control, and crashed into a store in the downtown area, setting it and other places of business ablaze. As recently as Monday last week a similar mishap occurred in the town of Rocky Mountain House when a loaded tanker truck crashed through the wall of an hotel. Fortunately, the tank of the oil truck remained intact, and there was no fire. The same hotel, however, was damaged only a year previously when a similar mishap occurred.

It appears that the time has come when manufacturers of large motor carriers should be concentrating their efforts on some sort of foolproof stopping device. Mere hydraulic or air brakes and emergency brakes do not seem to be adequate. Perhaps there should be some sort of lock or centrifugal governor connected with the transmission or drive wheels, which can be utilized only in cases of emergency.

Miraculously, there was no loss of life in the incident at Peace River nor in either case at Rocky Mountain House. Let's not wait for something to be done to prevent run-aways of all motor vehicles before a similar tragedy involves the death of a lot of innocent people.

MacDuff Ottawa report ..Tariff turmoil

OTTAWA Canada is fast approaching the most critical crossroads in its history since turning its back on tariff reciprocity with the United States in 1911.

The choice is the same as had to be made in Canada in the early days when the United States was the only big market available to the young country. Then, as now, Canada's economy was based on the export of primary products. Then, as now, the country was faced with the problem of developing secondary industries to provide employment for a growing population.

Left with only other countries to turn to, the nation turned in 1879 to adopt the National Policy put forward by Sir John A. Macdonald, a policy that called for the building of a tariff wall to protect Canadian economy. It was a high tariff wall. As an added incentive, the government undertook a vast railway building program to open up the country and provide markets for the products of Canadian factories.

Today Canada faces the issue of tariff reciprocity not just with the United States but with virtually the whole world. Should it continue to follow a national policy of seeking economic salvation behind the Canadian electorate. While the protective tariff walls are lower today than at any time in the past, they still could lead to economic stagnation if a series of further reductions in customs duties following the last six Conferences in still pursuing the same national policy on tariffs that has been in force for more than half a century.

Or should it join in the move toward freer world trade which the Liberal party has long advocated, but which the present government has been hesitant to support?

These are the questions which are now being debated in Canada and which will be the subject of discussions at the forthcoming Conference of Commonwealth Prime Ministers in London.

Today that policy faces a new and even greater challenge as a result of the revolutionary changes now underway in the trading patterns of the world. In Europe a new economic unity is taking shape in the form of the Common Market. The Commonwealth prefers a trading system based discrimination as to be likely that Britain will not adhere to join the continental trade alliance. In the Americas, President Kennedy is pressing for reciprocal reduction in world-wide trade barriers.

Ottawa is not enough not to realize that we are emerging also are presenting a serious challenge to Canada as a supplier of natural resources, from the very began raising the economy of the Canadian economy.

By George!

The personal column of the classified page can produce many a laugh if a person becomes a faithful reader. As an example: "I will pay to the radio repairman to whom my teen-age daughter has taken her phonograph for repairs $5 a day for every day he keeps the corruption out of my house. Oliver Sadden". Or, "George, please come home. The children need you, the lawn will need mowing soon and the garage needs a woman like you. Mabel, your lonely wife".

A practical fellow advertised in a help wanted column: "Intelligent young married man, age 27, previously employed, wants interesting job with less future and more present".

Then there are the typographical errors, demons which the printer can't seem to escape. For instance this jeweller's advertisement in an Ontario paper advised, "You don't need cash! Instead, use our revolting credit plan".

And from the Catholic Weekly, of Lansing, Mich.: "The second unit in the parish building program is being completed on a pay-as-you-go basis at an estimated cost of $23,500".

Another paper, in the recipe column, asked: "Ever add anchovy fillets and green olives to potato salad? Gads!"

Another recipe, this one for a French egg tart, appeared in a W.E. paper this way: "Three yolks, two tablespoons of sugar and two figures of engine in a tall warm lass".

A GOOD FINISH

At a dinner concluding a long and hectic convention, a group of speechers were prried from their chairs to say a few words.

Finally the last speaker stood up. "Gentlemen," he began, reminded of a story about two skeletons. For days they had been in the mustiest closet imaginable.

"One asked the other, 'What are we doing here, anyhow'?"

"The other replied, 'I don't know, but if we had any guts, we'd get out'."

CONFIRMATION

Nurse: "When I told that electrician's mate he was the father of triplets, he automatically demanded a reward".

Doctor: "What did he want?"

According to authorities, the best way to protect a wedding ring is to dip it in dish water three times a day.

HOW TACTFUL

A large woman wearing a loud yellow dress and many beads visited a customs office to declare what colors she should wear.

"Ma'am", said the agent, "when God created the butterfly and birds he made them of brilliant colors. But when he created the elephants he made it grey".

Would die for the wrong thing

Editor, The Mercury,

If I be permitted, I would like to comment on Mr K. W. Enns's letter printed in The Tofield Mercury of November 1st, 1962.

On reading his letter carefully, at two points I was hurtled by the wind was carried away by the winds of blind persuasion. If Mr Enns is a church goer I am forced to point out that he is not responsible to the principles of Hate and Warmongery he advocates, since this has been taught to him by our churches, which in turn teaches us preaching Hate the Communists than on preaching Love for Enemies (Matt 5.44 and Luke 6.35). If the Christian "church-es have forgotten Christ's teachings, he is in no way to blame.

However, Mr Enns is firmly convinced of the superiority of democratic way of life. True, the Russian government indoctrinates its citizens on the wonderful assets of Communism and we stand back and smile and call this brainwashing and Propaganda. U.S. and Canadian governments, on the other hand, indoctrinate their citizens on the wonderful virtues of Capitalism misnamed Democracy but we call this Moral Re-Armament and the Quest for Freedom. The difference is a play of words no greater than Tweedle Dum and Tweedle Dee because both are refined methods of mental conditioning to achieve a desired result. Russian or North American propaganda is no substitute for facts. Nor is brains subing a substitute for knowledge

Mr. Enns mentions he is willing to die for his Christian heritage By his very endorsement of War and War, he proves he doesn't believe in Christianity Thus he is willing to die for something he doesn't believe in. This is a most ambiguous paradox I must say. This is the dilemma of our western civilization No one is expected to live by ideals, yet everyone is expected to die for them. One is reminded of more of the Jews of 1800 years ago. They too, were in the same situation as many of today. They had heard Christ's views on the matter, But they, too, found it too simple and literally it was disappointing to hear "Agree with your adversary while you are in the way with him" (Matt. 5:25). They chose war. And even with God on their side, the wonderful victories of Capitalism misnamed Democracy left them a nation

Antagonists of all wars always believed that God was on their sides. In World War One, the singing armies of Kaiser Wilhelm went to the battlefield with Gott mit Uns (God is with us) carved on their belt buckles. In World War Two, allied army chaplains were busy blessing cannons while Axis chaplains were praying the same and Hitler was announcing that "Christ was certainly not a Jew".

When will the world understand that God is on no one's side, God is on the side of the truth, and common sense and peace are given to the wheel of Truth.

The heritage Mr Enns is willing to die for is scaffolded precariously with false premises and is not worth dying for Going to war in the name of God will not disintegrate the Communists We have a stiff warning to the effect that one is evil "He that uses the sword shall perish by the sword" (Matt. 26.52) This is a Law of Truth which applies to all countries, believers and unbelievers alike If Mr Enns wishes to end communism, I refer him to Luke 6.37-38-49 Communism is an idealistic system, and unless we have a better idealistic system, we will not defeat it Look up Luke 14.31-32-33. In fact, we have a much better idealistic system but have never yet it into practice Note the senseless butchering in the name of God that has gone on for the last 1500 years Today, we have managed to squeeze another ten different interpretations of Christianity all vying claiming that God is on their side

We go to church on Sunday to conform besides it's good for business drop money in the plate and feel that this is what differentiates us and makes us better than the communists We might lead ourselves but we will not lead God Look up Matt 15 8.

We cannot honor Christianity by debasing buggy and better anti-communist slogans Christianity is not a balloon We cannot develop positive idealism from the fear bred by Chambers of Commerce Christianity is not a short course in economics nor a branch of the Better Business Bureau We cannot attain security in our present conflagration world by adding to our bank balance Christianity is not a savings account We cannot save ourselves by killing others. Christianity is not War At All Cost. Christianity is peace at all cost.

If I seem to create a ripple on the tranquil little world of some may I remind them that stagnation occurs only in quiet waters. To Mr Enns, who seems to imply that everyone who disagrees with him is a com-ed, I wish to inform that in World War Two, I volunteered for active service and joined the Canadian Army at the age of 18 (3-1401011 I have since changed this misguided patriotism into a better cause — the Cause of Truth

Sincerely yours,
Paul D. Franek.

AN ALBERTA EMERGENCY

Editor, The Mercury,

While the Cuban crisis has attracted the attention of the world, one live in Alberta have an emergency on our own doorstep.

The Alberta Safety Council issued a news release which reads in part as follows: "The year is turning into the deadliest ever on Alberta highways A black August — 69 deaths on motor vehicles reported for that month — pushed 1962's eight-month toll to 487. At 16.256 the number of reported accidents is rising 19 per cent above last year's record levels. And the injury toll, 8,321, is up 16 per cent.

Many precautions for safety have been instituted, such as safer highways, better constructed cars with safety features. However, safer times lower center of gravity, steel bodies, trained drivers and better traffic control. When will the officials and the public wake up to the fact that there is a missing cog in this safety machine" The missing cog is RESTRICTION IN THE NUMBER OF DRIVERS!

An effective way to achieve this purpose is to legalize a chemical test to determine the alcohol content in the blood of drivers. The breathalyser form should be used. This test should be compulsory for such a test on demand by a traffic officer.

In 1961 alcohol was a factor in 29 per cent of all fatal highway accidents but impaired drivers produce the use of intoxicants by drivers and save lives.

—A. L. Sanderson.

Know your community . . .

(Peter Nickel)

The topic in this week's article concerns the sport of curling. Digging into some of the history of the game, we find that curling first took place in Tofield in 1910. The first curling rink was situated north of the Fairgrounds near Mrs. Bow-lek's house. Apparently ice was covered and contained two sheets of ice, one on each side of the skating rink. When used for hospitals, the skating rink was also turned into curling ice, making six sheets altogether.

A list of some of the curlers at that time shows the names of Dr McQueen, Alex McCauley, George McLaughlin, Mark Ferguson, Dad Carter, John Worton and John Warner Sr. The first executive consisted of Dr. McQueen as president and Alex McCauley as secretary. A note of interest is that during this time some of these curlers were considered "darn good".

In a few years time the second curling rink was built, located on the corner across from the present Tofield Farm equipment. To be more accurate, this rink was built in 1926, consisting of four sheets and was then considered the best four-sheet covered rink in east central Alberta. The building was constructed under the supervision of John Chapman. Ice was cut in use for a good many years, the building first got its new name of being boxed in-place, and the present one-side was then built in the fall of 1960.

Dr. Freebury was the president when organizing the event, Geo McFadyen vice-president and Neil Phillips secretary. The building was financed by using a recreation grant from the town, shares were sold as well as donations, thus raising the remaining $15,000 from the total cost, of which all has been repaid except $2,000. There were 60 shareholders for approximately 70 active curlers. Tofield has been noted for its good hospitality every year, which have been very successful due to the interest shown by the active members.

The present executive of the club are: Conrad Parr, pres.; Mervin Bill Flint, vice-president, and Bill Christenson, secretary.

Tofield can be proud to have this new curling rink and the great number of active members. It provides much entertainment for residents of the community.

A new list of curlers for this year has been made up and appeared in last week's issue of The Mercury. Rinks have been drawn up and the starting date was set for Monday, Nov. 5th.

The Tofield Curling Club's open mixed bonspiel has been scheduled for Friday, Dec. 7th, with two draws at night. There are two events and six cash prizes. Entry fee is $18.00 per rink, the second pany entry. Entries close at six p.m., Dec. 6th, and may be given to Al Worton, Ben Flint or Ted Hall. The entrance fee is 15$. As formerly, this should turn out to be a very interesting 'spiel, with curling at its best. It should also be noted that the present curling rink is located on the Fairgrounds and contains artificial ice Curlers in the bonspiel will be using matched rocks

The Tofield Students' Union wishes to thank the members of the community for supporting their magazine-subscription campaign. As a result of the fine public support, the TSU took orders for $1,050.00 and was able to make a profit of $500.00. Since this is the only money-making project for the year, the students' union executive would like to take this opportunity to express their appreciation to the public for helping make it a success.

The money will be used to cover current expenses and as graduation, yearbook, etc. The students' Union executive has drawn up plans to establish a scholarship for senior graduating Tofield High School student.

We appreciate your support of this, our annual magazine campaign, and we look forward to your co-operation again next year. Thanks!

FARMERS UNION RALLY

LEGION HALL, TOFIELD

Tuesday, Nov. 13th

8:00 p.m.

SPEAKERS:
Mrs. C. Braitkowitz,
Bill Harper,

All farmers cordially invited— Let's give these people a good crowd!

FUA to campaign for new members

(Peter Nickel)

The local FUA meetings will again get underway for the new season on Tuesday Nov. 13th in attendance at this meeting will be two guest speakers Mrs. Braitkowitz, now president for the FWUA, coming from Red Deer to deliver her speech which will be particularly interesting to the members of the FWUA and Bill Harper of Edmonton, publicity man for FUA

All farmers are cordially invited and are asked to keep this date in mind as these speakers travel some distance to attend. Incidentally, there is a jackpot presently building up for members who attend. This jackpot is quite different from most others; each member puts in his each month. If the number is drawn at a meeter he attendance, his wife gets a cheque for the amount in the jackpot.

However, if the member is not present, his wife will receive a letter telling her of the money she would have received had her husband attended. So just a little tip to the ladies, if you want some extra spending money, get on the local curling rink and see to it that your husband attends these meetings!

Another prize to be won is a two pound turkey. Ontario grown and the U.S. for 25 members, to be known as the Ten Thousand Pound Club. Reports are that Tofield comes very close and that with a little more effort in the membership drive, this could be won.

Mobile feed mill gives special farm service

(Peter Nickel)

The Mobile Feed Mill, pictured elsewhere in this issue, is providing a special farm service in this district. To have the mill come to the farmers is indeed of great value, especially with farm labor at a premium, as it is these days.

This mobile feed mill, operated by Jim Christenson of Ryley brings to this area one of the most modern of farm services, for with this unique machine all the labor of processing of farm feeds is eliminated

The mill is a complete "feed mill on wheels" and can grind, mix and mill any and all farm feeds. The machine is equipped with a large heavy-duty hammer mill, a high capacity roller, molasses blender, batch mixer, bagging auger and a pneumatic unloading system for blowing the processed feeds into overhead bins for self feeding.

The reporter's curiosity was aroused after seeing this machine in operation and as a member of occasions, as early last week, followed it to the Elmer Gieglerin farm north of Tofield. Jim was in operation. His ship there was very short because in the spring Mr. Gieglerin had 200 bushels of rolled grain was rolled, mixed with molasses and placed in his feeder. It was quite unusual that Mr. Gieglerin and son, Ron, were pleased with the processing and the speed at which it was completed. The processed feed with the added molasses looked and smelled very appetizing to the cattle on the Gieglerin feed lot and they came to the feeder on the run.

Although the reporter has had experience in the feed business, the adding of molasses was a special treat, Jim explained. The molasses aids digestion and assimilation, increased consumption of feeds and assists in bringing about a thrifty appearance. When asked how the mobile feed mill operates, Jim said the service would be available to all farmers and feeders but or small, as his established routes The mill will travel a definite route each day and advise all farmers on that particular route. Normally a two-week supply of feed would be processed and the mill would return to the farm regularly every two weeks. He expects to have his north route operating each with a full days work. Accordingly, the mill will be an auxiliary truck which will carry a complete line of concentrates and material for mixing with farm grains. Molasses is carried in a heated tank on the mobile mill. Thus with all the necessary ingredients at hand, a complete feed service can be offered to meet the farmer's particular needs.

War over whisky

Canada is almost taking over the whisky business in the U.S. according to a U.S. liquor company. In a complete reversal of the normal situation writes Knowlton Nash in The Financial Post charges are being made in Washington over Canadian domination of U.S. Not only is there an overflowing load of Canadian liquor pouring across the border but also Canadian-owned companies making liquor in the U.S. are squeezing out the U.S. owned firms.

The unkindest cut of all is that Canadian firms are attacking the bourbon field and may soon dominate it. Officials admit they feel this is almost sacrilege, and certainly unpatriotic. The Tariff Commission has been asked to launch an investigation into the Canadian domination of U.S. liquor business seeking to increase tariffs from the present $1.25 per gallon to $5. Whether the Tariff Commission will make the investigation remains questionable. If it does and if it finds Canada is guilty of causing the miseries of the U.S. liquor firms, chances are the solution will be in "adjustment assistance" other than higher tariffs under the new Kennedy trade bill.

'Surprise' honors departing couple

(Mrs. Ellen Eden)

LAKESHORE—McKENZIE Nov. Quite a number of friends and neighbors of Harold and Irlene Bieb gathered in the Legion Hall, Tofield, on Friday night and gave them a real "surprise farewell" party. After an evening of games and singing, a very delicious lunch was served by the ladies, followed by the presentation of an electric fry pan and a sum of money from those present. Harold thanked everyone for the party and gifts on behalf of Irlene and himself. The party ended by all singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows" to climax a very enjoyable evening.

Harold and Irlene are leaving shortly to make their home in British Columbia. Their friends wish them the best of luck there.

Junior Citizen Award Winner
BEVERLY THIRSK
Kelsey, Alberta

A muffled cry for help interrupted the quiet of the hot summer's day. Six-year-old Beverly had been playing with her dolls. She had not seen her two-year-old brother for a few minutes.

Now, the cry for help sent her rushing in the direction of the pumphouse. When she went in the door she saw her little brother lying unconscious on a mat beside the pump.

With great presence of mind, Beverly ran to the motor . . . turned off the switch and ran into the house for help.

Later, after the doctor had arrived the story was pieced together. When the little boy had gone into the pumphouse for a drink of water, he had climbed up to turn the motor on. He fell and fell — touched the motor and received an electrical shock, due to faulty wiring.

The little boy has fully recovered and all was well. Mr. and Mrs. James Thirsk are truly thankful for their small daughter's quick action.

To such a little girl, with such a big share of perception, we and Alberta's weekly newspapers say: "Congratulations, Beverly!"

This is one of six announcements about the 1962 Junior Citizen Award winners. Calgary Power Ltd. gratefully acknowledges the co-operation of [illegible] in making this program possible.

KNOW YOUR FIGURE AND PATTERN TYPE

Christmas is coming and I know that you will be doing your Christmas sewing now. Are you sure that you have been using the right pattern for your type? If you aren't you will find dressmaking much easier because there is less fitting to do.

Most figures fall into one of four types. The names of these four types are NOT descriptive of size. The types are based on height, body proportions and curves of the figure.

The eight types are:

1 Miss-Woman The size 14 is designed for a person about 5'6" tall with back waist length of 18¼". Misses' and women's patterns are designed for a figure that is taller than average, the other types and sizes are designed for a shorter figure. Patterns are designed for a person with a back waist length 17¾". Teen patterns are designed for a figure that is shorter than the Teen with a more slender figure and a smaller proportion of bust, waist and hips. Below we shall go into more detail in proportion this figure has a smaller bust and shallower hips. Below we shall go into more detail in proportion this figure has a smaller bust and shallower hips.

2 Junior The size 11 is designed for a person about 5'3" tall with a back waist length 16¾". Junior patterns are designed for a figure that is shorter than the Miss-Woman figure and a smaller proportion of bust, waist and hips. Below we shall go into more detail in proportion this figure has a smaller bust and shallower hips.

3 Half-size The 14½ is designed for a person about 5'3" tall with back waist length of 18¾". Half-size patterns are for a well developed short figure. It has narrower shoulders than the Miss, and a proportion to its bust larger waist and hips. The general impression is of a stocky figure.

4. Teen The size 14 is designed for a person about 5'7" tall with back waist length of 18¾". Teen patterns are designed for a figure that is taller than average, the other types and sizes are designed for a shorter figure. Patterns are designed for a person with a back waist length 17¾". Teen patterns are designed for a figure that is shorter than the Teen with a more slender figure and a smaller proportion of bust, waist and hips. Below we shall go into more detail in proportion this figure has a smaller bust and shallower hips.

To Take Measurements Correctly: Measure:

1 Bust over fullest part, snugly but not tight

2 Waist around the natural waistline, comfortably

3 Hip at 7" below the waist.

4. Back waist length from the prominent bone at the base of the neck to the waistline.

To determine your best size, use under-arm darts.

A new very heavy duty vehicle, a dump truck, with an 18 cubic yard capacity has been manufactured by Leyland for use in pipes commercial vehicles to oversea countries. Named the Clydesdale Dump Truck, it has been designed as a tough, sturdy vehicle, suitable for quarrying, engineering and mining operations under the most arduous "off-the-road" conditions. The dump body is designed to give a 50-degree angle of tip in 12 seconds and has a 30-second pay-over return, giving a complete tipping cycle in 42 seconds. Manufacturer: Scammell Lorries Ltd., Watford, Hertfordshire, England.

'A 4-H family lives here'

There is no such thing as just one member of a family belonging to a 4-H Club. If one is an active member, you are all in it and you have a 4-H Club family. To represent a 4-H family we select the Herb Kirkeland family of Ryley.

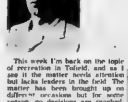
If you chose to drive out to visit the Kirkeland home you would meet Mr. and Mrs. Kirkeland and Gail, Gordon and William, their three children. Both parents are enthusiastic supporters of 4-H and all three of the children are 4-H members.

After introductions and the inevitable cup of coffee, you'd probably ask Mrs. Kirkeland, "Does 4-H work have an effect on your family life?" There would be very little need for her to answer that question for if you would look around you would see 4-H record books on the shelves, 4-H blue ribbons on the wall and 4-H trophies on the mantel and you would realize that a 4-H Family lived here. The entire family would be happy to show you around the farm and everywhere they would point out where they implemented new ideas in their operations from their experience in 4-H. In turn they would proudly point out that almost their entire herd of Holsteins were raised as 4-H calves in the Dairy Club. Some interesting records on the cows were kept from the time they were born and these records are used in 4-H Dairy Club work. Then on the field they would show you the grain plots entered by William and Gordon, both members of a Field Crops Club. They would point out the difference in crop yield, due to the various applications of fertilizer. And they would be quick to tell you that after the harvest is completed they will be able to keep a farm profit was made through the use of fertilizer.

On the way back, Gail would probably tell you of the wonderful week she spent at Club Week at the Vermilion School of Agriculture in July, and Bill William attended the same function two years previously, with Gordon slated to go next year. All these for being efficiency winners in their Clubs.

Back in their yard they might draw your attention to a plot of varieties of grasses sown by Gordon last year and you may learn that they are examining smooth brome, crested orchard grass as pasture because of its earliness and decreased lascious growth. From the information in his record book, Gordon could give you precise information on yields and earliness on all the major grain and grass varieties and he would probably point out that the information probably had a bearing on the varieties of grain grown in their fields.

Yes, the Kirkeland 4-H farm home convinced that one great contribution of 4-H to our Canadian way of life is that it builds 4-H families such as the Kirkeland family in the Beaver County.



Peter's Patter

This week I'm back on the topic of recreation in Tofield, and as I see it the matter needs attention but lacks leaders in the field. The matter has been brought up on different occasions but for some reason no decisions are reached. Certainly there is a variety of recreation already, such as curling, basketball, dances and in the near future there will be skating and hockey. But if [illegible] possible everybody's interest, and is it sufficient for all the time? For some years and for others no great drive to speed up. One in mind is Boy Scouts and Girl Guides for the younger set.

Upon looking into the matter I find that qualified leadership is hard to find and is apparently lacking in this district. However, there are boys and girls anxiously awaiting organization of such groups which would greatly benefit these young people.

Interested persons could organize the older persons and seek to have a recreation board appointed. This board could appeal the case to the town council and further if necessary, and with perhaps a bit of struggling could open up a new field of recreation in which the whole community could participate. For instance there could be woodworking, leathercraft, camera club, cooking, needlecraft etc. There is still badminton equipment from the old badminton club, which could be put to use. Let's face it! We have the facilities such as a good hall, tennis court, sports grounds. Let's use them.

To get the ball rolling, comments from our good readers on this matter would be very welcome. Write me a letter suggesting how these recreation facilities may be put to good use. Just address your letters, Peter's Patter c/o Tofield Mercury, Tofield, Alta.

Nikita in the squeeze

With Communist China creating problems to the East, and Castro's Cuba difficulties in the West; with India awaiting the arrival of MIG fighter planes from Russia, and with Russian ships hauling ballistic missiles out of Cuba, Premier

This is Liberalism?

The Liberal party in Alberta, as well as the Quebec brand, has decided to take a leaf out of the books of the old Saskatchewan CCF and the present British Columbia Social Credit governments. The Alberta Liberals plan to make public ownership of power companies the main plank in their election platform, when the next provincial election is called—probably some time next year.

While Liberal Leader Dave Hunter claims that three out of four telegrams or telephone calls to him are from people supporting his proposal to take over Alberta power companies if his party forms the next provincial government, we know of many die-hard Liberals in our own community who are ready to abandon ship. The past generation of supporters of the party have seen it shift from the left to the middle of the road. Now as the party lists to port again and socialistic ideas are apparent, there will be some rough sailing ahead for Mr. Hunter. No doubt Mr. Lebouff, who apparently plans to launch a party of his own, is smiling.

Nikita Khrushchev finds himself in a predicament which must seem unfamiliar. Certainly it is the first time in a long while that the Soviet leader has found himself in difficulties which are of a more serious nature than he has been used to. In the Far East situation, at least, he no doubt has problems that he had not contemplated when he promised some years ago to send fighter planes to India.

Many times before Mr. Khrushchev has made moves—usually antagonistic—which have brought on crises, but these seemed to have been carefully planned. It is not very likely that he had anticipated the Chinese invasion of India, and it is doubtful that he expected the U.S. to react with such haste and determination when he sent his missiles to Cuba.

His was forced to back-track from Cuba. Now the United States is insisting that he take another step backward and remove his bombers from Cuba. Castro says he will not tolerate the removal of the Russian bombers. This may be the start of another crisis after a brief breathing spell.

How Mr. Khrushchev will get himself out of his present dilemma is anyone's guess. At the present time, however, it would appear that he will be forced again to make an embarrassing concession to the U.S., and that he will deliver MIG's to India despite the protests of his Communist brothers in China, even if he forces the States to release its Cuban naval base at Guantanamo.

Guest editorial— . . . Speaking of taxes

Taxes have become the perennial complaint of property owners. The mere mention of the word sends them "a screamin', a swearin' and a yellin'." Yet they refuse to vote, attend public meetings, even read comments on the thornist issue of the decade.

The loudest protest generally comes from those who are driving huge cars, throwing away money on boats, lake cottages, long holidays, hunting, fishing,, races, gambling joints, not to mention cigarettes, whisky and wild, wild women.

Today's homeowner gets education for all the offspring he is willing to foster, police and fire protection, immunization against most contagious diseases, libraries, skating rinks, parks and recreation, telephones, sidewalks, street maintenance, drainage, snow and dust removal, plus an administration of public affairs for which he has no taste, little understanding and therefore no appreciation.

The average cost of all this is $35.00 per month, or only half that of driving a car or of payments on things anyone can do without.

Civic governments should loudly proclaim the services they provide in exchange for taxation, loud enough and long enough to convince the population that the homeowner is not overtaxed and that education, recreation and health services should top the list of any budget and not stand behind pleasures and luxuries, when not left out entirely.

Big brother can learn from little brother

Camrose has reversed the Big Brother theme. When the big city of Edmonton refused to admit oldsters in their classrooms the little city of Camrose admitted them. The assumption that they paid the bills prevailed, provided floor space, desks and chairs were available.

Consequence: Eight middle-aged women enrolled in business courses, and the younger generation had to work harder to meet the competition of "Old Age".

Results: Teachers report they never had such a high level of performance as when young and "Old" tried to keep up with each other.

Touring— . . . . . southern Alberta

The fourth in a series of articles on a tour of Southern and Central Alberta by six newspaper writers who were guests of the Alberta Tourist Association and written on behalf of members of the Alberta Weekly Newspaper Association by H. George Mayer, Associate Editor, The Camrose Canadian.

Calgary, the Sunshine City of the Foothills is proud to call itself Canada's first and only brewery city. It is the home of the Stampede but also because it is situated close to some of the best ranch country in the world. Doug Johnson, manager of the Calgary Tourist and Convention Association was our guide for a tour of the Foothills City Wednesday morning, Sept. 12, which included the Calgary Zoo on St. George's Island, the Calgary Stampeders' Aquarium, Horsemen's Hall of Fame and the Glenbow Foundation. Little can be said of the latter, however in spite of the fact that it was one of the most interesting sights on the trip. Unfortunately the Glenbow Foundation is not open to tourists.

The 12-acre Calgary Zoo is now a beautiful spacious Happy Valley, one of the finest in Canada. Its collection of animals all of the North American continent is complete. Deer, moose, elk, bear and many species of birds are on display. Of particular interest to us was a miniature golf course and driving range. Campsites and a picnic park are also provided. Open year-round, it is operated by the Recreation Board of Calgary for the beginners and in case there is a shortage of snow, an artificial mountain has been installed.

Calgary is the only city every day in the year, pleased to call itself a home for a large variety of fish and reptiles from small seahorses and neon fish to large turtles and alligators. Here we were fortunate in getting a preview of the Horsemen's Hall of Fame which is not yet open to the public. Located on the second floor of the aquarium building this Wednesday morning, Sept. 12, it contains life-size mannequins of pioneer westerners such as Colonel James Farquharson Macleod, the Calgary Police famous guide Chief Wadsworth Big Bull and others.

We had our lunch Wednesday in the beautiful, spacious Happy Valley, a few miles west of the city on the Trans-Canada Highway. Interspersed with picnic tables and barbecue pits, both indoor and outdoor, there are numerous fireplaces of prefabricated animals all the way from a miniature pony, riding horses and deer to a miniature golf course and driving range. Campsites and a picnic park are also provided. Open year-round, it is operated by the Recreation Board of Calgary for the beginners and in case there is a shortage of snow, an artificial mountain has been installed.

Following lunch we were treated to a tour of the Foothills Petting Zoo, a unique group of Nature housemen developed to promoting tourism. It was this committee which introduced the well-known Nature Trail, where many a travel-weary tourist has stopped for a refreshing drink of cool spring water.

En route to Nanton from the foothills, we stopped at the ranch of Fred Perceval, the Earl of Edmod, where we were welcomed by his daughter Miss Geraldine Perceval. At Nanton we enjoyed coffee and doughnuts before proceeding on to historic Fort Macleod for the night. The final article in this series in next week's issue will deal with the tourist attractions at Fort Macleod the Peigan Side Waterton Lakes Cardston and Lethbridge

A BAD CASE OF RED MISSILES

From the mail bag

Ryley, Alberta,
November 7, 1962.

Editor, The Mercury:

Will you kindly print the following letter to the people of Ryley:
To the People of Ryley.

In the recent municipal election held in Ryley I permitted my name to stand as a nominee for the position of councillor, my nomination having been assured upon presentation of the nomination papers that I was eligible to represent the people of Ryley.

It has since come to my attention that as I operate my business as an incorporated company in which name the property stands, I do not have my name on the assessment roll nor on the voters' list and I am therefore not eligible to become councillor in the village of Ryley.

I regret that I was not informed of such irregularities when my nomination papers were presented but realizing now that I am ineligible and cannot be sworn into the office of councillor I have tendered my resignation.

However, I want very much to thank the people of Ryley who gave me such an overwhelming vote of confidence. I regret that I am unable to represent you.

Sincerely,
G. W. Rose.

The annual meeting of U.F.A. Co-op this month, disclosed a patronage dividend rate of 11.3% has been declared on purchases of petroleum products for the fiscal year ending July 31, 1962. This rate represents a distribution of $1,140,000 to our farm members.

Dividends deferred in 1957 and 1958 totalling approximately $468,000 will be paid in cash on Dec. 15, thus reducing the revolving door plan to a 4-year wheel.

A patronage dividend of 11.3% means that a farmer who purchased $1,000 of petroleum products received a dividend allocation of $113. This represents substantial savings and illustrates what can be accomplished when farmers organize their own Co-op to serve themselves with petroleum products.

Beaver School committee meet

The secretary-treasurer informed the committee that Local Authorities Pension Act and Regulations had now been received in the office, and certain phases of the act were discussed. However, the secretary-treasurer suggested that it might be advisable to defer any action until next meeting as Mr. E. E. Wickens, secretary of the Public Service Pension Board, would be attending the secretary-treasurer's meeting during the A.A.M.D. convention, and that in all likelihood some further information would be made available at that time. Moved that the matter of the Local Authorities Pension Act and Regulations be tabled to the December meeting. Cd.

The superintendent stated that the ditto machine at the Ryley School was in very poor condition, it was an old machine and not a proper ditto machine. He stated that a new machine would cost $270.00, but that a trade-in allowance of $45.00 would be made on the old machine. Moved and carried that authorization be given for the purchase of a new ditto machine for the Ryley School at an approximate cost of $265.00.

The superintendent stated that a considerable amount of difficulty arose every year in regards to the attendance of the grade 12 students during the month of June. A number of these students did not attend school regularly, claiming that they preferred to study at home for exams, that they felt that they could concentrate more on their studies. The superintendent was of the opinion that this was not necessarily so and that the principals had been wrestling with this problem every year. The present regulations in the county provides for an attendance of at least 75% of the school days during the year in order that credit would be given for any examination subjects, and it was felt that usually the threat of withholding such credits might alleviate the situation somewhat. With this in mind it was suggested that the required attendance should be increased, and after some considerable discussion it was moved and carried that high school students be required to attend school not less than 180 days during the school year, and that they may not be excused for more than two days during the month of June except in case of sickness.

In connection with the building program at Ryley and Viking the committee was informed that good progress was being made, the block work almost completed, and the roof would be completed in the near future. All contracts for authorized trades had been awarded. The libraries at Ryley and Viking were being worked on at the present time and good progress was being made on these rooms as well. Moved and carried that the report be accepted.

Moved that Mr. Jim Ingram of Tofield be appointed spare bus driver without retainer. Cd.

An invitation from the Vegreville Association for Mentally Handicapped Children to attend the opening of the new school on November 16th at 2:30 p.m., was referred to the committee. Moved that Messrs. Gallie, Barlow and Nord, with the superintendent of schools, be appointed to attend that opening. Cd.

The superintendent informed the committee that parent-teacher day had been arranged for Friday, November 9th in the schools in the county. Moved and carried that the arrangements for parent-teacher day on November 9th be confirmed, this to apply to all grades in all schools within the county.

Moved that the two steel tanks, septic tank and cess pool tank, located at Ryley be advertised for sale. Cd.

Alberta Junior Citizen Award Winner

JACK PLECKAITIS

9840 - 162nd St. Jasper Place, Alberta

It was a warm summer day. Twelve-year-old Jack Pleckaitis and some friends were having a day's outing at Lakeview Resort on Cooking Lake, east of Edmonton.

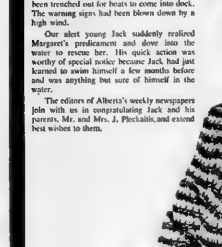
Everyone was having a wonderful time. The game of baseball had been fast and furious. They decided to cool off and go wading in the lake.

The lake was very shallow and the cool water made the children shout with delight. Suddenly, Margaret Bedford, 4, started screaming, but the cries were mistaken for the normal noise of just having fun.

Margaret had fallen into a hole which had been torn out for boats to come into dock. The warning signs had been blown down by a high wind.

Our alert young Jack suddenly realized Margaret's predicament and dove into the water to rescue her. His quick action was worthy of special notice because Jack had just learned to swim himself a few months before and was anything but sure of himself in the water.

The editors of Alberta's weekly newspapers join with us in congratulating Jack and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Pleckaitis, and extend best wishes to them.



This is one of six announcements about the 1961-1962 Junior Citizen Award winners. Calgary Power Ltd gratefully acknowledge the active participation of Alberta's weekly newspaper editors, who nominated these young citizens, and make to children Junior Citizen program possible. For this winner our special thanks go to Mr. B. H. McLeod, Publisher of the Jasper Place Suburban Times and to Mr. H. E. Shacker, Principal of the Britannia Junior High School in Jasper Place who nominated Jack for the award.

Bakery Buns in Alberta have recently upped the price of bread by two cents per loaf. The reason given for this increase was that the price of flour had gone up. One report being that the price of flour had gone up three times in only one month. This statement would have been convincing had there not been some figures to back it up. However no figures were given to verify this and on checking up it was reported being unable to find these price increases in any month. Since Jan 1, 1962 the price of a 100 lb. bag of flour has gone up about 50 cents and not as high as four dollars. The increase became effective in January, March, June and November. However the price of flour is not the prime the bakers pay. They receive a discount of 15 per cent or more depending on the amount of flour purchased. The increased price of flour would have caused in a one-cent increase per loaf of bread at the very most. How is an increase of two cents justified. Farmers are getting even less out of each load of bread now than they did in 1949. In that year they received 25 cents out of the sale of a loaf of bread now they get only 13 cents. If the farmer's share was as much as the baker's, they would receive enough to cover the cost of production and still make a profit. The figures show that everyone else gets an increase while the farmer gets a 10 per cent decrease. Leave further into the matter I find that the value of wheat in a loaf of bread is only about four cents and to justify a two cent increase in the price of a loaf of bread, on the basis of wheat value the price of wheat would have to be raised about 50 cents per bushel. Some people will have to subsist on bread and water for a while if the price of wheat is raised to help pay bushel basis Portland, which is approximately the same as on the spring of 1959 when the price of wheat per bushel was the same as it is today the price of bread was 18 cents per loaf in the city of Edmonton.

Another item which is said to have caused the increase in the price of bread is the increase in the price per bag of bread or bake. As a matter of fact the small bakery pays less than he bake. At present there are two approximately eight dozen of bread per week. With the new increase in prices one knows that we have to bake and sell an extra 16 cents per week or 64 per year which would cover the down payment on a new camera for me providing I can talk the cook into baking

County 4-H'ers win provincial laurels

Following a number of years of high achievement activity in their clubs six members went on to win provincial honors on several competitions.

Melvin Minchau, a long-time member of both the Viking 4-H Beef and 4-H Dairy Clubs led the award winners, placing by being named the first speaker in the Provincial Public Speaking Competition in Edmonton during the Edmonton Exhibition. Later during the same week it climaxed Lifetime of the Viking 4-H Beef Club was awarded the Ralph Steppler trophy for outstanding achievement at the Dixie Camp. Norma Zwicker, a member of the Holden 4-H Beef Club added to the laurels by winning the W. N. Pilsbury Memorial Scholarship at the Vegreville Fair Camp.

At the Provincial Eliminations where 4-H members from all districts clubs competed for all expense trips to Montana and Toronto four local members received trips to Calgary 200 to win trips to Toronto and Montana.

Melvin Minchau, representing the Viking Clubs spoke on the Beef section and earned an all expense trip to the Montana 4-H Congress in August. Dan Huffmann of the Holden 4-H Beef Club, I am also representing the Tofield 4-H Beef Club and Sonja Bugge of the Ryley Cerberus Club all won trips to the Toronto Royal Fair at Toronto, where they will be guests of the 4-H sponsoring organizations.

Since some of the award members belong to more than one 4-H club, almost all these clubs in the County have a member among the award winners. Melvin is a relief man on the high calibre of public speaking provided by the club leaders and adult communities and the serious interest members take in their 4-H projects.

Most of the award winners will not return to club work as some will be leaving to further their education, and others being disqualified by age However the leaders and parents who gave so freely of their time and talent to encourage and guide these young people in 4-H work will be well satisfied in knowing that their efforts instrumental in helping the members reach the pinnacle of success in this phase of their careers.

This outstanding success achieved by the members should be a source of encouragement to these members to put for their best efforts to try to match the performance of these members and to other farm boys and girls to join the 4-H club in their district.

"How far may politicians go in damaging their country?"

The Journal once said that it was the business of an Opposition to mobilize discontent.

We reject it here.

But in mobilizing discontent, in voicing and organizing legitimate criticism, has any party or group or Opposition a moral right to be dangerously irresponsible to distort truth to the point of damaging their country?

This is what is happening in Canada now.

All the evidence, all the relevant facts reveal the country as relatively prosperous. Production, exports, domestic consumption, earnings, savings, construction, the gross national product, are higher than for years. And our exchange problem has been dramatically improved.

Yet Opposition politicians keep talking about a "crisis".

Where is the "crisis"?

Is it found in the truth that today more Canadians have jobs and at higher wages than ever before in our history? Or in the truth that the gross national product is up by seven per cent over last year? Or in the truth that Canadian business is more prosperous than for years?

Last week a report showed that of 21 large Canadian firms reporting earnings, 18 had increases and only four decreases, and that dividend payments are eight per cent ahead of those for 1961, up to a record of $673,000,000 for the first nine months of the year.

Where is the crisis "there"?

True, there is still unemployment. But what the record shows is that a test deal has been done in reducing unemployment, and that right now, in our leading industrial province, it is far lower than it has been for years, while in our Prairie Provinces it is less than two per cent of the labour force.

Actually, business and economic conditions at this time are, on the whole, better than in the U.S. Yet in the recent election campaign in the U.S., did we find responsible public men crying blue ruin or damning the KENNEDY administration for the country's economic condition? We did not. Americans, it seems, no matter how hard they fight their political battles, dislike downgrading their own country.

Why is it different in Canada? Why is it that our politicians alone carry partisanship to the extreme of irresponsibility, resorting to almost anything, or voting for almost anything, regardless of the consequences for the nation, that they imagine will prosper them politically?

Surely the time has come for the Canadian people to turn against such evil, to let its perpetrators know that they have gone too far with their mania for office.

Let there be criticism, lots of it, but let it not get to the point where, with naked perversion of truth, it is damaging the nation.

Welcome, Hereford club

On Wednesday next week the citizens of Tofield and district will be hosts for the annual meeting of the Northern Alberta Hereford Club. The Mercury joins the Tofield Community League, the Tofield Chamber of Commerce and other residents of the area in extending a cordial welcome to the Hereford Club members.

In the past this annual meeting has been held in centres much larger than Tofield, and the town is indeed honored to have been chosen as the site for the 1962 gathering. We are confident that many Tofield citizens responsible for hosting this affair will make it one which will be long remembered by club members.

We are pleased to note that the club was successful in securing a guest speaker of the calibre of Jack Stothart, superintendent of the Dominion Experimental Station at Lacombe. Having heard Mr. Stothart speak on previous occasions, we know that delegates to the annual meeting will derive much benefit from his talk.

Finally, we commend members of the Community League and the Chamber who are working together to make arrangements for the event. If their efforts to date are an indication of the result to come, the annual Hereford gala dinner meeting will be a heretofore unequalled success.

Not on gravy train

"If there is a 'gravy train' the cattle producer is not on it," writes the Council of Canadian Beef Producers in a recent bulletin. and The Mercury is quick to agree.

What puts beef at present prices is another matter, but it's a fact that the price of beef has not kept pace with the cost of producing it, nor with the general cost-of-living index, no matter what the housewife mutters to herself as she goes into a store these days.

Just to be factual, taking 1949 figures as a base equalling 100, cattle prices in January 1st, 1962, had risen to only 116.7. At the same time, the cost-of-living index stood at 129.8 while the industrial composite of wages and salaries had reached the 184.3 level.

Only last week The Mercury pointed out that the increase in bread prices, general across the country, was not all going to the farmer — in fact, very little of it reaches his pocket. The same thing is true of the toll taken by a good T-bone steak. In actual purchasing power, the farmer is getting a smaller and smaller piece of it.

When some of our city friends point to the moves being spent by farmers on bigger machinery, higher priced breeding stock and so on, they should also admit that mid every farmer is doing it. At the same time, it's only through actually increasing their efficiency as producers that most farmers are able to survive and prosper at all.

The acid test

The Liberal victory in the Prince Albert, Sask. byelection was no surprise to Tommy Douglas, former premier of the province and presently leader of the New Democratic Party. With a straight two-way fight it was apparent all along that the Conservative and Social Credit vote would go to the Liberals," the former provincial leader said.

Or in other words, the NDP can only hope to win when the opposition splits its strength in the contests. With a straight two-way fight, the NDP cannot hope to get a majority of the votes. What a comedown!

OTTAWA — As the year nears a...

By George!

No doubt stenographers and secretaries like newspaper writers, get the feeling that they just can't seem to do anything right, and that the whole world is against them. I have never seen a newspaperman's lament, but here is one for secretaries, sent to me by Mrs. M. Harris of Ryley.

CALLING ALL SECRETARIES

If the secretary writes a letter, it is too long.
If she sends a postal, it is too short.
If she sends out a notice, she is a spendthrift.
If she doesn't send a notice, she is lazy.
If she attends a committee meeting, she is butting in.
If she stays away, she's a shirker.
If the attendance of candidates is slim she should have called them up.
If she does call them up, she is a pest.
If the meeting is a big success, the officers are praised.
If it is not a success, the secretary is blamed.
If she asks for advice, she is incompetent.
If she does not, she is bull-headed.
If she writes the minutes completely, they are too long.
If she condenses them, they are incomplete.
If she talks on the subject, she is trying to run things.
If she remains quiet, she has lost interest in the organization.

Ashes to ashes,
Dust to dust;
If the others won't do it,
The secretary must.

MODERN TIMES

A man, after admiring a new model car in a window of an automobile concern went in and bought the car. "Would you like to drive it away with you?" asked the happy salesman.

"No," murmured the man thoughtfully. "I think I will just let it stay where it is. I'll never find another parking place this good."

Small boy talking to his mongrel dog: "Stay in your own back yard, mum say stay in your own back yard! You'd think this was East Berlin!"

The 4-H Clubs in Canada . . .

official 4-H colors are green and white.

The national 4-H club pledge is:

I pledge
My HEAD to clearer thinking,
My HEART to greater loyalty,
My HANDS to larger service,
My HEALTH to better living,
for my club my community and my country.

LOCAL 4-H CLUB PROGRAMS

Local 4-H clubs develop their own need to suit the needs of the members in the localities in which they live. Each member is required to carry out a project or projects. These are related to better farm and home living such as farming, gardening, machinery maintenance, farm safety and a wide range of projects in livestock and field crops.

Parents, senior club members and public-minded men and women serve in a voluntary way as adult and junior leaders. Valuable assistance is also rendered by local organizations, service clubs and business companies.

Well planned club programs provide effective training and experience in citizenship, responsibility in cooperation with others; parliamentary procedure, executive experience and program planning.

Character development, good citizenship and training in farming and homemaking are the important goals of the movement.

WHAT DOES THE 4-H MEMBER LEARN?

4-H Club members receive other benefits beside those of technical skill and knowledge. Through 4-H club work they receive a well-balanced training in citizenship. They learn the principles of democracy as they are put into practice in group discussions, debates, demonstrations and public speaking programs. In serving as officers, on committees or in other capacities they learn to accept and discharge responsibilities and to work cooperatively with others. They learn to appraise their own and others' abilities. This not only develops a sense of service to others but helps individuals build a basis for success in their everyday lives when the opportunity occurs.

Keeping of records on projects and undertakings helps develop a sense of thrift and business sense. Judging programs develop the habit of observation, judgement, concentration and application. They become aware of the contributions science is making to the field of agriculture and homemaking and learn to value and use these contributions.

They develop a feeling of partnership with their families because they rely on the interest and conversation of parents to support them in their enterprises. They develop a pride in ownership. They learn to share with others the joys of achievement and the satisfaction of a job well done.

Truck registration forms available

The truck registration system designed to distribute government work among gravel dump truck operators presently in the business, and depending wholly on this work for their living, is to be in effect again this winter according to an announcement by Hon. Gordon S. Taylor minister of highways. The registration forms were made available Monday this week, and truckers desirous of participating in this program must register early as registration will cease as of Dec. 31, 1962. Forms are available at the Highways Building in Edmonton or from offices of district engineers at Medicine Hat, Lethbridge Calgary Red Deer, Edmonton, St. Paul, Peace River and Grande Prairie.

The registration system originated some five years ago in Alberta. The system is not set up to guarantee employment, but is an endeavor to distribute work among as many truckers as possible, in order to provide some cash income during the winter months. Only one truck per owner and only one truck for a husband and wife team is permitted. Each truck may be registered. It is not the intention of the plan to provide work opportunities for any who operate trucks as a sideline.

Truckers participating must be prepared to go anywhere in the province.

Guest editorial—

Liberalism?

The proposed Liberal takeover of private power was not surprising, judging from the way the parts has acted at all levels, but it was disappointing.

Mr Pearson said last May 'The New Democratic Party's statements are often worded vaguely, but as far as I understand them, their ideals and objectives in social policy aren't very different from the ideals and objectives of the Liberal party.'

Douglas Fisher, NDP Port Arthur, has predicted that "the day might not be far off when the union of the Liberals and NDP would be not only desirable but also possible."

Liberal Rene Levesque, Quebec Resources Minister said after winning an election on the public utilities platform he wants to see more raw resources industries nationalized in that province. Where will it end? We will be a totalitarian state under the pretense of being a democracy. For a while.

We attended the Liberal convention in Red Deer. It was reported to be "heated". This is the understatement of the year. Here are some of the remarks we received personally when talking in favor of private power companies.

"Right" What do you mean it isn't right. It isn't a question of what is right or wrong—this is politics

"Christianity? What has that got to do with politics!" When we pointed out that the very essence of Canadian life is based on Christian Law, we were told, "Don't those who are not Christians get a free vote?"

Another gem. "Imperial Oil is neat."

We must add that this is not the thinking of Leader Hunter or the leaders of the party, but exemplifies the attitudes and goals of some of those attending gatherings when a move such as this is upheld.

Keep on with such ideas and more of these ambitious "power searching" people will prevail.

Public ownership vs. free enterprise

Much has been said for and against public ownership and free enterprise, and much more will be said before we drift into a welfare state. The power takeover in B.C. or Quebec does not hurt us individually and it might not concern us much in Alberta but it could just as well be the business of anyone There will be no free enterprise in a complete welfare state and Mr Manning has warned us in more than one speech of how close we are to a welfare state

Employees of publicly owned services will quite likely find it just as easy as they have it under private ownership. No reward will be given for service beyond the call of duty and extra effort will not be expected. Management from most of our free enterprise businesses will be sure to find easy administration positions in the welfare state. So who reaps the trend? An individual, trained in one particular trade or profession, will have only one place to look for employment, the public service. If they do not like the conditions it might be possible to learn another trade or go hungry.

The public, likewise, will have their mind made up for them. If they do not like the service received they can do as they are now doing with the post office and telephone service. If you ring for a long distance call and it takes 10 rings before the operator gets around to answering, you might as well be courteous and thankful, it might help from then on. If it takes an unreasonable length of time to get mail from one point to the other, accept the situation or use the telephone.

If your power goes off under public ownership, be prepared to wait until it is convenient for the service crews, as you do now with telephone crews.

Also, think of the money that could be saved under public ownership. There will be no need to spend money on advertising, no dividends to pay, no income tax to pay, and part of the cost can be charged to some other department so that the rates can be lower. The five or six employees used by our present public-owned power corporations in Canada who do the work equivalent to one or two men for the private corporations is nothing compared to the tremendous profits on which the private corporations pay income tax. The tax will be saved. Governments can operate like anyone else on money out of thin air. If they do not get it from income taxes they will not get it from some other source.

It just cannot be possible that what we receive for nothing from governments must be paid for by someone. At present, free enterprise is paying a big portion of the sum needed but under a welfare state the government can make the money they need from the businesses they are operating so much better than a board of directors. Also they will be making the extra money in lieu of corporation taxes from services with rates a lot less than they are now.

"Very descriptive, McGraw . . . but let's keep this clean . . ."

MacDuff Ottawa report

Harbingers from the provinces

OTTAWA. — Two smashing provincial victories have convinced those Liberals who didn't already believe it that they can win the next Federal election.

It must be admitted that there are few Liberals who needed any convincing.

In the House of Commons and out of it, no other party has been so confident so ready to believe that victory was just around the corner. No other party has flocked to meetings to such an extent and generated so much enthusiasm.

Now, with Premier Lesage of Quebec and Premier Robichaud of New Brunswick have romped home with record-breaking majorities, the Liberals who needed any convincing are in the majority.

In December the Conservatives will have been in power for a year. In 12 months in office was unable to make those victories to get a mandate for necessary measures. Both made statements that they would not call elections. Both called elections. Both won majorities.

DO SHOW TRENDS

But provincial elections do have a bearing on federal attitudes. They do tell something about the tides of political thinking in the nation.

All four provincial elections rallied the fact, for example, were in some measure related to the two Canada wide of the June 18th Federal election and to the total prospect of another general election before the end of next year.

All four provincial premiers claimed the elections were issues which would have a bearing on the federal picture. Premier Lesage in Quebec stated before their members would go to the polls.

Alberta Junior Citizen Award Winner
LINDA BOCHEK
Strathmore, Alberta
Imagine you have complete charge of a household. You're cooking, cleaning, washing and ironing and keeping a big household garden. You're getting your brother, your father and yourself off to school and work each morning . . . and you're only thirteen years old! This is what our award winner Linda Bochek did this year, while her mother was sick in the hospital for two months.
Yet during this time Linda was also taking her first year of music lessons and she advanced enough in playing that she passed Grade Four Royal Conservatory examinations with honors.
She also found time to win first prize in an art contest and to ignore her many other activities Linda took part in the annual school track meet and passed her Red Cross Senior swimming test.
Now you'd think with all these activities and responsibilities something would suffer — but not so! She achieved outstanding scholastic standing too, passing Grade Seven at Samuel Crowther School with honors in every subject.
We join with editors of Alberta's weekly newspapers in congratulating this girl and her parents Mr. and Mrs. J. Bochek, on her outstanding achievements under adverse conditions — truly a "Junior Citizen of the Year."
This is one of the announcements about the 1961-1962 Junior Citizen Award winners. Calgary Power Ltd gratefully acknowledge the active participation of Alberta's weekly newspaper editors, whose enthusiasm has done so much to make the Alberta Junior Citizen program possible. For this winner our special thanks go to Mr. K. Q. Berzh Editor of the Strathmore Standard and to Mrs. Mary Mercer of Strathmore who nominated Linda for the award.

Peter's Patter

I was suddenly awakened the other day when someone said to me, "Only one more day 'til Christmas". My how time flies by. I can remember when Christmas days took one months of time to open all the presents would seem to take forever. Now there just doesn't seem to be enough time to get ready.

Oh, how I love Christmas! And I haven't even given it a thought 'til today. It's really quiet around Main Street. I see others are busy decorating their stores already and at the T.V. the other night I saw where Santa Claus was already seen in Winnipeg and will soon be here. I must find a place to hang my stocking just in case he drops around before I start decorating. The Mistletoe will be all there.

I don't have any Christmas spirit. Then here I go to buy a tree. I just got himself a somewhere that is out of the ordinary. I don't know what to buy anyone. I might save a lot of time if I just send everyone a subscription to The Mercury. That would take a good idea. Oh! Oh! I almost forgot my wife. She would love a small coat, a set of furniture, or a set of new cookware or china but, when "The Millionaire" passed out all those presents he didn't know I existed so, she will have to settle for Christmas greetings unless I can come up with a thought before Christmas Day.

Such there will be cards and stores, turkey suppers, Christmas cards of all kinds and its seems like every night of the last two weeks is taken up by some sort of Christmas celebration besides all the other preparations and gift buying. To me, Christmas is the busiest season of the whole year. And through all the busy future comes great enjoyment for it is one of the gayest seasons. People get the Christmas spirit and seems to be happier than at any other time. Their faces are brighter. Their smiles are bigger. Then comes the Xmas on Christmas Eve. There in most town families spend the evening together in the home of some devoted relative. Christmas Day some attend church Services others are out caroling. No matter what they are doing, they all wish everyone thinks back to the real meaning of the Yuletide season.

Although I am not prepared, I do most welcome the coming of Christmas and the beautiful sound of Christmas carols, together with the enjoyment of the whole event.

grateful, and it is my sincere hope and prayer that in some way or another the faith and confidence others have put in me can be repaid.

I would be very much amiss, at this time, if I did not pay tribute to the Club Leaders who gave so freely of their time and talent to guide and encourage us over the years. In my first years, Mr. George Stalker was guiding the Club; later Mr. Jack Reddick was the guiding hand, and lastly, Mr. Ridge Lillpin and Mr. George Cottrell. They were all instrumental in guiding me and other members through the various phases of 4-H work. For all the success I achieved through 4-H, I owe them a great debt, and it is my ardent hope that at some time I can repay this debt by assisting 4-H members of the future as they have done in the past.

RE-DECORATING FOR CHRISTMAS

Are you planning to redecorate your home before Christmas? If you are here are a few pointers that might be of help to you.

Colors are divided into two classes warm and cool. Warm colors are red, red orange, yellow to red brown. Cool colors are blue green, mauve and grey.

WARM COLORS they are:
1 Stimulating
2 Noisy
3 Active
4 Cheering
5 Advancing
6 Size increasing

Warm colors make rooms small objects look larger. The warm colors

1 Bring life warmth and the glow of cheerfulness to a room
2 Attract attention to any object to it or keep it seem closer.
3 Give added importance to a certain object by seeming to advance on you.

BE CAREFUL! Too much warmth color will cause irritation and necessitate COOL COLORS they are:
1 Restful
2 Quiet
3 Soothing
4 Tranquil
5 Receding

Cool colors have a wonderful sense of space and restfulness. They bring objects seem smaller have receding qualities

1 Bring a feeling of rest and relaxation to a room
2 Push back the walls of a small room
3 Reduce the size of an object

Warm or cool grays will help when a large is needed.

How To Overcome Room Handicaps With Color:

1 Unentertaining Square Room — Variety can be added to a perfectly square room by painting each wall a different shade or tint. The darkest wall should be the one that attracts the eye and makes it appear smaller.

2 Long Narrow Room — Paint the end wall a color which will bring it forward, make it seem the nearest wall.

3 High or Low Ceiling — The high ceiling can be lowered by painting the walls a darker shade than the ceiling and making the ceiling appear higher by painting it a lighter shade than the walls. Keep the ceiling white or a light tint of the walls tends to make it appear lower. The ceiling should be white in spring with yellow applied in a low-enlarged value. Green light height covers that red-green of the new buds and leaves. Cool light will make the ceiling seem higher.

4 Walls and woodwork of the same color create an effect of spaciousness since attention is not attracted to details of doors and windows. A background created in this way gives importance to furniture and fabrics.

5 Light walls and ceiling will make a small room seem much larger while dark colors seem to make a room smaller.

Primary Color Combinations:

There are three basic color schemes that may be employed They are

1 Monochromatic. All these parts walls, ceilings floors fabrics and all major accents are painted in only one color. For example the floor has walls and ceiling medium blue, chesterfield and chairs dark blue floor covering with the drapery fabrics of white grey and accents shades of blue. You must keep in strong contrasts of dark and light textures of smooth shiny and rough textures of dull fabrics to prevent monotony and give interest to reduce monotony and give interest to fabrics while the lighter tones seem to advance the darker tones seem to recede. This scheme is the most used of all schemes and is best for bedrooms. Fifteen or seldom used rooms

2 Analogous uses closely harmonious colors. The three main colors appear to advance may be they are close together on the color wheel E.G. blue green, blue and yellow green. You see another than three of the walls tends to make it appear lower. The ceiling should be white in spring with yellow applied in a low-enlarged value. Green light height covers that red-green of the new buds and leaves. The deeper green of cool light will make the ceiling seem higher.

Analogous color schemes are excellent for a cooling, pleasing effect. Again all the colors seem to appear more restful.

3 Contrasting or Complementary — The most popular of color schemes is the contrasting one which is made up of two colors which are opposite each other on the color wheel. For the best results one of the colors should be a tint and the other a grayed tint. The following are some complementary schemes: For the combination of blue and orange, use pale blue and warm orange. Combine the two so that you have more blue than orange. Use more orange than blue. Never put a tint with a tint or a shade with a shade. The same amount of both warm and cool colors in a room will usually be the safest.

Any of the above color problems do not hesitate to call my office at Vegreville 632-2041 I shall be

Seed cleaning plant has 25% increase in service

About 25 shareholders were present at the County of Beaver Seed Cleaning Plant annual meeting in the Holden Community Hall on Monday, Nov. 19th, starting at 1.30 p.m., with President Lyle Hanson in the chair

Lyle gave a fine report on the year's work which showed a very successful year — a 25% increase over the previous year. Improvements have been made around the plant, and the office has been partitioned, which has proven a great help. Mr. Hanson expressed the hope for continued co-operation from all concerned.

The financial report was read, and on motion by Wm. Imrie, seconded by Harry Christian, it was adopted as read.

Retiring officers John Shuley and Jim Tymchuk, whose terms had expired, were both returned to office by acclamation for another three years.

F. O. Knudsen presented the manager's report, which was well received. Field Supervisor Ben Bapkes offered some good advice to the farmers regarding care of their fields and crops.

S. Goddard, supervisor of seed plants, was called upon to address the meeting. He said that Alberta now has 61 plants in operation, which he felt were doing a great service for the province. He thought the Holden plant was measuring up to the high standards required as well as any plant in operation and stated that the manager of the Holden plant had given a fine report. He said it was not a bad sign that so few of the shareholders had come to the meeting — it revealed that they were well satisfied with the management or they would have been there to complain. In concluding, Mr. Goddard said he was there to offer advice and help, if possible but he felt there were few problems

N. A. Hereford Club elects Lawrence Kallal president

Lawrence Kallal was elected president of the Northern Alberta Hereford Club at the annual dinner meeting held in Tofield last week. The event started in the morning with a hospitality hour presented by some of the local business places followed by a banquet in the Community Hall.

John Moore covered the event merely in capacity of ceremonies. Keith Aspevik supplied some very complimentary remarks accompanied by Mrs. Ilon Brown at the piano. For the occasion Mr. Aspevik chose solos to match the event stuffing a real "bear down" with an ballade for all the "non-calves".

After a brief speech and introduction of the guests, Mr. Hartland Fred J. Sorbie, secretary-treasurer of the Hereford Association of Alberta, Saskatchewan, gave a report on the Performance Records and Keeping Them Up". Mr. Strobert ended his talk by quoting members in thought as to what might take place in a nuclear war.

The business meeting began with the installation of the previous annual meeting from Sedgewick and Wetaskiwin. Mrs. Ilon Brown Sedgwick was selected as Nominations and election of officers for the sprint and summer sale took up a fair amount of time after which discussion on general topics were held.

Man with 'Coldwell record' earns senate appointment

Guest editorial—

Reform of the Canadian Senate can be accomplished in a number of ways. Suggestions have been made that the "reform" consist of imposing a retirement age, electing instead of appointing the senators and moving away from the practice of political "reward" for the party faithful.

The number of vacancies that now exist in the Canadian Senate give Prime Minister Diefenbaker an excellent opportunity to institute one measure of reform: appointment of senators outside of the Conservative party ranks. Once again we would put forward the name of M. J. Coldwell, former national leader of the CCF party, as a nominee for senatorial appointment. We can think of no other Canadian so richly deserving of the honor who has given so much to public service in this country other than Leslie M. Frost, former Premier of Ontario. We think it was a mistake that Hon. Louis St. Laurent, former Prime Minister of Canada, was not nominated on his retirement from the Liberal party leadership. Time has passed him by and on his next birthday in February he will be 81 years of age.

Mr. Coldwell has a political career that goes back nearly 40 years. He was first elected to the House of Commons in 1935 and remained in the House until the Conservative landslide in 1958 that all but demolished the CCF representation in the Commons.

History has already recorded that Mr. Coldwell is one of the great Canadians of our time. His principles of social justice have never wavered over the years and there are no accusations of "political opportunism" against his name. No one has ever challenged the dedication of Mr. Coldwell to the task of making Canada a better country, and his record as public servant is one of putting country before party—a record that cannot be claimed by many political leaders in national and provincial politics.

We believe that our opinion is shared by many Canadians that Mr. Coldwell has earned a Senate appointment where he can continue to serve the people of Canada.

Double talk on power

Illogical and inconsistent is the statement last Wednesday night by Alberta's Young Liberal president, Allan Bryant, in suggesting a return to private ownership of the government-operated telephone system in the province. While he still says leader Dave Hunter is right in bidding for public power, he suggests private control could pick up the slack that has been allowed to develop in AGT under government operation.

How cross-eyed can we get?

Only the week-end, before, too, the provincial convention of the Communist Party of Canada allied itself with Hunter's take-over bid, arguing that "nationalization of power in Alberta would enable Alberta to join with the other provinces in the construction of a National Power Grid . . ."

Again, the red herring trick is being used. A national power grid has become a magic catchword, though two-thirds of the people talking about it don't know what it means or implies. Is there some reason why it would be easier to set up under government control, than under private control? If economics and not politics were the sole criterion, of course!

That's silly. Is it harder to phone long distance to Edmonton, which is not part of AGT, than it is to phone Red Deer, which is in the system? If the management is good, the fences will drop as soon as technological and economic development make it logical. And if the management isn't good, there is still the board of public utility commissioners to answer to. What control does the public have over AGT, or any other crown-operated program?

Fairer divorces ahead?

All power to the Canadian Business and Professional Women who last week appealed to Prime Minister Diefenbaker for a royal commission inquiry into the number of divorces in Canada. Whether another commission will achieve much more than gather communiques have done is an open question. The point is, however, that the emphasis this time has come from a woman's group.

Not only are they keenly interested in seeing divorce laws expanded to be more reasonable and more fair, but they want to see the interests of women given more protection. They ask that known desertion, that permanent mental derangement be made grounds for divorce, as well as some other features. Rightly we think, they express the view that loss of a partner through infidelity is no worse than loss of a partner who simply walks out on the marriage, or who is permanently committed to a mental hospital.

We have seen the lawyers arguing for broader and more logical grounds for divorce. We have seen the parliamentarians objecting to making a divorce mill out of the House of Commons. We have seen in recent weeks the United Church take a courageous and enlightened stand on the matter, suggesting that refusal to grant relief from marriage may often be worse than the abuses which may come from broadening of divorce laws.

Now we shall see how far the B.P.W.C. may get with their program. As a continuing organization, we hope they have the interest and the persistence to stay with their cause. As they said in their presentation, if the women of the country aren't interested, who will be?

MacDuff Ottawa report . . . They know not what

OTTAWA — Early in November, the Liberal opposition in the House of Commons called on the Government to establish a special non-political committee of experts to study Canada's defence policy in the light of recent developments. The response from Prime Minister John Diefenbaker was a curt "no" indicating that the government is undertaking the necessary study which is to be completed by the end of January. It will be the report of this study that the Liberals themselves should be prepared to debate in the House of Commons when it is brought down.

Although he refused to appoint a committee of experts, Mr. Diefenbaker announced that he would be willing to discuss defence matters with Prime Ministers Harold Macmillan of Britain and Lester Pearson of Canada when they are in Ottawa for the Commonwealth Conference in January. He also announced that he would be willing to discuss defence matters with President Kennedy of the United States when he is in Ottawa for the Nassau Conference in December.

Mr. Diefenbaker's refusal to appoint a committee of experts to study defence policy is a disappointing one. It is disappointing because it is a refusal to take a serious step to meet a serious situation. It is disappointing because it is a refusal to take a step which would have the support of all parties in the House of Commons. It is disappointing because it is a refusal to take a step which would have the support of the vast majority of Canadians.

HAVE MORE CLOUDED

The ludicrous position of the Government on the question of arming nuclear weapons for Canada when forces are already armed with them is equally apparent when it is considered that the Liberal themselves should be prepared to play in this nuclear game if they change in the next election.

Following his visit to Ottawa in February 1960 that Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced that the Government would not arm Canada's forces with nuclear weapons capable of carrying nuclear warheads, the latter to remain, under the custody and control of the United States until such time as Canada's defence policy was reviewed to Canadian requirements. Such has been the Canadian Minister Harkness' policy has been the Canadian Government's policy ever since. Strangely Canada and the United States have not reached an agreement on the question of arming nuclear weapons for Canada's defence policy. I feel this certainly is not an unthinkable situation.

The Liberals should be honest with themselves and with the people of Canada and we have shown how we are implementing it.

As a matter of fact virtually all the elements of the present defence policy of the Government are those which were established by the Liberals. The Liberals established the Canadian Air Defence Command and the Canadian Army Brigade Group in Germany. They established the Mid-Canada Line and the Pinetree Line. They established the Bomarc missile bases in Canada. They established the Canadian Army Special Force. They established the Canadian Army Special Force. They established the Canadian Army Special Force

Your District Home Economist says . . .

(Mrs. Jeanette Zaruby, Vegreville)

DRESSING FOR YOUR TURKEY:

Allow 1 cup of dressing to each pound of fowl: 1 to 2 cups for fish or a roast.

A 12-pound fowl makes 8 cups of dressing; or allow 2 slices of bread for each serving.

Day-old bread is best. If dry bread is used a little warm milk will need to be added: when the dressing is pressed together into a ball lightly, it should break apart when released.

Do not stuff a fowl to be frozen; either completely thaw the bird, then stuff it, or bake the dressing separately in a pan during the last hour to reduce the danger of bacterial seasoning.

If dressing remains which is not to be cooked immediately the dressing should be cool before it is put into the fowl.

To stuff a ball-to-bay, partially roast it, skin up, when about half done, shape up the dressing on a sheet of aluminum foil and set the turkey over it.

BASIC BREAD DRESSING

4 cups soft crumbs or cubes
½ cup butter
½ cup celery
½ cup onion chopped
1 tsp salt
¼ tsp pepper
1 tsp sage poultry dressing or savoury.

1. Melt the fat; add the celery, onion cook slowly to prevent browning.

2. Combine the crumbs and seasoning, mix all together

3. Pack lightly into the fowl: the dressing swells as it cooks

Variations to the Basic Dressing: Use the basic recipe to make any of the following:

1 Parsley dressing: add 4 tbs. minced parsley; omit sage.

2. Celery and Almond Dressing: Add ¾ cup almonds, blanched and chopped.

3 Mushroom Dressing: Saute 1 cup mushroom with the celery and onion.

4. Oyster Dressing: Chop ½ pint oysters; add to the cooked celery and onion.

5. Apple Dressing: Chop 2 cups apples finely, mix with the bread.

6 Apricot Dressing: Chop 1 cup tenderized dried apricots and 2-3 cup washed seedless raisins. Omit the onion and sage.

7. Apricot Rice Dressing: Substitute 4 cups cooked rice for bread, omit onion and sage; add 1 cup tenderized apricots.

8 Orange Dressing: Add 1 cup orange sections. Omit the onion and sage.

9 Raisin Oats Dressing: Substitute rolled oats for part of the bread.

10 Sausage Dressing: Crumble 1.5 pound sausage meat and brown it in a frying pan; use the fat to cook the onion and celery.

11 Giblet Dressing: Add finely chopped cooked giblets and ½ cup giblet stock

12 Chestnut Dressing: Add 1 cup boiled chopped chestnuts

13 Cranberry Dressing: Add to the basic dressing 1 cup chopped cranberries, ½ cup washed raisins, 1 tsp cinnamon, 2 tsp. grated lemon rind, 4 tbs. sugar. Omit the onion and sage.

14 Caper Dressing: Add 2 tbs. chopped pickle or capers. Omit the onion

15 Walnut Dressing: Add 1 2 to 1 4 cup chopped walnuts

Alberta Junior Citizen Award Winner

LINDA HERON

Okotoks, Alberta

At a recent Downtown Kiwanis Club luncheon in Calgary, the guest speaker attracted special notice. She was only fourteen years old!

Unusual? Maybe, but Linda Heron of Okotoks is an unusual girl in many respects.

A popular student at the Okotoks school she won awards in Mathematics and Language and honorable mention in Literature and Science.

A poem she wrote won a place in the school year book and a story she submitted received high commendation.

Linda entered the 4-H Public Speaking contest for Southern Alberta where she won first prize over eleven other contestants, one of whom was a second-year University student.

A neighbor of Linda's, Mr. David Lewis, had a serious accident this spring. Public spirited Linda trimmed, shaved and took charge of his large flock of sheep. Later she showed them in the annual Sheep Show at the Calgary Exhibition and Stampede.

Before and after school each day Linda helped at home by making seventeen cows. This past summer she helped to bale 200 acres of hay for her father and a neighbor.

We, and the editors of Alberta's weekly newspapers congratulate Linda on her well deserved Junior Citizen of the Year award

This is one of six announcements about the 1961-1962 Junior Citizen Award winners. Calgary Power Ltd gratefully acknowledge the active participation of Alberta's weekly newspaper editors, whose enthusiasm has done so much to make the Alberta Junior Citizen program possible. For this winner our special thanks go to Mr. C. A. Dafoe, editor of the High River Times and to Mrs. E. S. Scott of Okotoks who nominated Linda for the award.

Vol. 11 – No. 15 Rural Alberta and Western Weekly Supplements Thursday, December 13th, 1962

Introduction of oral polio vaccine in province soon

Large scale introduction into Alberta of Sabin oral polio vaccine will start shortly after the new year. The Alberta Department of Health program calls for the administering of two doses of the liquid antigen with at least a six-week interval to those Albertans who previously have received a full series of Salk vaccine injections.

Concurrent with the administering of oral vaccine will be a campaign to urge all residents to accept Salk vaccine, and implementation of an individual reward system for each person receiving Sabin vaccine.

The immunization program will be carried out entirely by Municipal Health Units and City Health Departments during the winter months when other issues are less prevalent, and the chances of spreading polio viruses by natural means are reduced. Alberta Department of Health officials have ordered 1,170,000 doses of the vaccine for the program.

The first round of feedings will commence January 21 and is expected to last two weeks. Second applications of the vaccine will commence March 16, 1963.

Health units are expected to recruit volunteer workers for the campaign to assist in recording and other duties. The vaccine itself will be given on a small cube of sugar.

Excluded from receiving the vaccine are those who have not received Salk injections, persons suffering from acute febrile illness, debilitating diseases and persons who have received another live virus vaccine such as measles, pox, or yellow fever within 21 days of the oral immunization. Albertans who are eligible for oral vaccine will be excluded from smallpox vaccinations for 21 days before and after administration.

Arrangements have been made to ensure workers may receive the vaccine after regular working hours.

His wife and three school-age children will move to Ryley during the Christmas holidays and will occupy the suite above the old locker plant.

Operation sick list

(Peter Nichol)

Being without an ambulance for quite some time, a group of Holden residents got together and discussed the matter, resulting in the idea of a blitz campaign called "Operation Sick Lift". The campaign will begin with a "kick-off" breakfast at Sam's Coffee shop, at 9:30 sharp, Thursday morning, Dec. 13th. After breakfast, teams of canvassers, including one farmer and one rural resident, will begin the canvass in both town and country for donations towards an ambulance for Holden and district. The objective is $2,500

Top canvassers will be heard on CFYW throughout the day as to how the campaign is progressing. Any local or district residents not intending to be home on this day may make their donation at Matt's Insurance Agency, the headquarters for the campaign.

The campaign has the full support of the Village Council, and if the objective is reached the Village will maintain and share the badly needed ambulance.

Anyone for sleigh riding?

One of the local residents noticing his team of horses prancing around the pasture the other day, and apparently having the Christmas Spirit in him, decided to bring back some of the last Christmas spirit by offering his team, sleigh and himself as driver, to anyone who would like to go sleigh-riding. He has opened this offer to any organization, church group, or just anyone wishing to go caroling or riding.

This sounds like a lot of fun and adventure no one should miss. But note that anyone wishing to avail himself of this offer is asked to phone The Mercury Office at 144, and the message will be relayed to the ownerring party, who wishes to know as soon as possible, as there are sleighs to get back into shape and times to be arranged for the different occasions.

AMA short on responsibility

Much publicity has been given to the recent announcement that "ghost" or unmarked cars are being used by the RCMP on Alberta highways. And much concern has been expressed by the motoring public at this lack of sporting approach.

Not the least furore has been stirred by the highly irresponsible statement recently of the Alberta Motor Association that the purpose of traffic law enforcement should be to prevent infractions rather than punish offenders. If this was made at the annual meeting, and thus the official policy of this organization, we personally can vouch for the fact that the statement does not represent the thinking of ALL its members.

How ridiculous can we become? What are the RCMP supposed to do when they see speed or other regulations being broken . . . laugh at the offenders and say "ha, ha ha, I tried to prevent you from breaking the law, but ha, ha, ha, you certainly beat me this time"? What does the AMA suppose enforcement means if it is not insisting that regulations be followed and meeting out punishment to malefactors? Have they any suggestion for preventing infractions without punishment of offenders? Would they want to drive without the knowledge that every possible precaution was being taken for their safety?

Personally, we're grateful every time we see a patrol car on the highway, and we're pleased to know that in some unknown car there may be a "ghost" mountie, or that hidden behind some bush may be a radar. Sure, we may be caught some time, but we hope when that time comes we'll have the grace not to flame "poor sport".

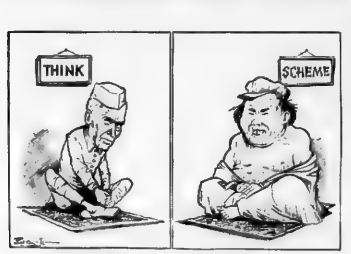
We hope, too, we may be able to recall the life they're trying to save may be our own.

Progress for HSA

The national convention of Home and School Associations recently asked the government to study the possibility of Canada changing to the metric system of weights and measures. The Minister of Trade and Commerce pointed out that study is already underway, but said that developments in the United Kingdom and the United States are being closely watched in this field.

Since most of Canada's trading is with these two countries, there is considerable merit in this caution, but there may also be some merit in helping to set the pace. Ramifications of a total switch to metric measure are almost endless, and the cost would be staggering, so that it might more easily be initiated by a smaller country than a larger one, and lessons here would help our larger friends.

At the same time, we are interested in a suggestion being advanced by the paper industry that reams, quires, odd-measure bases for weight and similar bits of antiquity be switched to one simple standard based on a 1,000 square inches. If similar moves were made in many industries, such as eliminating tons and such oddities as the long ton, the switch-over might be made in stages, with considerably less overall upset to the business world, but contributing greater efficiency.



ASIAN CONTEMPLATION

MacDuff Ottawa report . . . More new Canadians?

OTTAWA.—A quiet revolution is afoot in Canada's immigration branch. Since February may be about to burst into the open.

The lowdown was laid in January when the Hon. Ellen Fairclough, then Minister of Citizenship and Immigration, announced Canada's new method of selecting her citizens. No longer were we to discriminate on the basis of geography with Asia and Africa virtually excluded. In future as Miss Fairclough's words, we would "lay primary stress on education level and skills as the main condition of admissibility regardless of the country of origin of the applicants".

With immigration down to a mere trickle due to lack of jobs opportunities here a buoyant economy in Europe and a lack of understanding in Asian and African countries no new pattern has yet emerged from the change in policy.

But recently the new immigration minister The Hon. Richard Bell in a Toronto speech announced an immigration target of one per cent of population.

Liberal Leader Lester Pearson, who has been catching the Prime Minister off base more than once on previous occasions, quickly followed any measure of pick-up in job opportunities in the coming year and a resolution in the House of Commons whether this increase.

This is presently why Mr Bell is making speeches about expanding immigration. If he is to achieve his target two things will be necessary

1 A willingness on the part of Canadians generally to accept the new numbers and the new character. In 1907 Prime Minister Mackenzie King declared in the House of Commons that Canadians did not wish to see the basic characteristics of our population changed. Until today that has been the ruling concept of all immigration policy.

2 A firm and consistent Government policy that will promote immigration by selling Canada abroad and providing ready entry to handle it.

Neither of these has been achieved in the past. Governments have changed with the beginning of each new immigration year. Ministers have changed with bewildering frequency. Prime Ministers have come and gone. Cabinets have been shuffled and reshuffled. Policy has been changed, altered, amended and reversed. Immigration officials have been shifted from pillar to post. Immigration regulations have been changed, altered, amended and reversed. Immigration officials have been shifted from pillar to post. Immigration regulations have been changed, altered, amended and reversed.

Result: Canada's immigration branch is the equivalent of a bowl of spaghetti. Nobody knows what is going on. Nobody knows what is going to go on. Nobody knows what is going to go on. Nobody knows what is going to go on.

Result: Canada's immigration branch is the equivalent of a bowl of spaghetti. Nobody knows what is going

YOU ARE THE DETECTIVE

The title of the mystery story in this week's Young Canada's Corner is "Solve a Crime" by A. C. Gordon. You don't have to be a detective to enjoy this story. Just read the story and then see if you can solve the crime. Tomorrow you'll find the answer to the mystery. Who killed Ellis? How did he do it? Read the story and see if you can determine from the information not who killed whom.

You pull Chief Tompkins' memo pad across the surface of his desk to a position in front of you and then you study his notes:

Duncan played five games of handball with one of the inmates this morning. The killer is Anderson's cousin, and they grew up together. Ellis is a photography hobbyist. Carpenter, who is a fine handball player, formerly competed with success in billiards tournaments. The killer was operated on for appendicitis two weeks ago. Herring met Anderson for the first time only three weeks ago. Anderson has been living with his mother for the past twelve months and is there now. Dawson used to be very accomplished on the piano. Herring and Carpenter played billiards together.

You now glance up at Chief Tompkins, return his grin, and say, "I know your two men". Who are they?

SOLUTION

Carpenter killed Ellis. Duncan can't be the killer, because he played five games of handball this morning, and the killer was operated on two weeks ago. Anderson is not the killer, but the killer's cousin. Herring is not the killer, for he met Anderson for the first time three weeks ago. This leaves Carpenter and Ellis. Since Carpenter is obviously not the latter, he must have killed Ellis, the only other name mentioned.

Gun Club enjoys 'game' supper

The Tofield Gun Club held a game supper for members and guests on Wednesday, Dec. 12th. All who were present agreed that the amateur chefs did a superlative job of preparing the meal.

Among the foods served were deliciously tender shoulder, elk roast, antelope roast, Canada goose, unidentified rabbit and moose, more mouth-watering dishes. Everything went so well that it was decided to make the event an annual affair, to be held in conjunction with the annual meeting of the club.

A very pleasant evening was spent in reminiscing about past hunting trips and other such fascinating subjects

STORE HOURS

(Peter Nickel)

Through an misunderstanding, last week's Mercury stated that stores would be open Monday, Dec. 17th and 24th. This should have read Monday, Dec. 24th and 31st.

Origin of 'Tofield' name sparks interest in Eng.

Readers of The Mercury will recall that some time ago, Mr. Stinson, the town secretary, received a query from Mr. F. Hewitt of Streatley, England, inquiring as to the origin of the name of the town of Tofield.

Mr. Stinson replied to Mr. Hewitt, giving him the information requested and also informing him that Mrs. Edith Rogers, daughter of Dr. Tofield, for whom the town was named, was still a resident of Tofield.

Just lately, Mr Stinson again received a letter from Mr. Hewitt. Enclosed with the letter were two clippings which explained how Mr Hewitt had heard of Tofield. One clipping was a brief account of the death in May, 1950, of the Tofield Sisstene twins, Beverly Ella Brenda Townsend, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Bud Townsend. The birth of these little girls, and the Art exhibit in Bruce school

(Mrs. N. L. Campbell)

HOLDEN, Dec. 15. — Under the sponsorship of the local A.T.A. on the evening of December 11th, an Art Exhibit from Edmonton Art Gallery was on display in Bruce School. Dawn Bell, principal of Bruce School, also the local president, was master of ceremonies.

Jack Taylor from the University of Alberta who is a prominent Edmonton artist, was guest speaker, explaining each group exhibit.

A good crowd was in attendance, with visitors from Tofield, Ryley, Holden and Viking Doomsday Book as "Stoculai", which was a Saxon name. There appears to be no record of the meaning of the word "Tofield" in "fal or "fey", means a "clearing in the forest".

As result of this survey, the country was divided into a number of areas which were placed under control or jurisdiction of relatives or favorites of the king. A part of Buckinghamshire, including Stoculai, was placed under the king's cousin, Walter de Clifford.

Much of the history of Stowkley has been taken from the church records. The church, the Church of St. Michael, is reputed to have been built in or around 1150 A.D., and is in the Norman style and is said to be among the most ancient and best preserved Norman architecture remaining in the country.

Thank you for your letter of October 20, which my wife and I found most interesting and descriptive.

Although Dr. J. H. Tofield was presumably born in Yorkshire, it is quite possible that his ancestors originated from Stowkley in Buckinghamshire which was, and still is, looked upon as "the home of the Tofields" as in fact one area of Stowkley still goes under the name of Tofield, and we would suggest that your town is the only other place in the world to bear that name.

Now, Stowkley is a very old village which dates it's known origin to about the year 1086. In that year the English were defeated in battle by William, Duke of Normandy at the Battle of Hastings, in which action King Harold, last of the Saxon kings, was killed.

Soon after this battle, the Duke of Normandy ascended the throne to England as King William I. Soon after ascending the throne, King William ordered a survey to be made of the whole country in order that taxes might be levied upon the inhabitants to enable him to increase the revenue. Details of the survey were recorded in the twovolume Book.

Stowkley was mentioned in the operation undertaken subsequently to separate them, attracted wide attention in many countries. The second clipping was the obituary notice for Mr. Francis J. C. Gaeford, alias of Tofield.

Mr. Hewitt's letter is of historical interest to all residents of the Tofield area. It runs as follows:

Lumia, 1 Brunel Drive,
Bromke Valley,
Weymouth, Dorset.

REFUSES GARBAGE DISPOSAL

Councillor Johnson informed the Council that Mr. Jeffrey had built a storm porch onto his trailer situated on the west side of the County Cottage in Block "C" and that the porch extended a few feet onto the alley, and that Mr. Komarnasky refused to collect the garbage from the residence that alley serves, as he does not wish to be responsible for damages to the Jeffrey trailer

It was moved by Mayor Budd that the secretary-treasurer be instructed to write Mr. Jeffrey instructing him that he will be responsible for the healing of the garbage from the residence of Larry Chin, Peter Jessy and Joe Hooper, as long as he has the porch attached to his trailer.

Vandals destroy Yule displays

(Peter Nickel)

The past week has brought many angry residents storming into The Mercury office with complaints of stolen Christmas lights. The big "beef" was, trying to have the town looking nice for the Christmas season, only to wake up and find several bulbs missing from the displays. Some of the bulbs were found later to be in a hundred pieces on the sidewalk, apparently the work of vandals.

According to latest reports, some of the vandals were caught. Still residents have warned that if there is any more such vandalism, charges would be laid

Wealthy Canadians

A recent report was painted recently by the Montreal Industrial Conference Board in New York in relation to the investments of Canadians in the United States. Pointing to the heavy discussion [illegible] the growing ownership of Canada by foreigners particularly Americans, the Board pointed out that Canadians had $2,000,000,000 invested in the United States, while Americans had direct investments in Canada of about $10,000,000,000. This means, as they pointed out that Canada—on a per capita basis—had much more money invested in the States than the other way around.

Which is quite true, apparently, but it tells only a partial story. The higher investment of Canadians gives them very little control over any segment of the American economy, while American investments in this country give them direct control over many of our most important and strategic raw materials, control which frequently refuses to allow the manufacture or processing of these materials on this side of the line, with consequently more industry in Canada.

This is the point that disturbs Canadians, not just the simple ratio of investments.

A major attack

Taking place while most of the world was asleep, the disastrous Selkirk Hotel fire in Edmonton probably didn't stir our imagination as much as it might have if huge forest fires had gathered during the middle of the day. However, we were suddenly struck by the report that men and men firefighters were poured into the battle including off-duty personnel until 130 on all to combat the flames.

In comparative terms, this is a small regiment of men, engaged in combat at close range on a very small front. The fact there was no loss of life and only one injury, coupled with large amounts of material saved, indicates generalship of the highest order on the part of the fire chief in command.

Edmonton must be as proud of their fire chief as Camrose is of hers

HOW TO GLAZE HAM

Though it isn't necessary to glaze you may want to do so. If so, here is how to do it:

1. Glaze and decorate ham, remove the meat from the oven about half-an-hour before it has finished cooking. Pour drippings from pan. Score the surface of the ham by cutting into crosswise slashes to form a diamond pattern. Spread the ham with one of the following glazes and return to oven and continue baking for 30 minutes.

GLAZES

1. One cup brown sugar and ½ cup corn syrup—mixed together.
2. One cup mixed honey.
3. One cup crushed pineapple and ½ cup brown sugar, heated together.
4. One-cup jelly blended with ¼ cup lemon juice.
5. One cup brown sugar combined with the juice and grated rind of one orange.
6. One half cup brown sugar, ½ tsp. dry mustard and 2 tbsp. vinegar.
7. Sliced canned pineapple sliced fresh oranges or maraschino cherries secured in attractive arrangement by fat surface of ham by toothpicks. Brush with honey or fruit juice.

HOW TO CARVE HAM

1. With ham here on its side, remove shank bone. Insert fork in side of the ham parallel to the length of the bone.
2. Turn the ham to rest on the end of the cut made by removing the shank bone.
3. Release slices by cutting close to the bone at right angles to the slices.
4. For additional servings turn ham to first position. Slice meat at right angle to the bone.

HOW TO CARVE A TURKEY OR CHICKEN

1. Remove Leg (thigh) by severing joint and disjointing. Hold the drumstick firmly with fingers, pulling gently away from body. With knife cut between leg and thorax. Continue as follows:
2. Press Leg Away From Body With Flat Side Of Knife. This will loosen joint sufficiently to allow knife to cut through joint. Slice meat in slices parallel to bone.
3. Slice Drumstick Meat. Hold drumstick upright at a convenient angle to plate and cut down turning drumstick to get uniform slices. Chicken drumsticks and thighs are usually served without slicing.
4. Slice Thigh Meat. Hold thigh firmly on plate with a fork. Cut slices of meat parallel to the bone.
5. Cut Into White Meat Parallel To Wing. Make a cut deep into the breast of the body frame parallel to and as close to the wing as possible.
6. Slice White Meat. Beginning at front starting half way up the breast, cut thin slices of white meat to the cut made parallel to the wing. The slices will fall away from the carcass as they are cut to this line. Continue carving until enough meat has been carved for first servings. Additional turkey may be carved as needed.

Remove individual servings of stuffing from an opening cut into side of the turkey where leg has been removed.

In business arising from the minutes a short discussion followed from the floor regarding the Victoria Day ball that had been spoken of by special speakers at the November meeting. It was moved by Mr. Shykora and seconded by John Semeniuk that the matter be left to the County of Beaver for further information regarding this project Carried.

Mrs Upton from Ryley spoke briefly regarding the Home Economic Magazine and pinned a badge on the shoulder of Valerie Johns saying that she had consented to be representative for this paper. Valerie replied that she would do her best to further this cause.

Mr Budd explained that the evening would take the form of a Christmas entertainment, and called upon Mrs. Zane Bilyk with her Girl Guides, for the first number, which portrayed the girls sitting around a campfire singing carols. The junior choir from the Evangelical Brethren Church under the leadership of Mrs. Reuben Schmidt then gave a selection of Christmas songs with Miss Steinwand at the piano

The R.C. junior choir, under the leadership of Victor Lazinsky with Dr. Cale at the piano gave a very fine selection of carols, and a delightful piano solo by Dr. Cale was greatly enjoyed by all.

The senior choirs of the United Church under the leadership of Earl Hardy, and Greek Catholic Church under the leadership of Father Lazynsky presented some very lovely selections which were well received.

Gail Gill bride of Conrad Winder

A very pretty wedding was solemnized November 24th in the Holy Trinity Anglican Church, Tofield when Lillian Gail Gill exchanged marriage vows with Conrad Sidney Winder. The Rev. Walter L. Hammett officiated at the ceremony.

The bride given in marriage by her father, wore a floor - length gown of white satin and lace Her fingertip veil was caught to a coronet of rhinestones and pearls, and she carried a white Bible covered with red sweetheart roses and trailing white ribbon streamers.

Gail was attended by her cousin, Kathleen Dunn of Lethbridge, who wore a pale blue dress of brocaded satin with a sash tied in a large bow. She wore a rhinestone tiara and carried a lovely nosegay of pale pink and feather carnations. The two charming little flower girls were Pamela Gill, niece of the bride, and Debbie Sellars, niece of the groom. Pamela wore a deep blue nylon dress with a bright pink nosegay of feathered carnations, while Debbie was attired in a similar dress of deep pink nylon and carried a bright blue nosegay of the same flowers. They both wore white lace gloves, white sockettes and shoes, and wore identical tiaras in their hair.

The groom was attended by his brother, Glenn, in a similar attire. Guests were ushered by Allan Gill, brother of the bride, and Brian Winder, brother of the groom.

During the wedding ceremony, Mrs Melita Wall sang "Wedding Prayer", accompanied by Mrs. Stimson at the organ. Mrs. Marie Eaglesham played the processional and recessional.

The bride's mother wore a rose beige double-knit dress with golden brown jewellery accenting, and bronze accessories. The groom's mother wore a green princess fabric dress with green accessories. Both wore rose corsages in evening colors.

The reception was held in the United Church basement, with the Ketchemoot Ladies' Aid serving. The bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake nestling in white tulle with red roses and ferns at base and flanked with white tapers held in silver. Mrs. John Hawkins, sister of the bride, had charge of the guest book.

The Rev. W. L. Hammett was the capable master of ceremonies, and Mr John Moore proposed the toast to the bride from Sunder. Mrs. S. Wright and Victor from Mayerthorpe. Mr. Ronald Wright from Calgary, and Miss Donnas Currie from Vermilion.

Alberta Junior Citizen Award Winner

VERLIN RAU

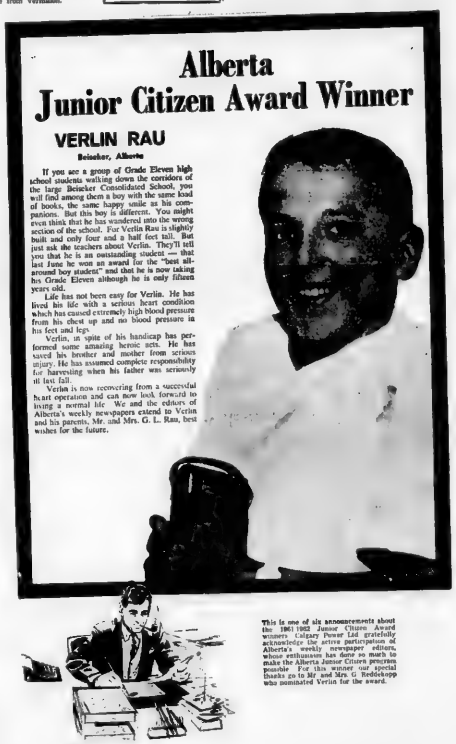
Beiseker, Alberta

If you see a group of Grade Eleven high school students walking down the corridors of the large Beiseker Consolidated School, you will find among them a boy with the same load of books, the same happy smile as his companions. But this boy is different. You might even think that he has wandered into the wrong section of the school. For Verlin Rau is slightly built and only four and a half feet tall. But just ask the teachers about Verlin. They'll tell you that he is an outstanding student — that last June he won an award for the "best all-around boy student" and that he is now taking his Grade Eleven although he is only fifteen years old.

Life has not been easy for Verlin. He has lived his life with a serious heart condition which has caused extremely high blood pressure from his chest up and no blood pressure in his feet and legs.

Verlin, in spite of his handicap has performed some amazing heroic acts. He has saved his brother and mother from serious injury. He has assumed complete responsibility for harvesting when his father was seriously ill last fall.

Verlin is now recovering from a successful heart operation and can now look forward to living a normal life We and the editors of Alberta's weekly newspapers extend to Verlin and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Rau, best wishes for the future.



This is one of six announcements about the 1961-1962 Junior Citizen Award winners Calgary Power Ltd gratefully acknowledge the active participation of Alberta's weekly newspaper editors, whose enthusiasm has helped immensely to make the Alberta Junior Citizen program possible For the winner, our special thanks go to Mr and Mrs. G. Rediekop who nominated Verlin for the award.

Junior High has 'platter' party

(By Elaine Sorell)

On Friday, Nov. 30th, the Junior High held a platter party and invited the Senior High students. Junior High students donated records for the party, and "gag" prizes were awarded to winners of the various dance contests. High lighting the evening's entertainment was the "twist" contest, won by Kenneth Appleby and Lorraine Allen from the High School and Doug Grover and Margaret Hallett from Junior High. These dances were greatly enjoyed by all participants.

Lunch was served at 9:00 p.m., followed by several 5-minute sets put on by the Grade 7 and 8 students. After lunch, games such as chess and checkers, were played in the hall for those who did not wish to dance.

There was a good turn-out from both Junior High and High School, and everyone seemed to have a good time.

Two-headed god

January, as most of our readers know, was named after the Latin god Janus, who was supposed to have had two faces, and thus could look backward as well as forward. Standing as it does at a sort of doorkeeper month to the new year, Janus offered unique opportunities to look into the future, as well as keeping his eye on the record of the past, and basing future actions on his experience.

All of which may be a lengthy introduction to the suggestion that January seems an ideal time for the aldermen to consider the problem of the crosswalks in Camrose, before the recollection of the past dims, and while the future is still relatively close at hand. Wisdom indicates that no snap decision be made, of course. Yet it would seem desirable that the situation be corrected on a local level, if possible, before too many acid comments are received from rural groups shopping here. Safety, of course, has to be given every consideration, but so also does the future development of the city as a shopping centre for much of East Central Alberta.

And just as a sidelight on safety, the present situation, encouraging and tolerating indiscriminate jaywalking, is not helping promote either safety or respect for the city ordinances.

While the rivers flow...

Integrity used to be considered one of the paramount virtues, and a country was known for the trust it placed in the pledged word. Recent treatment of the Indians in this country has been anything but a recommendation for the faith which Canadians place in their bond, as witness the court case held a few days ago over an Indian charged with shooting a duck out of season. Held in Yellowknife, the trial was held when an RCMP constable arrested Michael Sikyea after the Indian, reported to have been hungry, shot a duck out of season. The Yellowknife magistrate fined him $10 and costs.

However, Mr. Justice Sissons of the Territorial Courts ruled that the Migratory Birds Convention Act does not apply to Indians, and in any case violated their ancient right to hunt and fish for food, so he reversed the verdict.

"From time immemorial," his judgment read, "the Indians and the Eskimos of the north and their wives and children have in the spring taken migratory birds for food and will continue to do so and this has been and is necessary for their survival and well-being. The effect on the bird population is negligible . . . but it would not matter if it were otherwise."

Much to the shame of Canada, the Crown has appealed the judgment of Mr. Sissons.

So what has happened to the trust we put in our pledge? What do the rights given the Indians when they ceded their original title mean, when the words of the historic treaty from Queen Victoria, signed right here in Alberta by Crowfoot and other important chiefs of the Indian tribes guaranteeing to the Indians these rights "for as long as the sun shall shine and the rivers flow . . ."?

Japan points the way

We've heard so much about "Yankee know-how" over many years that sometimes we are inclined to feel everything originates there, and label the Japanese as the great imitators. Yet recently from Nippon comes news of many interesting inventions in which they lead the way.

One which we find most interesting, and most hopeful for this western world on wheels is the O.K. Light Switch. Automatically, this new device lowers your car's headlight beams as another car approaches, then again automatically, whenever to dim his lights?

it is past, returns the light to high beam again.

Since a Tokyo firm is marketing them, we don't expect to see the device as standard equipment on all new cars, but we just hope the fellow meeting us on the road has one that he's too tired to flip the switch . . . or too discourteous . . . it won't matter!

One question arises, however. What can inventors do about the fellow who follows another closely and lacks the courtesies, then again automatically, whenever

DARKROOM FREAK

There are occasions in the darkroom, when experiments prove quite interesting, such as the photo above. This was a photo of the new fire hall recently completed at Tofield. In the experiment the photo was placed in the fixing solution for a few seconds before placing it in the developer, which resulted in an almost true picture of the new fire hall on film. Elsewhere in this issue is a photo of the fire hall as it should be. Photo by Peter Nickel

Cr Weatherill stated that he had made arrangements for the stealing work at the school in Tofield and had found that the water pressure there was low that the hall could hardly be used for the work of finishing the rink. He had therefore instructed Watson (Tofield) to see what could be done as regards to a larger line, and a letter from Watson (Tofield) indicated that they would supply a 6-inch line from the bottom room to the rink,

Peter's Patter

Shortly before Christmas I received a phone call inviting me to a French restaurant. Being glad to accept the invitation I hastened to settle necessary business and rushed off. Arriving there I was greeted and welcomed by one of the hostesses speaking French. What they were saying was beyond me, consequently I followed the direction pointed out towards a table. I was given a menu which was quite interesting as it was in French. The waitress being very friendly offered suggestions which still didn't help much as, at I didn't learn very much French during the few months I was there. Suddenly my waitress rushed off and in a little time a tray was set before me consisting of several different types of cheese, French pastries of courses, following this came some French rolls and a bowl of French tea. I felt much better when finally some English speaking people came in and sat at my table. Then for the first time in my life I saw a fashion show of some French models showing some styles I was there. Suddenly the waitress rushed off and in a little time a tray was set before me consisting of several different types of cheese, French pastries of courses, following this came some French rolls and a bowl of French tea. I felt much better when finally some English speaking people came in and sat at my table. Then for the first time in my life I saw a fashion show of some French models showing some styles that could be the latest styles in Paris.

This took place at the Tofield High School Gymnasium and was sponsored by the Free Enterprise Club.

During by 20 minute stay I learned what to expect if by chance I ever take a trip to France. As much I didn't learn any French I did find this new experience a very enjoyable one.

Warning to lovers, businessmen, drunks

(Peter Nickel)

A request for assistance of the Alberta Safety Council results in the "Curtain Moralizer" is one of the deadliest and sneakiest devices of the cold weather season. His victims are often lovers who park with the engine running. Businessmen who like to warm up their car in a closed garage, and drunks who go to sleep in a car with the engine running."

The Curtain Moralizer" is easy to explain. "defective" exhaust system. Carbon monoxide gas from people to be overcome as the deadly gas may enter the vehicle through the floor boards as a result of a broken or worn-out muffler, or it may be carried by wind to the front of the vehicle and drawn in by the air conditioning heater".

The unseen killer is often suspected of being the actual cause of auto wrecks by partially affecting the driver and causing him to lose control.

Ambulance arrives for Holden district

(Mrs. M. Campbell)

The Sick Lib Committee to raise funds for the purchase of an ambulance for Holden and district has been most gratifying with the entire community showing their willingness to cooperate in this most needed project. The ambulance is now in Holden on display fully equipped and ready for service. The village Council of Calo, the Chamber of Commerce and all concerned are to be credited with their purchase and the vehicle will prove a great benefit to the community. All those who made donations to the fund for this cause are to be congratulated on their worthy while effort.

Farmers 'modernize'

(Peter Nickel)

In a weekly paper a short while ago, appeared the follow ing classified advertisement:

one Mitch cow, $300 1 Atlas 16disc $150; two sets of sleds, $5.00; set horse, $12.00, two pair logs, $30 00 mail binder $25.00. Total price complete and ready to go $375. Trade-in accepted.

Apparently the farmer concerned was in town celebrating and finding that was considered a little extra, such as spare tire, windshield wipers, etc., were actually necessaries, and would have to be purchased at the same time as the vehicle, at extra prices . . . so why not the same for a cow?

High temperatures set new record

(Peter Nickel)

It's almost unbelievable, but true! Weather records in this area reached a new high in the first part of this new year. Saturday and Sunday had the highest temperatures for those days since 1901, although it was no good to had very long.

Mrs. Seven Sr. reports flowers blooming in January, which we hope must be a record. She has two little visitors (small pansies) in bloom in her garden 6-4 close to the house and sheltered.

At the same time J. W. Bakshaw reported a butterfly in his garden on Tuesday. Mr. Robinson believes that this is a sign of early spring since the butterfly hibernates into the house, also a sign of spring was noticed by Mrs. Bakshaw as she went to dress the chickens and found a robin in the chicken house. Also in the same environment within the city limits of Edmonton, Mrs. Bakshaw reported the presence of a mouse.

Mrs. Robinson reports that the temperature in the house was 80 degrees on Sunday. Also in the same environment within the city limits of Edmonton, Mrs. Bakshaw reported the presence of a mouse.

Guest editorial—...Thoughts on unemployment

(From the Gananoque (Ont.) Reporter)

The unemployment insurance fund's ups and downs in recent years has received considerable publicity. While not involved to go into in any great detail we learned recently that an employee earning over $60 a week contributes $6c a week to his unemployment book. The employer does the same and the government contributes an additional amount of 1 5th of the total of $1 68, or 37 6c. If he becomes unemployed after paying in for a two year period at 68c for 104 weeks and has one dependent he is entitled to draw $36 a week for 51 weeks. This means that for a "premium" of 597 76 he could receive a total benefit of $1836. That is what is meant when one reads that the unemployment insurance fund is not on an actuarially sound basis. One would not expect an insurance company to sell a policy like that. If they did, they would not be in business very long. The state of the fund now is such that with the fall and winter season on the way it can be expected that a real ink catastrophe is in the making unless all political parties will agree to applying some sound business principles and less pie in the sky politics to this matter.

The present set-up of party representation must be the time for some statesmanship being applied to the end of the "we'll give you more than you ever got before" which is too prevalent in political campaigns and parliamentary action.

Some figures have come to hand which we will try to verify for an editorial next week. They will throw some light on the dollars and cents aspects of the unemployment insurance fund. This is a subject in which every man and woman who are drawing on the fund as well as those who are contributing to it—and the latter group involves every employed person with an insurance book and every taxpayer.

Best seller ahead

In the field of non-fiction works, we suggest the Glasco report on government in Canada may turn out to be one of the best sellers of the day. With the second volume of the report now hitting the streets, and with some of the best reasoned arguments for change in government that we have seen for some time, it is to be hoped the commision's work will receive the attention it deserves.

Ever since learning that one of the members of the commission would be Watson Sellars, we have held the highest expectations for its work. Mr. Sellars, it may be remembered, retired a couple of years ago as auditor-general for Canada, a position he filled with distinction, and with considerable service to his country. It is very gratifying to learn that his abilities have not been shelved, with his retirement, but he continues to speak out, clearly and pointedly, against impropriatees in government. If ever an ombudsman is appointed in Canada, we should suggest Mr. Sellars.

But back to the Glasco report, one of the features of the Diefenbaker government which has drawn a great deal of comment, and considerable criticism, is the large number of Royal Commissions which have been appointed during their tenure of office. However, it is remarkable how rewarding have been a number of the reports presented by these commissions, including this latest, for example, and the O'Leary commission on publications, to name only two. There have been many others, all indicating remarkable diligence on the part of the commission members.

In the nature of government, it is not to be expected that changes recommended would be implemented holus-bolus overnight, but let us hope that the back-room boys will give serious thought to their implementation over a period of years in future legislation.

What's news?

Try as he might, our Tofield representative, Peter Nickel, is unable to cover every newsworthy event or meeting which takes place in Tofield and District. An editor in any small town has a three-fold job on his hands, namely, writing news, soliciting advertising and taking orders for commercial printing. This is his main work, of course, but he usually finds himself pretty active in community affairs, as well

So it is with our boy Peter. We doubt that anyone will deny that Pete is working hard to report all the news he can, but, as is the case with any weekly writer, he cannot do it alone. He needs the help of all our readers.

We strongly urge anyone who has a newsworthy item or story to drop same in to The Mercury, or better still, to write it out so that The Mercury can carry every bit of local news possible. We are adamant that all clubs and organizations who wish to have their good works known should appoint a reporter, for readers are interested in what these clubs are doing. Besides this, regular reports of local group activities can do much toward keeping that group alive and active.

Individuals, too, are called upon to contribute their social items. If you are one who enjoys reading the "Around Town" column, don't forget that others are just as interested in your items concerning visitors from out of town, or your visit to other communities.

These same sentiments were expressed in another way recently in the editorial column of The Lacombe Globe. Under the heading "The Weekly Rag", the Globe says:

An article from a trade journal. Grassroots Editor, makes this statement about weekly newspapers which is worth repeating: "A newspaper's readers regard it as a piece of public property. They feel they have a share in it without actually owning any stock."

This feeling of community ownership is what gives the weekly newspaper its unique strength.

The subscriber who believes that the paper partly belongs to him takes a special interest in its publication. He contributes to the news columns, and looks through the columns to learn what's going on locally.

He can call it the "weekly rag" or whatever he likes, and he can kid the editor about the mistakes that inadvertently appear.

But it's still the hometown newspaper, and the publisher enjoys "help" from customers. Most times this reward is enough to offset the long hours and hard work a publisher usually finds he puts in to get his paper out on time every week.

The relationship of the weekly publisher to the public is not unlike that of a school yearbook staff to the student body.

There's a need for the publication, there must be direction provided by the editors, then everybody chips in to make the product as honest and worthwhile as possible. High readership guarantees good advertising results.

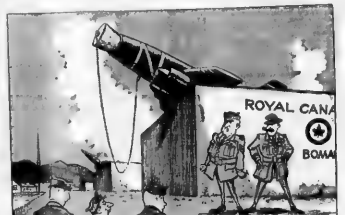
This is a community newspaper in every sense of the word, just as most weekly papers.

Aesop's fables

Ernest Watkins, lone Conservative member of the Alberta legislature, should read Aesop's Fables again, particularly the tale about the Fox and the Grapes

It is hardly seemly for Mr. Watkins to be decrying the party so loudly today, when yesterday (figuratively, at least) he was contending for leadership of the party left.

If the party were good enough tobe worth leading, surely it isn't so bad that he should be flinging mud at it today Admittedly, under leader Milt Harradence it leaves a lot to be desired, but Mr. Watkins can hardly be so vainglorious as to suppose he could have fixed it up all by himself.



"ALL RIGHT, WHO'S THE WISE GUY?"

LETTERS to the EDITOR

Editor, The Mercury:

Your Christmas issue of 27 has come as a most welcome gesture and we wish to thank The Mercury for thinking of us and our needs.

The League has not been able to do very much in the past two years because of our poor financial condition however, we have been able to help a small person off on the hall debt and it did some better until the weather should see fit to settle on us in the coming year our responsibilities will be met.

I would at this time also like to thank you for the support your paper has given us all through the year in our many endeavors to raise funds.

Once again, THANK YOU VERY MUCH.

Yours truly,
T. R. Natochenski,
Secretary.

Peter Nickel,
The Mercury.

Dear Sir:

Once again Christmas season we would like to express our sincere thanks to you and Mr. Meyer for the many favours we have received over the past year. The success of our symposium and missionary social has been due in part I'm sure to the fine advertising and news of your paper.

We extend to you and all those associated with The Mercury a very Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

Your sincerely,

Peter's Patter

Some time ago, while just crossing a railway track, one of the pressmen in my car wiped the mud off his brow and exclaimed, "Boy, that was close. We just missed that train." Looking around rather frightened, I could see no train coming, until the conductor reminded me I can still see its tracks.

But it really is no joke. I have noticed, as regards levity, to comment on the danger and risk involved in crossing the local railway crossings. Generally there will be two cars standing at such a safe distance from the crossing, allowing no view at all. The pressmen are also situated in such a way that there is no vision past the CNR station, which doesn't even allow a fraction of enough time to say his prayers.

I have had many conversations about the subject, and nearly all of them have ended in the conclusion that a story to tell of seeing a train while stopping, but just missing it by the inches and "BAM" goes the big diesel at a speed of about 70 or 80 miles per hour.

There is still a school bus driver, one of the passengers was going to report the lineage of his children, but, in writing a couple of the tracks to get a story about the program would be inadvisable should one of these accidents occur. Then I was presented with a $25.00 cheque by the Hairstyler's Club for the highest standings in the Grade IX class. Mrs. Mrs. Fraser making the award.

Guest editorial—...Thoughts on unemployment

(From the Gannoque (Ont.) Reporter)

The unemployment insurance fund's ups and downs in recent years has received considerable publicity. While too involved to go into in any great detail we learned recently that an employee earning over $60 a week contributes 96c a week to his unemployment book. The employer does the same and the government contributes an additional amount of 1 5th of the total of $1.88, or 37.6c. If he becomes unemployed after paying in for a two year period at 94c for 104 weeks and has one dependent he is entitled to draw $36 a week for 51 weeks. This means that for a "premium" of $37.76 he could receive a total benefit of $1836! That is what is meant when one reads that the unemployment insurance fund is not on an actuarially sound basis. One would not expect an insurance company to sell a policy like that. If they did one would think the insurance commissioners or the state of the fund now is such that with the fall and winter season on the way it can be expected that a red ink catastrophe is in the making unless all political parties will agree to applying some sound business principles and less pie in the sky politics to this matter.

Best seller ahead

In the field of non-fiction works, we suggest the Glasco report on government in Canada may turn out to be one of the best sellers of the day. With the second volume of the report now hitting the streets, and with some of the best renowned arguments for change in government that we have seen for some time. It is to be hoped the commission's work will receive the attention it deserves.

Ever since learning that one of the members of the commission would be Watson Sellars, we have held the highest expectations for its work. Mr. Sellars, it may be remembered, retired a couple of years ago as auditor-general for Canada, a position he filled with distinction, and with considerable service to his country. It is to be very gratifying to learn that his abilities have not been shelved, with his retirement, but that he continues to work out, clearly and pointedly, against impropriety in government. If ever an ombudsman is appointed in Canada, we should suggest Mr. Sellars.

But back to the Glasco report, one of the features of the Diefenbaker government which has drawn a great deal of comment, and considerable criticism, is the large number of Royal Commissions which have been appointed during their tenure of office. However, it is remarkable how rewarding have been a number of the reports presented by these commissions, including this latest, for example, and the O'Leary commission on publications, to name only two. There have been many others, all indicating remarkable diligence on the part of the commission members.

In the nature of government, it is not to be expected that changes recommended would be implemented holus-bolus overnight, but let us hope that the back-room boys will give serious thought to their implementation over a period of years in future legislation.

What's news?

Try as he might, our Tofield representative, Peter Nickel, is unable to cover every newsworthy event or meeting which takes place in Tofield and District. An editor in any small town has a very difficult job on his hands, namely, writing news, soliciting advertising and taking orders for commercial printing. This is his main work, of course, but he usually finds himself pretty active in community affairs, as well.

So it is with our boy Peter. We doubt that anyone will deny that Pete is working hard to report all the news he can, but, as is the case with any weekly, he cannot do it alone. He needs the help of all our readers.

We strongly urge anyone who has a newsworthy item or story to phone it in to The Mercury, or better still, to write it out so that The Mercury can carry every bit of local news possible. We suggest that all clubs and organizations who wish to have their good work put forward, appoint a reporter, for readers are interested in what these clubs are doing. Besides this, regular reports of any group activities can do much toward keeping that group alive and active.

Individuals, too, are called upon to contribute their social items - If you are one who enjoys reading the "Around Town" column, don't forget that others are just as interested in your items concerning visitors from out of town, or your visit to other communities.

These same sentiments were expressed in another way recently in the editorial column of The Lacombe Globe. Under the heading "The Weekly Rag", the Globe says:

An article from a trade journal, Grassroots Editor, makes this statement about weekly newspapers which is worth reprinting: "A newspaper's readers regard it as a piece of public property. They feel they have a share in it without actually owning any stock."

This feeling of community ownership is what gives the weekly newspaper its unique strength

The subscriber who believes that the paper partly belongs to him takes a special interest in its publication. He contributes to the news columns, and looks through the columns to learn what's going on locally

He can call it the "weekly rag" or whatever he likes, and he can kid the editor about the mistakes that inadvertently appear

But it's still the hometown newspaper, and the publisher enjoys "help" from subscribers. Most times that reward is enough to offset the long hours and hard work a publisher usually finds he puts in to get his paper out on time every week

The relationship of the weekly publisher to the public is not unlike that of a school yearbook staff to the student body

There's a need for the publication, there must be direction provided by the editors, then everybody chips in to make the product as honest and worthwhile as possible - High readership guarantees good advertising results

This is a community newspaper in every sense of the word, just as most weekly papers.

Aesop's fables

Ernest Watkins, lone Conservative member of the Alberta legislature, should read Aesop's Fables again, particularly the tale about the Fox and the Grapes

It is hardly seemly for Mr. Watkins to be decrying the party so loudly today, when yesterday (figuratively, at least) he was contending for leadership of the party yelf.

If the party were good enough tobe worth leading, surely it isn't so bad that he should be flinging mud at it today. Admittedly, under leader Mill Harradence it leaves a lot to be desired, but Mr. Watkins can hardly be so vainglorious as to suppose he could have fixed it up all by himself.

Peter's Patter

Some time ago, while just cruising at a railway track, one of the engineers on my car waved the usual. (It has been explained, however, that the wave is just meant to mean "hello" and is not to be taken literally.) Looking back I could see no train, until the passenger emerged from behind it and I saw its train.

Now really is no joke. I have had a couple requests recently to mention on the danger and risk involved in crossing the local railway crossings. Generally these warnings are given standing at only a short distance from the crossings, allowing no view at all. The crossings are also situated in such a way that there is no vantage point on the CNR station, which doesn't even have a material enough time to say his prayers.

There have been many conversations about the subject, and nearly everyone has looked on the crossing that has a duty to tell of several near misses. The whole concern, but just recently a car, the tracks and ZOOM goes the big diesel, at possibly 60 or 80 miles per hour.

It is a sad old school bus driver's comment on the passengers on it, but the danger of his position a passenger is not to be taken lightly. Hence the warnings within a couple of the tracks to get. I am sure that the person wouldn't want to be responsible should one of the children aboard get hurt at this crossing.

I would like to some time but again it was the matter was discussed with the local road committee meetings. A letter was sent to CNR regarding this very matter. The reply came back that it was considered and any changes to be made at this time. Several summer hours did make some changes since being the building up of the approaches to the crossing, but a big improvement could be done. The only real answer would be to install warning lights which would warn of any oncoming train, but many a man's hair has been turned grey this until such time the only solution other than getting the cooperation of CNR to have the hours cut further down or the train would be to buy an automobile.

was referred to the Council. The secretary-treasurer informed the Council that he had a request from Mr. W. Dick, of Cold Lake for an approach road to the lot that he owns in this subdivision and that he had referred the request to the district engineer. The letter indicated that the traffic safety engineer of the department of highways was presently studying the situation with a view of determining the locations at which access to the highway will be permitted, and also to have the responsible party or parties construct the service road, which is included in this subdivision. The safety engineer would also decide where approaches could be put in. In the meantime, no new access would be permitted.

It was moved and carried that the letter be received and filed.

Letter from Northwestern Utilities Limited requesting permission to locate a gas well in LSD 16 of 31-51-18-W4th, was referred to the Council. The reason for the request for this permit was that the proposed location would be closer to a road than the stipulated 330 feet. The secretary-treasurer informed the Council that this matter had been discussed with Cr. Wentzell, who stated that there would be no objections to the request and that the approval refusing a subdivision in part of S.W. 16-48-18-W4th for a gravel pit and service station.

Moved and carried that the letter and order be received and filed.

Information from the Department of Agriculture P.F.A. Branch to the effect that Township 49-18-W4th was ineligible for compensation under the P.F.A. Act, was referred to the Council.

Moved and carried that the information be received and filed.

The secretary-treasurer informed the Council that Mr. K. Glasstirer, who had at the School Committee meeting been awarded the tender for the purchase of the large steel tank advertised for sale, had made an offer of $50 to purchase the smaller tank.

It was moved and carried that the 285 cubic foot tank be sold to K. Glasstirer for $50.

Tender from Watson (Tofield) Limited for the wiring of the new grader sheds at Holden and Ryley was referred to the Council, the tender being in the amount of $80 for each garage.

It was moved and carried that the tender from Watson (Tofield) Limited for the wiring of the new grader sheds at Holden and Ryley for $255 for each garage be accepted.

The secretary-treasurer referred to Resolution 564, concurring in the decrease in the size of the grader shed at Ryley to 36 by 48 feet instead of 36 by 64 feet, and stated that at the time he had not been aware that the same change had been at the Holden shed, and that therefore a resolution to take care of this situation was required.

Moved and carried that the action of increasing the length of the grader shed at Holden from 44 feet to 48 feet be concurred in.

The Council discussed the advisability and feasibility of gravelling crushed gravel under the Winter Works Incentive Program, gravel to be stock-piled at various locations throughout the County.

It was moved and carried that each Councillor ascertain his requirements of crushed gravel and that, if feasible, tenders be called for crushing and stockpiling in various locations of the County under the 1962-1963 Winter Works Program

The secretary-treasurer referred to the Council a pounderkeeper's statement submitted by Harry Tkaczyk pounderkeeper on N.E. 25-48-18-W4th, concerning the impounding and sale of 3 sheep and 1 lamb. Date of impounding, Nov. 7; date of sale, Nov. 19; total fees realized, $8; pounderkeeper's fees, $20.02; amount due pounderkeeper, $12.02.

Moved and carried that the amount of $12.02 be paid to Harry Tkaczyk.

It was moved and carried that, as provided by Section 36 (1) (e) of the Municipal District Act, the annual meeting of the County be held on Saturday, Feb. 16th, 1963, in the Ryley School Auditorium, commencing at 1:00 p.m.

The secretary-treasurer informed the Council that from Jan. 1, 1962 until and including Jan. 15, 1963, a discount of 4 cents per foot was available on grader blades if purchased through the A.A.M.D.A. Bulk substantial savings on plow bolts if ordered through the Association.

Moved and carried that the secretary-treasurer arrange with the public works foreman for the ordering of a supply of grader blades and bolts

It was moved and carried that Fred Johnston be appointed weed-keeper with grader No. 2—36-48-11-W4, and Melvin Helmer be appointed pound-keeper with grader No. 3—36-48-12-W4, notices to be posted at pound and on bulletin board at Viking; and that the pound, kept by Elsie Bass on S.W. 11-49-12-W4, be closed.

At this time the proposed agreement between the County and his Worship the Mayor, concerning the General Assessment that was to be carried out in the County, was referred to the Council, and read in full by the secretary-treasurer. One requirement in Part 6 of the agreement, where the County shall make available to Harrison, and other firms, previous tax and assessment records, was opposed by Cr. Mogensen as it was considered that the assessment should be made entirely on its own merits without reference to former assessments. The secretary stated that this was just a normal clause dealing with a general assessment in the early 1950's. This is not a requirement that a new assessment could be put through in 1966.

It was moved and carried that the Harrison be appointed Assessor for the general assessment for the County, that the agreement between the County and Harrison be completed with the deletion of the supplying of previous tax and assessment records.

It was moved and carried that the Bridge Requests for 1963 be discussed at this time, be referred to the Bridge Branch of the Department of Highways.

It was moved and carried that preliminary agreement with Henry Feyk concerning use of the N.W. southerly two roads in the N.E. 1-50-15-W4 for a road to be N.E. 15-W4 with a yearly rental of $20 per year, be approved.

The secretary reported on the tax collectors and stated that current taxes collected to Nov. 30 amounted to $288,653.46 or 39% of the current levy; arrears of taxes collected to Nov. 30 amounted to $128,219.51, being 67% of the amount of taxes outstanding at the beginning of the year. The secretary stated that, in his opinion these collections were very satisfactory.

The public works foreman J. W. Peck, attended the meeting and discussed with the Council various items in connection with the operation of the public works department The Council was also requested what Mr. Peck had in mind in regards to a truck for the foreman. At the present time Mr. Peck was operating his own truck and the Council had been considering purchasing a truck for the use of the foreman rather than to have him use his own truck. Mr. Peck stated that he was very much in favor of the County owning the truck rather than he. Mr. Peck suggested that a service truck would be the most suitable with a 4 speed and four wheel transmission.

He also suggested that the D-7 cat tractor should be traded in on a used D-8 tractor if possible. This was taken under consideration by the Council. Mr. Peck confirmed his work for the winter on repairing the tractors and stated that he would be assisted by Percy Alfred Hanlak and Clear Nordstrom on as helpers to himself and Stanley Towne.

Cr. Mogensen stated that Mr. Peake had applied to him for work in the shop but the foreman stated that he did not have any work for him.

The foreman stated that he would very much like to have a sprocket puller in the shop, stating that it would be inconvenient to have to borrow from one of the shops in the City when this implement was needed. He stated that the cost would be between $1,200 and $1,500 for a first grade sprocket puller.

It was moved and carried that the foreman be authorized to obtain a sprocket puller for use in the shops.

In connection with the need of new graders, Cr. Mogensen suggested that the goal should be to have three patrols for two divisions as one patrol was unable to get through snow during mid winter, training in good enough time. After some considerable discussion it was moved and carried that we call for tenders on one or two motor graders, with the old Caliso grader, the MC and Patrol, and old Bucyrus-Erie scraper traded in on this equipment and that any new machines be equipped with side doors for the mirrors

It was moved and carried that the Councillors' accounts for Nov. and Dec. be approved and passed for payment.

Cr. Krupetzki informed the Council that Mrs. Stybyk had been appointed by him to replace Mike Chyzhivsk as patrolling officer in Division No. 4 and so was Sophia Martha Norris aged 46 in Dec. 1917.

Moved and carried that the appointment be confirmed.

It is of interest here to note that Leon Pruden, who originally owned the land on which the cemetery is situated was buried in the Tofield Cemetery in April, 1935. He was 82. Charles Herweijn and Wife Sam Lennie were buried in March, 1920 as was also Dinah Sophia Lennie.

John Rowland, aged 86, was buried at Logan in Sept. 1928. This is the last entry in the old register.

On conclusion of the research in to the graves of the Logan Cemetery Mr. Hammett remarks "It is interesting to note that as the register starts out with names of the Pruden and Rowland families, its concluding entries bear the same names. These two families made a very considerable contribution to the development of this country. They were traders and trappers and employees of the Hudson's Bay Company and travelled between 1870 and 1876 from Winnipeg to Fort Edmonton via the fur trade route north from Winnipeg to Cumberland House and down the North Saskatchewan to Edmonton, finally retiring to rest in the Beaverhill Lake area, now known as the Tofield district."

Christmas party honors Sunday School teacher

(Mrs. N. Campbell)

On December 19th the Sunday School of the United Church in Holden entertained their teacher, Mrs. Jessie Hall, with a very delightful part of Christmas party. It took the form of a theme with Jane Bell as the capable chairman. The high point of the evening, of course, was the opening of a very lovely basket of flowers and the pretty gifts from under a lovely decorated tree with a bag of treats for every boy and girl present. Mrs. Bell's Complete was presented with a beautiful edition of the New Testament Bible from the Sunday School on the occasion of her 25th birthday.

Mrs. Campbell retired this fall from her work with the Sunday School after having served there almost all her married life.

2. Keep busy [illegible] will forget you're on a diet. Remember all those bits of odd jobs that have been waiting to be done for them now!

3. Weigh yourself, [illegible] week before breakfast

4. Take your measurements regularly always in the same position. Bust around fullest part. Waist—abdomen, hips, thighs, calf and ankle, just above the instep.

5. Get exercise daily. Figure an exercise plan to your [illegible] and add a 30 minute walk for good measure.

6. Keep a record of your reducing progress, weight, and measurements

7. Eat slowly. If you take small bites, chew your food well and talk a lot at meals, this tends to make you feel more satisfied and stretches the meal to the point where second helpings no longer appeal

Mayor Budd 'kidnapped' in new Holden ambulance

(Mrs. N. Campbell)

On Monday evening, Jan. 7th, a unique ceremony, which had its humorous moments, took place on the sports grounds, where all the old Christmas trees had been assembled up to make a huge bonfire. Residents of the town came to carry out and sang Christmas carols while the fire burned brightly. On the 25th night of Christmas Mayor Budd was kidnapped and was gathered [illegible] and bundled into the new Holden ambulance and was driven to the Community Hall where [illegible] all mock seriousness, he was carried into the hall. Mr. Leslie, one of the instigators and organizers of the very wonderful and successful ambulance campaign, made an impressive speech, thanking everyone for their assistance they had given, both in the villages and country, to this worthwhile project. He then handed the mayor a huge key and presented the [illegible] to the village council, to be used for the benefit of the district. The Mayor made a short [illegible] after which Mr. and Mrs. Sam Pudlecki served coffee. Something went wrong some place!

Oscar Aberle of Holden and officials of the Camrose Artificial Breeding Association are still scratching their heads over this one.

Oscar owns a purebred Holstein cow, and through the process of artificial insemination, the cow was bred with a Holstein bull.

On January 10, the cow gave birth to twin calves, one of them looking like a purebred Holstein, and the other appearing to be a healthy Hereford "I don't know what went wrong", commented Oscar. This is shared by George Samson of the Camrose AI Association.

Vialta Lodge has January meeting

The regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Rosary Foundation was held in the staff dining room of Vialta Lodge, Viking, on the evening of Thursday Jan 3rd, with S. J. Hahn in the chair.

The residence report showed that 39 persons had been in residence during the month and that at the end of the month there were 32, a decrease of two from the previous month. The cost per guest per day was $2.19, as compared with $1.51 for November. The annual financial report was given, showing that a surplus of $1,623.64 was realized in 1962.

Matron Mrs. Mary Pascha was interested in learning the opinion of the Board with regard to her all-day meetings of the matrons such as the one held at Wetaskiwin in November and the Board urged her and her assistant to attend these all meetings of matrons and [illegible] as they felt that [illegible] the Rosary Foundation would they [illegible] possible to attend.

Guest editorial—...

(From The Gananoque (Ont.) Reporter)

One of the weak points which has led to the unemployment fund's precarious situation has been the acquiescence of all political parties to extending the coverage provided and in taking in groups of people whose work does not ordinarily extend over a twelve months period. This has led to a situation where too many people who have no prospects, and in some cases no intention, of trying to help themselves by searching out their own off-season employment drawing too consistently on a fund which was set up to provide help between jobs and jobs between help.

On a holiday last summer in the Maritimes, in discussing the fund's operation with another newspaperman, the information was volunteered that it was quite a common occurence for some percentage of fishermen to sit at home drawing unemployment funds instead of getting out in their boats in the winter when, we understand, there are good prospects of catching fish because it's too cold, too wet, too uncomfortable, etc. If this observation is true, and should it apply to other people whose work is naturally seasonable, one of the greatest disservices we are doing is to destroy personal initiative and family responsibility, and that isn't the way Canada started out by the U.E.L.'s and other settlers.

We have a situation in Gananoque, and the same thing would apply to other centres to a greater or lesser degree where the tourist industry, when in this climate is certainly seasonable, provides many short term jobs. In some cases there are married women whose husbands are earning enough to support their families who are competing with girls coming into the labor field whose need of work may be greater. This angle regarding married women, due to the seasonable work in which they are engaged, develops into a steady cycle of drawing on the unemployment fund. Year round work, if available, would not appeal and would not be accepted. The way it is now they can start to work in the spring, quit in the fall and draw unemployment through the winter.

We are not suggesting that special rules should be put into effect to curtail or hinder certain groups, but it would certainly help to get the unemployment fund on a more even financial keel if initially new workers before being eligible to draw had to meet the requirements of having twelve months' steady employment behind them. This would eliminate the people who did not want steady work. It would also make for some initiative in installing in those who would accept it to go and seek work in order to qualify for drawing benefits in the second year they are in the labor force.

Those people should be helped, as required, to get steady work, although it might not be similar to that which they performed in an earlier job. At the present time if similar work is not offered to the holder of an insurance book the job offered can be refused and the person is entitled to draw unemployment insurance. There are many ways we are sure, where the fund could be made to operate more soundly, and a report by E. Mack available by a commission will no doubt carry its own suggestions.

As pointed out in the opening paragraph a week point is the extension of coverage to persons whose work does not ordinarily extend over a twelve months' period. This would be a starting point and we might be surprised how many people could find other employment on their own initiative if they knew they would not be eligible for the weekly draw at the unemployment office until they had met the requirement of one year's steady employment.

By George!

Even with the coming session of the Alberta Legislature still a month away it is scheduled to open Feb. 19, interest is beginning to run high The main reason for this, it is supposed, is because 1963 will no doubt be an election year for this province. Certainly, the willingness of Premier Manning to travel more than usual for speaking engagements outside of the cities of Edmonton and Calgary could be taken as an indication that he is reaching as many people as possible. Last Thursday the premier spoke to Sedgewick, and tomorrow the Camrose Chamber of Commerce will be honored with his presence as guest speaker.

Another reason that the coming legislative session should be more interesting than usual is the premier's announcement that he, as attorney - general, plans to introduce a bill calling for the setting up of a provincial police force. This force, which some have estimated will be 200-strong, will be used to police small communities which cannot afford the services of a qualified policeman, or who are unable to get a member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to do the work. It is no secret that the RCMP is desirous of getting out of town and city police work, the big reason being that they just don't have enough men.

The formation of a provincial police force is a good indication of the trend of the times. It was not too many years ago that the RCMP absorbed the Newfoundland Provincial Police Force. In the late 1920's the old Alberta Provincial Police became part of the RCMP. Now the pendulum swings the other way, a new provincial force is about to be organized.

Pearson's pointed policy

Readers of The Canadian will have all sorts of opinions on the Lester Pearson pronouncement that Canada should have nuclear weapons for its NATO and NORAD forces, but we wonder how many of them stopped to think about the editorial bias . . . and the awesome implications . . . in a so-called news report written under the by-line of Charles Lynch, Southam News Services, on Monday. The report concluded:

The Liberals, for all their past understanding, can now pose as the champions of NATO and NORAD, the supporters of American military leadership, the proKennedy party and the darlings of our own chiefs of staff, who are supposed to be the chief military advisers to the government.

There are Canadians who would oppose all these things, but what the government must now appraise is where the weight of Canadian opinion would be likely to be on an election day. With the prime-war forces on with the anti-war ones who in recent years have been the most vocal supporters of Pope-ist Green.

God grant our Canadian government the strength of character to form a decision on the course they feel would be the best for Canada, and not on any appraisal of election opinion.

Mr. Lynch makes a fine powder monkey, and it is well for Mr. Pearson to point out the "safety catch". But the soldier who recalls a loaded weapon may also go off half-cocked is the more prudent.

It's amazing

The co-operation given recently in Holden and district, certainly is proof that when everyone pulls together, much can be accomplished.

We are speaking about the Ambulance Fund campaign. The idea was nurtured by one man who took it to the Chamber of Commerce. From there it was taken to the Town Council who, in turn, agreed to house the vehicle and look after the operations, once it was purchased. In only a very short time a campaign for funds was under way The objective of $2500 was soon reached and within ten days the new ambulance was in Holden, fully equipped and ready for call.

This is what a determined and concerted effort can accomplish, and should serve as a good example to all. —P N.

Pure learning

There are times when reports out of the university world make old-timers wonder what the world is coming to . . . like the new query at the university of Alberta, where a Montana State junior made 1214 revolutions in a laundromat dryer spending 35 minutes during which fraternity brothers counted the number of "round trips" he made

Not to suggest that he's all wet, but it's just too bad that fraternity brothers also flip the heat switch on at the same time.

It is clear Mr. Flemming and others in the present cabinet would like a change in the political climate in Ottawa in preparation for the coming election. Mr. Flemming's announcement that he is going to spend more money on defence projects is a question mark. Just what these projects are is still unclear. But the wheels are shaping up in Ottawa for the election campaign. The Government's continuance should not go on "unanswered".

CAPITAL HILL CAPSULES

Proposals for Federal Government re-insurance of the crop insurance plans on the Prairies are being studied by the Cabinet at present. Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton has put forward a proposal that would be administered by Agriculture Minister Hamilton and Finance Minister Donald Fleming. Under the proposal the Federal Government would re-insure the provincial crop insurance plans. The provinces would be required to pay a premium to the Federal Government for the re-insurance. The objective is to stabilize farm incomes according to the Government of the day. Many provinces have crop insurance plans but it has foundered on the rocks of financial ruin.

The results again found that the Board set up by the Bennett Government was an interference with free enterprise, prosperity and rapid growth of the Federal Federal Parliaments that the Canadian Parliament has been devoted to trade and commerce under the British North America Act and that what the Federal Government will be regulating, controlling or legislating into is the field of trade and commerce under the British North America Act. Many provinces have protested against the Federal Government's attempts to obtain jurisdiction in areas that otherwise would be provincial field.

Holden Chamber turns over ambulance to the Village

The council of the Village of Holden met in regular meeting held on 14th instead of the usual date of the 15th, owing to the fact that the Holden Chamber of Commerce had requested to be present at the meeting to discuss the matter of the ambulance now in the village.

A discussion followed regarding the service to be rendered by the ambulance. The secretary-treasurer advised council that a bylaw would have to be passed setting out the charges and fees. The secretary was asked to write various funeral homes who have ambulance service requesting information on their rates for ambulance pickups.

Moved by Councillor Johnson and seconded by Councillor Kalsaas, that Jan. 5th, due to the absence of Mrs. Beverly who is at present in Toronto attending a course, the meeting be held on Saturday, January 12th, at 8 p.m. Carried.

Modern Etiquette . . .

Q. How does a guest know when to begin eating at a dinner?

A. It is generally considered courteous to wait until the others have been served, either at the beginning of a meal or at the beginning of a new course, before starting to eat. Usually the hostess is the first to begin, which gives the signal for the others to start.

Q. I am to be married for the first time, but my father is a widower. Under these circumstances do I have a large formal wedding?

A. Your father's status has nothing to do with it. Since this is your first marriage you may plan it on any scale you wish.

Q. Is it really considered impolite to extend any and all kinds of social invitations over the telephone?

A. One may use the telephone with the exception of formal ones.

Q. Since becoming engaged recently I have received a number of gifts of money. Am I supposed to decide this with my fiance, or does it rightfully belong to me to spend as I please?

A. Rightfully, you should put this money into a special account to be spent later by both of you for something for your home.

Q. When one is eating crepes at the table, how are the seeds properly removed from the mouth?

A. These should be removed as inconspicuously as possible with the fingers. Never, under any circumstances, be guilty of spitting them directly from the mouth onto the plate!

Q. Is it considered in good taste to mail wedding invitations to friends who have been recently bereaved?

A. Since they ARE friends, this is perfectly proper — even though they may not feel up to attending the wedding.

Q. Isn't it supposed to be bad manners for a person to use bread to sop up his gravy on his plate?

A. It was at one time, but not any longer. Bread can now be properly used for this purpose. It should be done by breaking off a piece of the bread, dropping into the gravy and then using the fork to pick it up and eat it.

Q. I am invited to a birthday party of a girl friend and am to bring my boy friend who does not know this girl. Would it be proper to include his name on the formal enclosed with my gift?

A. You are not required to do this but you may do so if you wish.

Q. Are the male attendants at a wedding supposed to pay for their own boutonnieres?

A. No, the bridegroom furnishes these.

Q. Is it ever permissible to use the spoon for cutting pie, especially when it is a very juicy fruit pie?

A. Pie is strictly a "fork food" no matter how juicy it is. And it is not proper to finish the remaining juice with the spoon either.

Valve a Prime BY A.C. GORDON

YOU ARE THE DETECTIVE

"The light flickering and dancing through the partly opened door of Sylvia's dressing room and casting distorted and grotesque shadows on the wall of the darkened corridor held my attention," declaims the one-time famous detective, Wilfred Hamilton . . .

"Let's not be so poetic," says Police Lieutenant Bob O'Hara. "What we're after are the facts."

You and your friend Lieutenant O'Hara, are dissuaded, with Hamilton the tragedy that has taken place in the run-down theatrical hotel just a few doors from Hamilton's room. According to Hamilton, nothing in the room has been touched since his discovery of the tragedy. You and the lieutenant, upon your arrival at the hotel this evening, have entered the victim's room and by the rather dim light of a small electric table lamp on the wall over the dressing table have seen the body of the 20-year-old "thi part" actress, Sylvia Slayton, sprawled unfeelingly across the bed, a knife in her breast. A check of the room's one window has told you that the door is the one means of entrance and escape from the room. The girl's hands still tightly clutched about the handle of the knife, seems to point to suicide.

Wilfred Hamilton continues his story: "I had just passed along the corridor and was beyond her room when I saw steps ahead suddenly I brought up short by an unearthly groan . . . a groan that was quivering, ghastly and soul wrenching to hear coming from the depths of pain and sorrow. I spun quickly around . . . then hesitated. Those flickering, dancing shadows emanating through the partly opened door of Sylvia's dressing room and casting distorted and grotesque shadows on the wall of the darkened corridor held my attention as if by a magnet . . . I passed beyond this earthly stage of struggle and terror. Such a frightful tragedy . . . no one ever fully appreciated Sylvia's true dramatic talent . . . .

"And we're not appreciating YOUR dramatics right now", you break in. "You're getting back behind the scenes now. Tell us, are you positive you saw no one leave Sylvia's room?"

"I've already told you that and besides, I assume you were astute enough to determine by the position of her hand on the knife that she took her own life. So why should there have been anyone else . . .

I'm sure we can get along without your explanations of the obvious", you again interrupt the actor. "Either someone did leave her room, you've been inaccurate in the story you told us, or you're involved in murder!"

What has led you to this conclusion?

SOLUTION

Those "flickering dancing shadows" Wilfred Hamilton has twice described have aroused your suspicions. Since Sylvia Slayton's room was lighted by a small electric lamp, there could not have been any flickering shadows cast out into the corridor.

What is wrong with each of these sentences?

1. This is the most beautiful state of any we have visited on our trip yet.
2. The dancer's sense of balance is the most perfect I have seen, and her interpretation of every movement are very forceful.
3. One should always keep himself prepared for any events that may occur.
4. If I have succeeded in settling the speed setting properly, especially when it is a very juicy fruit pie?
5. I shall be much happy to accept your kind invitation.
6. The reason why he was late is that the other boys prevented him going home.
7. Pronounce first "a" as in "it", not as in "ate", and accent second syllable. 8. Pronounce as "barth", not as burth". 9. Pronounce day-mah and not "dam-tah". 10. Pronounce re-pea, and not "ree-pea". 11. Pronounce ung-gwent, and not "ah-gent". 12. Pronounce oh-ai-is accent second syllable.
13. Nonpareil, penetrate, obituary, lachrymose, trespass, ecclesiastical.

Stocktaking

Shown above with pencil in hand and busy counting is Mrs. Joynes, employed by Brown's United Purity Store, Ryley. Stocktaking time comes around at the beginning of a new year and, in most cases, as above, lasts for two weeks or so. Each separate item has to be counted and described. In this particular store, Mr. Brown reports that with the help of one employee, the grocery stock inventory takes about only four hours. However, the dry good section is a different story and is a tedious project. When the process is all done, the staff give a sigh of relief and wait for the next year to run around. Snow storm cuts activities and blocks roads in district

(Peter Nickel)

Activities in the area were suddenly cut down this week due to the heavy snow storm which struck with cold temperatures that moved in on the area late Sunday. School buses did not go out morning were postponed and Sunday in town generally was pretty poor. Only very few cars have been seen in town and those that made it moved slowly as drivers were forced to do a good deal of shoveling in making their rounds.

Farmers were forced to stay home since most roads have several feet of snow covering them.

Even the curling activities were very limited. Only three rinks were making the trip in the rink transport in games. In general the area was dead.

BRIDGE BLOCKED

South bridge on Tofield and Camrose were blocked Monday. They were plowed out Tuesday, but drifting winds Tuesday afternoon left them blocked again. There was a report, too, that the route to Camrose via Highway 21 and 11 also was plugged, but it is believed that that road has been passable for the most part.

Due to blocked roads, the Tofield editor was unable to get to Camrose with news and ads, so as much of this information as possible was given over the telephone Wednesday afternoon, since mailing would have meant the copy would not be ready to go to press in time to be printed in today's paper. For this week's issue will go to Tofield for mailing is the editor's problem! at time of writing!

Typical snow scene

This picture of machines removing snow from Main Street in Camrose is typical of the kind of operation being carried on by public work crews throughout the north central Alberta area. Several of the roads leading into Tofield were blocked when the heavy snow fell Sunday and Monday of this week. Freezing temperatures and strong winds accompanied the heavy snowfall. On Monday, temperatures dipped below -30 degrees.

Following the funeral, neighbors and friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Kofman, at her request, when coffee and lunch was served.

Deepest sympathy is extended to Annie from all the district folks.

Behind the scenes in a Canadian winter

A local school teacher, on his way to school Tuesday morning suddenly wouldn't have much of an impression of Canadian winters.

Unaware of being watched by the reporter, the following took place:

Within a few yards of his home his car very suddenly stopped dead. After a few minutes of trying to free it under its own power, he gave up, stepped out and began to push the disabled above his overshoes. Chestnut up the hood, then got out the shovel, cleared the trunk lid, and it snapped back up again. Attempted to re-start the ice-bound vehicle, he finally found it still powerless. He disappeared for a few minutes and then brought a blanket to place under the rear wheels which brought the car back to the main-traveled portion of the road. He finally drove away to get his breakfast.

Joan Deboulle was elected as the new president of the Tofield Drama Club last Monday evening. Vice-president is Miss Gloria Hansen, while Helen Tiedeman was re-elected as secretary.

During the meeting several plays were picked out and copies were ordered. From one of these copies, members will go on to read scenes and choose the play which will be presented this season. The dates chosen for the performances were around the 23rd and 24th of April.

The turnout for the meeting was good in spite of the cold weather, although a few more members were still needed for the play. The club extends invitations to anyone wishing to become a member. The next meeting will be held on Wednesday, Feb. 6th at 8:00 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Tiedeman which is located two doors west of the Legion Hall.

Ryley oldtimer marks 83rd birthday

(St. Harris)

Quite a few neighbors and friends called in on Caroline Davick on Saturday, Jan. 19th to help her celebrate her 83rd birthday. Mrs. Davick is remarkably well despite her advanced years.

She lives alone and does all her own housework and attends the Ryley Lutheran Church regularly, walking both ways.

In the absence of Mr. Davick's children from around the district called upon her.

She received congratulations by long distance telephone: one from her niece in Lemon, South Dakota, and one from her daughter, Myrtle, (Mrs. Bowker) in Port Alberni, B.C. Her daughter, Mrs. Alma Wilson of Camrose was present for the occasion.

Mrs. Davick is one of the oldtimers of the Ryley district, arriving here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nils Solberg, in 1902, and has resided here ever since.

Our apologies . . .

As in any other daily trade it is very easy to make mistakes and at most times they are realized when it is too late. We apologize to our readers for the mistakes in last week's church announcements. Some of them were mixed up and ministers were not very happy about it.

Due to blocked roads we are unable to include church announcements in this week's issue of The Mercury.

Shower for newlyweds

(St. Harris)

A miscellaneous shower and dance was held in the Ryley Legion Hall in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Markwich who were recently married. Mr. Brian Westgate was emcee for the evening and music was provided by a five-piece orchestra. In spite of the cold, there was a good turnout of neighbors from the Ryley district attended. The couple were the recipients of many lovely and useful gifts

Guest editorial— ... Thoughts on unemployment

(From The Gananoque (Ont.) Reporter)

In discussing the unemployment insurance fund with a visitor to our office the other day we mentioned that civil servants—post office and customs employees, provincial government employees, and even the employees of the National Employment Offices—are not covered by unemployment insurance. In other words, should their employment end in the government service the only monies they would have coming to them would be any credit they had accrued in their pension fund. He was quite surprised. Perhaps other people will be, too.

There may be very good reasons why these people are not contributing to the unemployment insurance fund. We understand that after two years employment they qualify as permanent employees, but what about that period of employment of less than two years? Surely there are people who start in the government service and whose jobs terminate for one reason or another before they can qualify as permanent employees.

Even if the thinking is that once a person gets a job with the government they'll never get laid off is a poor reason, if it is one, for civil servants not to be contributing to and eligible for unemployment benefits. It would appear that if government jobs are considered to be more secure and provide more steady employment than people, say, in industry, can normally expect then civil servants should be contributing to the fund.

It would appear that the practice of adding seasonably employed groups of persons to the eligible list and purposely not including regularly employed groups like the federal and provincial civil servants is like hiding one's head in the sand and hoping that things will work out. They'll work out, all right, in minus zero balance.

What government needs to do is to be realistic about this and other phases of government operation. The Glassco Commission has pointed out some of these sins, but whether or not they will ever be applied remains to be seen.

With monthly revenue running around the 25 millions mark (using the figures for April 1961 and '62 and March '611 and payments running well over twice the revenue, no wonder the balance in the unemployment insurance fund is approaching th critical stage. For example, the balance in the fund on April 1, 1960, was $365,892,232, a year later the amount declined to $184,894,852, and this year at April 1 had skidded to $30,147,134.

When one realizes that the monthly benefit payments had exceeded the monthly revenues for seven month in 1961 and that expenditures were more than $181 millions more than revenue or a monthly deficit of better than 1½ millions of dollars, one can imagine what the financial report for 1962 is apt to be!

By George!

Before getting into the main part of his address at the annual meeting of the Camrose Chamber of Commerce last Thursday evening, Premier E. C. Manning mentioned a few humorous observations he had made during the evening's proceedings which could prove to be a good basis for a discussion on human behavior.

He noted that none of the recipients of courtesy cortsies seemed to took up time at the meeting with long speeches of appreciation. "At a meeting like this, when you have so many speakers", commented the premier, "this is carrying courtesy to the 9th degree".

Mr. Manning said he also observed that only two representatives from the Canadian National Railway were present at the meeting as compared with five from the Canadian Pacific. "That", he said, "might be a good point on which to philosophize on public versus private ownership".

Another observation the premier made concerned the press and police. Chamber President Rusty Campbell introduced the representatives of The Canadian and the radio station, followed by the introduction of Mrs. Howard Martin, who represented the local aid journal. At the same time Mr. Campbell introduced Mr. Martin, noting that he was the chief of police for Camrose. "The introduction of press representatives along with the police chief could also prove to be a good topic for discussion", commented Mr. Manning.

Clare Radosky, chairman of the Chamber's Contest, is presenting the awards to the winners, also drew hearty laughter when he announced that the winner, Mrs. Nan McInnis, had received an overwhelming mandate, and then turning to the premier, said, "I'm sure Mr. Manning would be pleased to get a mandate like that". Then as an afterthought he added, "Not that he isn't getting one!"

Along with other residents of this city and district, I would like to extend my sincere congratulations to the winners of the Courtesy Contest, as well as to the fine members of the Chamber, Oscar Groven and Ed Schnell.

THAT'S EASY

A drunk was doing his best to steer an arrow with a toothpick at a bar. Time after time the olive eluded him. Finally a man nearby became annoyed, took a toothpick and said, "This is the way to do it", and speared the olive on the first try.

"Of course", replied the drunk, "if already had one, so tired he couldn't get away!"

BIG NAME PREFERRED

A man, who was getting a physical check-up, said to the doctor: "Now, Doc, if you find anything wrong with me, don't try to cover it up with a long, scientific name that I won't understand. Give it to me in plain, simple English".

"Well", replied the doctor, "to be perfectly frank with you, the only thing wrong with you is that you're just plain lazy".

"Well, Doc, in that case, give me the big scientific name, so I can tell my wife".

U.S. flexes her missiles

The United States has been offering Polaris missiles to Britain and France, the former gladly accepting them instead of the Skybolt missiles they had planned to purchase from the U.S. formerly. France, on the other hand, being a relatively new nuclear power, possibly feels she should throw a little weight around to make her presence known. She is not sure she wants Polaris missiles, and more recently, she left no doubt in anyone's mind about how she feels toward Britain's proposed entry into the European Economic Community.

Back on the subject of nuclear missiles, the U.S has been offering nuclear warheads for some time, but only in the last week has it become a major topic for discussion in this country. At the same time, we might add, the matter has become a political football.

Someone has said that even in the days of the wild west, men who carried guns did not go around without bullets. This is to say that if Canada has up-to-date fighting equipment, she must have nuclear warheads as well. On the other hand, even in the old wild west, according to legend, at least, a man who carried no gun was not drawn into a beet-'em-to-the-draw duel.

Consider the fact that Canada has the DEW line. Consider, too, that if Canada were under nuclear attack, within seconds there would be perhaps hundreds of U.S. anti-nuclear missiles and planes in the air, compared to the very few that Canada could muster. Again, consider that if Canada or the U.S. were attacked from the north, the U.S. being further south would have more time to react, and possibly just enough time to make the difference of setting up an adequate defence.

All things considered, would Canada not be better off to remain a non-nuclear power? If the cold war between the U.S. and Russia, the two largest nuclear powers in the world, ever turned into a nuclear conflict with Canada smack in the middle of it, our small nuclear force, even if we had one, would be about as effective as a mosquito bent on trampling an elephant to death.

While it is true that we have a commitment to NATO, it does not necessarily follow that our contribution should be nuclear warheads. Why not consider ourselves suppliers of planes, ships or rockets? The money used to produce them would be spent on goods produced in Canada, rather than on U.S.-produced nuclear weapons. We doubt that nuclear warheads come cheap.

Then, if there should be any reduction in defence spending, the money could probably be better used in another way, such as reducing income tax.

Perhaps Canadians would be branded pacifists or cowards. However, such discretion in this case is the better part of valor.

Proud record

None of us would deny there have been colder winters, or windier ones. And probably it's because October, November and December were so mild that we're all feeling the winter so much these days.

Even so our appreciations, and our sympathies, go out to all those workers who labor in the outdoors on days like these. Our readers are no different . . . every time there's a flicker in the lights they fear the power may be interrupted, and every time there's a gurgle in the gas line, they worry over that service. Railway workers must face terrible problems with wind and snow, as do the bus and truck drivers, to say nothing of the school bus men. The list is endless, really, we've only scratched the surface. But we all appreciate their efforts every time we think of them.

And aren't we lucky not to have the gales and blizzards facing many other parts of the country. Comparatively speaking, Tofield has been in the banana belt this winter.

MacDuff Ottawa report ... Mr. Pearson's bomb

OTTAWA.—The Liberal Party's declaration to accept nuclear weapons, if it does nothing else, may serve the useful purpose of telling Canadian politicians out of doubt what is hard to describe otherwise than their hypocritical stance.

Hypocrisy, in fact, has been the politician's badge of office for too long, in defence as in other matters.

The Liberals condemn the government for failing to do all the things the Liberals left undone in 22 years of power.

The New Democrats subscribe ner of the sides of their mouths to an ill-defined non-atomic theme and to Provincial Rights while declaiming the party to strong central government and directed planning.

The Social Credit say they would die for monetary reform, and they retain in power a Conservative government which even more than the Liberals denies their basic tenets.

And up until recently, the two major parties could not make up their minds about nuclear weapons for Canadian troops. Even as they wavered and waffled, Canada bought weapons to carry nuclear warheads and sold uranium to the bomb-makers.

The other two parties, while mostly declining nuclear weapons accepted off Canada's share of the monster-ear age This catalogue of hypocrisy may apply to the general public as well But probably not.

Choices, well - defined ethnics, have not been offered the Canadian public in recent years and nowhere has this lack of leadership been more evident than in the field of defence.

CHANGES MADE VOID

Now, however, the situation has changed. Liberal Leader Pearson is a holder of the Nobel peace prize. has moved into the void and pledged his party to the acceptance of nuclear weapons at home and abroad to the extent that this is dictated by present Canadian commitments Such a decision seems well nigh inevitable in view of preceding events

Canada supplies the makings the raw materials for atomic destruction, on a business-like basis Canada has installed the Bomarc Bomarc anti-aircraft missile bases on its soil but has not decided to load them with nuclear warheads without which their efficiency is even more doubtful

Canada has purchased the American Voodoo interceptor for use in NORAD to the joint U.S.-Canadian arrangement for North American defence.

Canadian squadrons in NATO are being equipped with the American CF-104 Starfighters which need nuclear weapons to be effective in their strike role

The Canadian NATO brigade has the American Honest John anti-tank missiles which again must have nuclear weapons to do their job.

Canada, in other words, accepted all the trappings of a nuclear force but tried to retain a reputation of being nuclear virginal.

HEAVY OVERTONES

Mr Pearson's decision, right or wrong, is one of immense significance for Canada. It offers relief to face long overdue decisions on defence, not only by the government but by the voters.

Militarily, Mr Pearson's party wins power and his decision is implemented, it means the beginning of a change in Canada's military history It is thus not surprising that newspaper headlines dealt with the decision to accept nuclear arms. But Pearson made it clear that this is not the essence of the Liberal position Pearson actually said little about the military value of Canada having nuclear arms or of its present role which requires them. In fact the Liberals have strongly criticized the present Canadian role and the acquisition of American weapons, such as the Bomarc There is nothing in the Pearson speech to suggest any change of the Liberal views on this.

More than half his speech is dealt with the Canadian defence commitment. What he was in fact telling Canadians is that the test of Canadian defence policy is not the military effectiveness of particular weapons as such, or the presence or absence of nuclear weapons as such, though there is no Canada does this that it can [illegible] influence again within the alliance, to achieve the political and economic strength of NATO which have always been the important matter—something Pearson says he wants.

Now Prime Minister Diefenbaker has the next move. He may have been surprised by the immediate and predicted outburst against the Liberal decision from Social Democrat Tommy Douglas. But the weight of Canadian opinion on this matter is not necessarily well understood among top Conservatives, and has still to make itself felt.

There are thus many who believe that the cross-bowed Albert would, honouring international commitments, make decisions, may make Lester Pearson the next Prime Minister.

The ordinary Canadian may well feel that if we must be armed, we might as well be armed with the best possible weapons. That feeling has probably increased in Canada since the Cuban crisis. There is little doubt the existence of this feeling played a part in Mr. Pearson's final decision. Apparently it is not yet recognized by Mr. Diefenbaker to the point where he is prepared to act on it. Whichever man has best assessed the feelings of the majority of Canadians will probably be Canada's next Prime Minister.

Semantic study shows salary salty subject

Some of our words in everyday use originated as long ago that their original meanings have long since gone into the limbo of forgotten things. For instance, "salary", a pretty important subject to most of us, originated in the days of ancient Rome.

Soldiers and civil servants were given regular rations of salt and other necessities, because sometimes under the general name of "salt rations".

Although money came to replace salt, and the word "salary" came into being the expression, "worth his salt", remained.

Nowadays, when they set their pay cheques hundreds of thousands of Canadians worth their salt, make it a rule to spend about 10% of their salaries at the Bank of Montreal. They know it's the safest, fastest and surest way of building a firm foundation for future success.

Horace Seller, manager at the Tofield branch of the Bank of Montreal, will be glad to help. It's worth the time it takes to find out how easy it is to open a savings account at the B of M. It will earn three per cent interest. The moment of all, regular saving soon becomes a habit that's very much worth "its salt" to you. —Advt.

Better light . . . better sight

A light hope of conversation, popular these days, is adequate light for living.

As a creative tool it gives the home decorator a variety of decorating schemes. Proper lighting can accent furnishings, bring out the full polished beauty of furniture and make rooms appear larger or smaller, and always more attractive.

Valance lighting, strategically located lamps and decorative spots add dimension, depth and airy spaciousness to the living room.

Lighting to take your work out of the shadows is important, too. Reading, sewing and workshop activities need illumination without glare or shadow. Leisure time hobbies are much more enjoyable with-out needless eyestrain and fatigue.

Light for living is not restricted to the interior. Carefully placed, inexpensive and practical outdoor lighting can make your home a showplace after dark.

Peter's Patter

Sitting beside the fire these cold evenings, where everyone should be, I get to my memory back to those cold days at home when about this time we were busy playing chess. From my memory this is a strange world in this part of the country. To my amazement, even the oldtimers I have met do not seem to have ever played the much enjoyable game. I may be wrong, talking to the wrong people and I hope I have but that would leave some hope of finding those, who, like me, would do almost anything for the challenge to the game.

For those who have never played chess, you don't know what you're missing. Besides being entertainment, it plays a big part in developing your mind to plan ahead. I have never yet seen a chess player who does not have his mind devoted to only the game, while playing. As a matter of fact, I have played in homes where the opponent concentrated on the game so much they didn't even hear all the noise in the house, which ordinarily would drive anybody batty. Chess is also used over the first few games you find yourself outclassed, planning your moves a time and taking into consideration the moves your opponent would have to face should you make the wrong move.

Should there happen to be anyone reading that column who does play or loves the game, I would be pleased to hear from you and accept the challenge. Such a challenge would truly weld my broken chess heart.

Around the Town

Mr. and Mrs. Edd Lockert of Sedgewick visited Mrs. Knudsen and Clifford of Lindbrook and also visited Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Weins and family over the weekend.

Weather chops gas sales by 'retard' group

The weather was not too kind to the Camrose and District Association of Chartered Accountants last Sunday when members of the group held their first operation of the season at Tobacco Bowl Service Station. The temperature was 15 degrees below zero and only dozen of the association's group braved the bitter weather to operate the pumps or to serve in the coffee house. Visitors to the service station were interested to see the display of handicrafts, the work of the children of the school.

'Greatest age of opportunity' Manning tells Young Socreds

Addressing a rally sponsored by Young Social Creditors in Sedgewick last Thursday evening Premier E. C. Manning told his listeners they were living in the "greatest age of opportunity ever known". He went on to say, however, that in the midst of these good economic conditions, four serious factors were becoming more prominent in national life "which will destroy this good position if they are allowed to go on".

FOUR FACTORS

One of the factors to which he referred was the changing status of the individual in modern society. "Young people are enjoying less and less individual independence", he said, "and are becoming circumscribed by things beyond their control. Too much emphasis is being placed on the benefits of collectivism". It could reach a point, suggested the premier, where a person could be the ward of the state for everything. "There is an increased demand on governments all over the free world to assume responsibilities that in the earlier days were assumed by the individual or his family", Mr. Manning stated.

The second factor to which he referred was that of government ownership of business. He said that the real function is to govern and "do for the people things which must be done by society as a whole . . . Every time a government takes on a responsibility, the government becomes responsible for the costs".

Thirdly, Mr. Manning said the "security" has become almost a fetish with some people. This, he said, demands a big price in ever-rising taxes and ever-rising debt of the state is expected to provide the security.

AGE OF DEBT

The fourth factor the premier mentioned was the financial trends, emphasizing that "we are living in the greatest age for debt that Canada has ever known. The amount of buying done on terms is pathetic". In seeking a solution to this problem, the speaker said, people are looking to the political parties. He went on to point out that, in the beginning, the two old line parties were fundamentally different but with the passing of time and the undertaking of a few socialistic benefits by each party the clear-cut distinction between the two has become lost. "At least the socialistic parties are honest", said the premier. "They say what they believe in starkism and socialism". But he added that he doubted anyone wanted a socialistic type government.

In conclusion, Mr. Manning said that the Social Credit government is gaining popularity because it is based on four principles which are an answer to the four problems mentioned earlier. Regarding the individual and modern society, he said that Social Credit believes the "individual is more an important unit in organized society than is the general society".

Secondly, he said, the Social Credit government believes that the "true function of government is to give the people the results they want from management of the public affairs, and not to become managers of business".

DEVELOP OWN SECURITY

The Social Credit believes that security alone is not sufficient, he said, but believes that it is possible to have both security and opportunity. He said that the real function is to govern and "do for the people things which must be done by society as a whole . . . Every time a government takes on a responsibility, the government becomes responsible for the costs".

Thirdly, Mr. Manning said the "security" has become almost a fetish with some people. This, he said, demands a big price in ever-rising taxes and ever-rising debt of the state is expected to provide the security.

WHEN WORK IS DONE. Canada's farms take on a look of serenity once winter has tilled in and the rich black soil of the barren fields has been blanketed with a clean cut of snow. Solve a Crime

BY A.C. GORDON

YOU ARE THE DETECTIVE

The torrid romance between Jarvis Jarrel and well-to-do Constance playboy Tommy Malone, had raised big headlines for many weeks and then finally the young columnist had played up the story of the Lig Jilt. For once in her glamour-filled life, Joyce had been on the receiving end of a "rejection".

Now on this wintry afternoon, you have received a phone call from Sheriff Will Adams informing you that Tommy Malone's body has been found up on the mountains, dead of a bullet hole in the heart. He gives you directions to the scene and asks you to meet him there. You drive cautiously up the narrow, mountain road, finally arriving at the scene of the tragedy, and you step out of your car onto an inch of newly fallen snow, and walk over to where Sheriff Adams and one of his assistants stand watching the police medical examiner going over the dark huddle on the ground. Nearby stands the mink-clad Joyce Jarrel, her famous facial features now set in stony and sullen defiance.

Joyce suddenly cries out, "I found Tommy lying there dead almost two hours ago, just before it started snowing. I was so horrified and upset that I didn't think of phoning the sheriff's office at once. Tommy and I had been up to his lodge . . . trying to patch things up . . . his place is about a mile from here. Our attempts at reconciliation were no good . . . so he left me . . . and a little later I thought I heard a shot, but didn't think anything of it . . . it could have been some hunter, I thought. And then, about 10 minutes later, as I was driving by here, I saw him lying there . . . dead! Well", and Joyce sweeps her hand through the air in a dramatic gesture, "considering the kind of guy he was, he was certain to have plenty of enemies . . . and one of them finally caught up with him."

The medical examiner straightens up from his crouch over the body, shrugs his shoulders, and says "According to my calculations, gentlemen, he died not more than a half-hour ago. There's still some body warmth."

Joyce Jarrel glances sharply at him, then at you, and exclaims, "But see here! I've just told you I found Tommy's body almost two hours ago . . . and it was before the snow began to fall, there's no one to prove it but me . . . there's no snow under his body . . . and that's sure proof that I'm telling the truth!"

"Sorry", you then say, "That proves exactly nothing at all!"

Why do you say this, and why are you now suspicious of Joyce Jarrel?

SOLUTION

The fact that there was no snow under Tommy Malone's body doesn't mean the lady was lying on the ground before the snow began to fall. His body warmth, as reported by the medical examiner, had melted it. Joyce Jarrel has lots more explaining to do.

New League pres. known as 'Mr. Power' in Tofield

Bill Christenson, newly elected president of the Tofield Community League, is "Mr. Power" in Tofield and the surrounding area. He was born in Camrose in 1925, and received his early education in that town, and after service in the R.A.F. attended technical school at Haileybury, Ontario. Before joining the staff of Calgary Power Ltd., Bill worked at Manalta Mines, Kirkland Lake, Ont. He started with a construction crew of the power company in 1948 then became assistant district manager at Wainwright, and finally assumed his present appointment in 1954.

With an area of some 600 square miles, and over 1,800 customers to look after, Bill sometimes finds it more than a full time job. Winter storms, snow and high winds can cause havoc with power lines. A bad storm which may put your power off for a while often means a cold, wet and sleepless night for Bill and his assistant, Bill Frowin.

In spite of all these problems, Bill manages to take an active part in community life. He is a member of the Legion, Curling Club, the Community League and the Masonic Lodge. He is married and has a family of two boys.

OORP observes 17th birthday

(Mrs. M. L. Campbell)

HOLDEN, Jan. 28. On Monday evening, Jan. 21st, the Holden O.O.R.P. held its regular monthly meeting, with a good turn-out of members in spite of the cold weather and snow drifts. Following the meeting the ladies entertained their husbands at a Social, this being the occasion of the Lodge's 17th birthday.

The entertainment committee had planned various games, and when you take to playing with the music you feel like a "kid" again — especially being a Hillman Minx car "Children's Series", not by Mrs Clar Armstrong.

Hostesses for the evening were members of the committee, Mrs. Cole, Mrs. Chopko, Mrs. Velda Kelly, Mrs. Jane Hlynk, Mrs. Ida Mason and Mrs. Bertha Sanderson, who served a very delicious lunch. The birthday cakes being made and decorated by Helen Hlynk.

Earl Hardy thanked the ladies for a most enjoyable evening, and wished it was done more often.

FUA meeting draws poor attendance

The January meeting of the Tofield Farmers' Union was poorly attended, only eight members and 1 visiting, as a mud meeting is hoped for that night.

The question of a dance was discussed, and a committee was formed to look into this matter.

Those who would like to be one interested in this service is asked to phone 1103, Ryley, or Ralph Leech, president; Lee, Whitford, vice-president; Joe Dawson, secretary. great benefit to the town of Tofield as well as to the residents of the surrounding area if it were made a hard-surface highway.

During the statutory meeting four councillors were appointed to the board of the Tofield Municipal Hospital. They were Cyril Gibson, Kroplelnicki, Wainwright and Jaeger.

Councillor H. M. Masterman was reelected as county chairman for another year, with Cr. Kroplelnicki as deputy chairman.

Secretary-Treasurer Olaf Monsson explained that he had neglected to arrange the statutory meeting on the prescribed date — January 3rd — and had obtained permission to hold it January 9th.

The regular council meeting followed, and reconvened on January 10th, due to the length of the agenda.

COMMITTEES

During the statutory meeting, council as a whole was appointed to the school, and the whole council will also act on the municipal committee, with Cr. Masterman as chairman of the municipal committee. Crs. Gibson, Johnston, Holdick and Jaeger were appointed members of the Viking Municipal Hospital Board.

Other appointments were as follows: Kroplelnicki, representative on Vegreville Health Unit Board; Holdick, representative on Beaver Foundation, and Kroplelnicki as alternate; Gibson and Kroplelnicki to Agricultural Service Board; Cpl. Robinson and Les Masterman, members on Agricultural Service Board; S. L. FUA suggests paving of north road

County council goes on record favoring request

Charles Sears and E. J. Goeglein, representing the Tofield FUA, appeared before the regular meeting of the council of the County of Beaver on January 10th to suggest that the provincial government take over the north from Tofield, starting in the southeast corner of S.W. 12-51-19-W4th, and extending north 13 miles. They told council that a meeting of the Tofield FUA on January 9th made the suggestion, and also suggested that the Alberta government place hard surfacing on the road.

SUPPORTS REQUEST

Council passed a motion that it go on record as supporting the request.

The above photos are some scenes from Tofield, showing the results of the recent snow storms. Top picture shows the snow piled up on the cars at Premier Motors lot. The arrangement of its snow gives the cars a sort of streamlined effect. Centre is an example of a common sight pretty well all over the town. Motorists had to shovel an average of two to three feet of snow from their driveways in order to get their cars out. Bottom photo shows the snow piled up three feet deep after the sidewalk near Dr. Freebery's Clinic was cleared. Most residents found that clearing their sidewalks and driveways was a hopeless case as they were soon filled up again.

Plenty of snow

Regular county council meeting

The regular meeting of the County of the County of Beaver No. 9 was held Wednesday, January 9th, 1963. Present were: Cr's. Johnston, A. L. Gibson, W. D. Johnston, W. Kroplelnicki, S. M. Magnuson, J. H. Holdick and H. Weatherall.

BUSINESS ARISING FROM THE MINUTES

In connection with Mr. Joseph L. Dorin's application for approval for a license to operate a garage in conjunction with their store at Lindbrook dealt with by resolution 663-1962, the secretary-treasurer reported that a permit had been issued under the Highway Control Regulations authorizing the development. The information received from the Traffic Safety Engineers, listed the regulations and what Mr. Hepham had to do in order to obtain recommendation that a license for the business be issued.

Moved that the information be received and filed. Cd.

In regards to the proposed gas well in LSD 16 of 35-51-19-W. 4th, dealt with by resolution 610/1962 the secretary-treasurer informed the Council that he had been advised that the Northeastern Utilities would be drilling this well at the present time. Moved that the information be received. Cd.

In regards to the crushing and stock piling of gravel, dealt with by resolution 617-1962, some considerable discussion took place and Crs. Magnuson, Kroplelnicki and Gibson were of the opinion that they would gain very little by having the work done under the Better Works Program but it was considered that Crs. Johnston, Holdick and Davis might derive some benefit from it, it was therefore moved that tenders be called for the crushing of 15,000 yards of gravel in the gravel pit on S.E. 16-50-19-W. 4th. The gravel being crushed to 3/4" minus. 10,000 yards to be stock piled at the pit, gravel and 5,000 yards to be stock piled in the N.W. corner of N.E. 25-49-18-W. 4th. Cd.

The secretary-treasurer was instructed to advertise the tenders in the Viking News, Holden Herald, Tofield Mercury, Vegreville Observer and the Star Chronicle at Wainwright, with tenders to be in by February 14th.

In connection with the agreement with Ila Harris and Associates for the General Assessment to be undertaken in the County, and dealt with by resolution 620/1962, the secretary-treasurer informed the Council that he had discussed the matter of supplying of previous land assessment records, as stated in the agreement, with the Director of Assessment and also with the Assessor Mr. G. Hughes — the Director of Assessment had stated that the matter was not too serious, as a rule the assessors only ask to check the previous tax and assessment records and acreage and etc., where a marked discrepancy appears evident, and Mr. Hughes had expressed the same opinion. It was moved that information be received and that the secretary-treasurer do so.

Anyone for badminton?

(Peter Nickel)

Mrs. Dean McKernan informs The Mercury that badminton equipment is stored at her place which has been left over from the old badminton club. Apparently all the equipment is there and the only thing required is someone to use it. So far as I know there has been no talk of starting up a club again, so if those interested would get together, there would be many hours of fine entertainment ahead.

Mrs. McKernan would appreciate hearing from those interested. Her phone number is 128.

Service with a smile

No matter what the weather, some jobs must carry on, such as the one above. During a cold blizzard, the photographer, driving through Holden caught these two men from the natural gas company carrying on their duties the same as on any other day. There was certainly no envy on the part of the photographer. On the left is Pete Kook and on the right is Bill Ewanow of Tofield.

Fire Association has first annual meeting

The first annual meeting of the Tofield Rural Fire Protection Association was held in the Legion Hall on January 16th, with about forty members in attendance.

President Congleln explained the sequence of events leading to the final drawing of the Fuji in November. The test given by the Fire Commission showed that all specifications had been met, and in fact some items had been exceeded.

The financial statement showed that all bills had been paid, but that a small sum had been paid by sale of a few more stoves.

Bylaws suggested by the Directors were discussed and duly adopted by the meeting, with certain additions.

The annual dues were set at $3.00 per member, payable by March 1st, 1963. The Bylaw on this reads "Shareholders becoming in arrears of dues shall have their protection suspended until said arrears are paid." This means that if your $3.00 is not paid by March 1st, you will forfeit your membership rights, up to the time as it is paid. These dues may be paid at the Bank of Montreal, Tofield. The attention of shareholders to this at once will help keep expenses down.

During discussion, it was felt that an auxiliary pumper should be added to the unit. It was agreed, however, that this could be postponed for awhile and rather than make the annual dues too high it would be better for each shareholder to talk to his non-member neighbors and encourage them to buy a share. There are still a few left to fill the quota.

Election of Directors resulted in the interim board being returned to office three for 3-year, three for 2-year and three for 1-year periods.

Slamming the door

There can be few, who, watching the unhappy turn of events in negotiations for Britain's entry into the Common Market, would now be able to say "Good!"

After watching the developments in the discussions over a period of some two years, during which our own prime minister exerted every effort to block British entry, and rose to heights of vehemence in his public utterances on the matter, most people must have been considerably illumined in the progress Britain was making towards entry. As time wore on, it became more and more apparent that it might be far more advantageous to many of our businesses to have Britain in, rather than out.

Well, maybe Canada protested too much. And maybe Britain hesitated too long. It is interesting, but fruitless, to speculate on whether France would have slammed the door a year ago . . . whether, indeed, the idea had even occurred to de Gaulle, who was at that time still embroiled in his war in Algeria. The measure of how quickly time passes, and how quickly world events move, can be seen in the number of crises which France herself has faced during the past year.

Anyway, for good or ill, the die is cast for the present at least, and until some major calamity disturbs the balance in the six-nation market, it will stay the way it is, with Britain "not in".

Maybe this is the time for Diefenbaker to resume his 1958 suggestion of more trade with Britain, and this time really mean it. When Britain met him with a whole-hog removal of tariffs proposition, it was more than he could face. Now, however, Britain isn't just in the same lanky position, and both Macmillan and Diefenbaker might gain from a partial elimination of customs bars . . . to the mutual good of our trade relationship with that country, and a bettering of our presently unfavorable trade with Uncle Sam.

Hockey waning sport

It appears the younger set of Tofield has given up the sport of hockey — at least to a large extent. A few years ago, youngsters were just too overwhelmed at the thought of dressing up and getting onto the ice. Thirty degrees above or below, they didn't seem to mind. Sticks were slashing, pucks flying, and sometimes even teeth were flying, but all this in good will. Nowadays, time on the skating rink is generally found in darkness, empty and lonely looking.

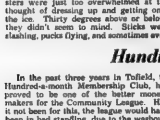
Let's hope time will bring back these gay youngsters merrily indulging in the one-time favorite winter sport. —P.N.

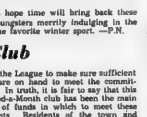
Hundred Club

In the past three years in Tofield, the Hundred-a-month Membership Club, has proved to be one of the better moneymakers for the Community League. Had it not been for this, the league would have been in bad standing, due to the washouts of the last two July 1st celebrations.

Tofield has a fine Community Hall of which residents are very proud, and commercials from strangers are always favorable.

However, the hall must be paid for and at the beginning of each year, pressure is put on the League to make sure sufficient funds are on hand to meet the commitments. In truth, it is fair to say that this Hundred-a-Month club has been the main source of funds in which to meet these payments. Residents of the town and district have, in the past, been very cooperative in this matter and it is hoped that the same co-operation will be given this year. The ticket sellers are now canvassing both the old and new members, please give your co-operation and help this worthwhile project. —P.N.





MacDuff Ottawa report

. . . The poor banks

OTTAWA.—Should Canada's eight chartered banks be cut loose from the age-old shackles binding them to the public interest to engage in free-swinging competition with other less restricted financial institutions which in recent years have been grousing avidly at their expense?

That is the question the Porter Royal Commission on Banking and Finance must decide now that it has completed months of public hearings across the country and turns its attention to the difficult job of preparing its report. Ultimately it's a question that both the Government and Parliament may also have to face.

In a massive brief and through-out three days of testimony recently, the Canadian Bankers' Association launched a concerted drive to rid themselves of old controls and regulations and to be given new and broader lending powers to compete with the fast growing near-banks-loans, insurance, trust and loan companies, and the credit unions.

During the postwar years, the chartered Banks' share of the savings of Canadians had declined from 57 per cent to 47 per cent, the bankers complained. From 1950 to 1960 inclusive of the quarterly figure had increased by only 19 per cent, compared by an increase of corresponding per cent in the assets of other financial institutions.

The reason the banks had fallen behind, they contended, was that they were limited at least theoretically — to charging a maximum of six per cent interest on loans, which means they could not compete with the higher rate paid by the near-banks for the savings of their depositors. Because of the interest restrictions, they had been prevented since 1958 from being primary buyers of mortgages issued under the National Housing Act. They were hindered, too, by the fact they could not invest in conventional mortgages like many other credit groups, nor could they accept mortgages as security.

IMPORTANT TO ALL.

But it was not just a matter of the well-interest of the banks, but of the national interest, the bankers warned. "The continuing relative decline is of importance to the chartered banks and may have serious repercussions on the economy", they said.

The Association pointed out that the Bank of Canada is confined to working through the banking system to carry out its monetary policy. If it wants to restrict credit, it puts the clamps on their lending ability. If it wants to expand credit, it makes cash cheaper on call to the banking system.

The Bank cannot bring pressure to the base on which the flank of Canada operated would become progressively narrower, with the result that the central bank would have to push ever harder on the chartered banks in one direction or another in order to produce the required effect on the economy as a whole.

Unfortunately for the banks the argument that they should be given broader lending powers in order to make monetary policy more effective was no support from someone who is in a good position to know, Bank of Canada Governor Louis Rasminsky. The Governor did not agree that the banks were at a marked disadvantage by virtue of the fact they had to maintain certain non-earning cash reserves and low earning short-term securities which other institutions did not have to maintain.

SAME TREATMENT

To demonstrate that they were all in favour of free and equal competition, the banks told the Commission they had no objection to their opponents being brought under the Bank Act and being given all the privileges of banks, providing they also accepted the same restrictions.

Whether or not that was the answer remained for the Commission to decide, but various members made it clear that they had more than a few misgivings about the proposition advanced by the banks.

It is probably still true, as Prime Minister Lord Melbourne told the House of Commons in 1841, that Canada's chartered banks are subject to more strict and far reaching controls than virtually any country in the world. For this there are reasons. They relate to the geography of the country and the difficulty of harmonizing it into a nation without a large degree of government direction and control. They relate also to the concentrated control and monolithic nature of Canada's banking system.

Throughout the hearing before the Porter Commission, the bankers vehemently insisted there was strong competition among themselves on every aspect of the banking business, including interest rates. Broadening their lending powers would only intensify competition within the financial system, thus ensuring that interest rates were determined purely by market conditions.

WELL CONTROLLED

Even such an inherently friendly witness as the Canadian Manufacturers' Association had difficulty swallowing the proposition of intense bank competition when it appeared before the Commission. If there was competition, it was highly controlled, said one spokesman, who appeared to pretty well reflect the Commission's own feelings.

Even if they only control some 75 per cent of the savings of the people, the banks still control a lot. Considering the fact the system is dominated by only a few of the big banks and that all of them operate in close coordination, it is open to question how much competition can or will exist among them.

Some of the big fears of some of the Commissioners was that if the banks were given the powers they were asking for, on more equal terms with the near-banks, they would end by swallowing them up or driving them out of business. Needless to say, the banks pooh-poohed any such suggestions.

That under questioning from Commissioner W. T. Brown, a vice-president of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, acknowledged the possibility that the banks might buy up the major trust companies, if they were given the powers they were asking, aroused most of which are now associated with the banks through substantial share ownership or interlocking directorates. "I don't know that is going to increase competition", Mr. Brown remarked.

Even if the bankers succeed in winning approval of their case from the Commissioners, they must still win their case before Parliament. They have reason to be apprehensive if Prime Minister Diefenbaker's fiery ire is still in view when the issue comes before the Government.

When a sharp rise in interest rates in the summer of 1959 led the banks to murmur about restraint of their own lending rates, Mr. Diefenbaker reacted violently.

"To raise the allowed rate of bank interest would in no way increase the money supply", he declared. "It would only increase the differences in costs and would mean added income to the banks. It is not the intention of the government to recommend to Parliament any increase of the statutory limits on bank interest to borrowers, not matter what the propaganda in that direction may be".

The pride of County Down

WHERE THE MOUNTAINS OF MOURNE SWEEP DOWN TO THE SEA!

Everyone tends to exaggerate the beauty of his native land. Brahmans, it is said, are prone to exaggeration, and, so often they extol the charms of the "Emerald Isle", especially when they do it in song, people who have never been there are inclined to adopt a rather patronizing air and to label it "maudlin sentiment, not to be taken seriously".

May an Englishman, therefore, confirm that, as the song says, the Mountains of Mourne do sweep down to the sea and, further, that this is epitomized in the district which the Irish bestow so liberally on this compact area to the south-east of County Down are not by any means misplaced.

This is without doubt the most beautiful mountain range in Ulster. It certainly has the highest mountain in Northern Ireland — Slieve Donard (2,796 feet) and it is a fact that the source of the longest river, the Bann, is to be here. And surely the most splendid marine drive in the Six Counties. If not in all Ireland. Is the one encircling the Mourne as it skirts the little towns of Newcastle, Annalong, Kilkeel, Rostrevor, Hillsows and Bryansford.

The drive provides an excellent introduction to this twisted chain of mountains, leaving the up-and-coast of granite which broke through the surface of slaty rocks or carried them up with it. Not fewer than twenty peaks, eleven of them over 2,000 feet high, may be seen in an area of only ten-by-fifteen miles.

The countenance of the Mourne's varies with the vantage point and the time of day. From a high place to the north, they appear magnificently rewarding, possessing a smoky blue, harshly jagged quality that has led some observers to liken them to the Andes. Time's ubiquitous sculpture has yet to show results of the hard granite. Seen from anywhere along the glorious, rock-strewn expanse of Dundrum Bay, however, the Mournes present a softer aspect as they soar imperiously from the pier and sea and valley is the deep meadows and trout fishing streams, mountain streams, holding a fair stock of brown trout and replenished from the plentiful annual sea-trout towards the end of August. These are quiet rivers, however, so the angler must be on the qui vive soon after a flood.

The people of Kilkeel are enterprising and friendly. In the spring they indulge in a "Prawn Festival", when the "King of Mourne" is crowned. This precedes a whole week of jollieings. Later in the season, Whitings (from the Isle of Man) effect a raid on the town of Kilkeel, the chief objective appearing to be to capture a Celtic maiden with whom they will enjoy dancing later in the evening. There are displays of Irish dancing and the Mourne Pipers ceremonials from their history.

Rostrevor, on Carlingford Lough, is a lovely spot, distinguished by its gentle climate. It is richly sheltered by trees. One can take part in yachting and pony trekking and there are many delightful paths for the walkers and the ramblers.

Perhaps the best known is the walk to the Cloughmore — the "big stone". This is a glacial erratic weighing 40 tons and perched on a projecting spur. It stands out clearly because the local boys whitewash it every year and tradition has it that if you walk to it early in the morning, without breakfast, and balance on a pebble on the top of it you will have good luck.

The native will tell you a story that it is one of Finn MacCool's marbles and will point to an outcrop of the Carlingford Mountains across the Lough to show you the giant lying on his back taking a nap.

For a quiet holiday, Annalong takes a lot of beating and Warrenpoint, B.C. She was formerly the capital of Iveagh, which is now centred on Carlingford Lough; while Newry — "The Cap of the North" — one of the oldest, yet one of the most go-ahead towns in Ulster — will reward the antiquary as well as the ordinary visitor.

Yes, there is a great deal more here than the mountains, but how much poorer the region would be without them! For the queenly Mournes make everything one does so much more enjoyable.

Editor, The Mercury.

Sir:

I made in the Jan. 10th issue of The Mercury, items in "Peter's Patter" column, and to write our views on the subject of the daily CNR crossing at Tofield.

All the school bus drivers must breathe a sigh of relief each time they make a safe crossing at this place.

Why can't the school buses use the crossing just west of town, known as the Creamery road? There is a clear view of the tracks both east and west. It would not be any further for the west buses to go, and no little more for the east buses, we would think it would be a great load off the minds of the drivers to know they were doing all they could to ensure safety for the children who have to cross this crossing twice a day, five times a week.

Another solution could be to hire a high school boy from town who would be at the crossing for thirty minutes twice a day, to direct the buses at this dangerous crossing. On our school bus there are children from 20 families, and if each of these families paid 10c each week to hire someone to ensure a safe crossing, and the other families of children buses using this crossing did the same, we are sure it would be a good allowance for some schoolboy at the end of the week. The money could be paid to the drivers at the end of each week to be given to the principal, to be paid to the boy at the end of the week. Or maybe the town police could find time to do this very worthwhile job.

I thank you for allowing us the space in your paper to write the views of just one child's opinion, who has to cross to school each day five times.

(Signed):
A Worried Father and Mother.

An efficiency expert is one who is smart enough to tell you how to run your business, and too smart to start one of his own.

Most essential qualification of an engineer: The ability to make your superiors believe your new ideas will work and to explain afterwards why it didn't.

Politicians' claim there is no sign of intelligent life on Mars. There's little indication of it here, either.

By George!

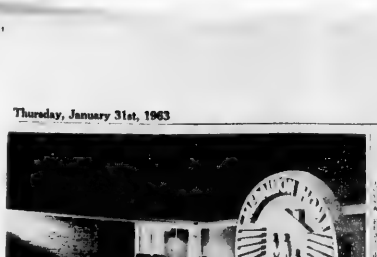
One of my pet hates is the bitter-sweet.

All too frequently the daily newspapers carry stories of drivers leaving the scene of an accident. Many of them, of course, are minor. Nevertheless, anyone involved in any kind of an accident makes the matter worse when he leaves the scene.

The cases that probably irk the public the most are the ones which involve a motor vehicle striking a pedestrian, and the driver turns away. One of the most gruesome I have ever heard about took place in this province two or three years ago. A pedestrian was struck by a car, and landed, still conscious, on the hood of the vehicle. Unfeeling, he pleaded with the driver to stop, but the driver only increased his speed and finally the victim fell onto the road and was left there. How could any driver be so heartless?

Then there are many cases involving children who have been left lying helpless on the road or sidewalk while the offending driver makes his get-away. One can hardly help but feel that life imprisonment would not be too severe a punishment for this sort of driver.

Why do people leave the scene of an accident? Panic has been suggested as one reason. Possibly there are two other reasons which are even more likely. These, of course, are personal opinions, but I would guess that hit - and - run drivers are usually people who have had previous convictions for any number of traffic offences, and may be driving without a license, or those who feel their position in society may be jeopardized if word got around that they had been involved in an accident. One thing is certain: Anyone who is convicted of leaving the scene of an accident must definitely will become a social outcast, and well he should. This must be the lowest form of cowardice.



New medallion home

New comfort, convenience and safety are featured at homes identified by the Medallion symbol. The Medallion represents the exciting new trend in modern living and indicates that the home has modern light for living, work-saving appliances, enough wiring, circuits and outlets for full Housepower. It is also an assurance to the owner that the electrical installation meets the highest standards and will remain electrically modern for years.

Few prospective home buyers have enough knowledge of the electrical systems to know if the electrical system is big enough to carry all the numerous appliances that make living so much easier. The tiny metal Medallion, mounted on an illuminated bell push or house number, indicates the house is up-to-date electrically and is guaranteed to provide all the convenience electricity can bring.

BRONZE MEDALLION There are two standards of Medallion homes. The bronze Medallion certifies that the house has at least one major appliance installed with certain available for the owner's new lighting feature, plus full Housepower which means a service entrance of at least 100 amperes capacity and a panel with 30 circuit positions. Even in the smallest home, it means a sufficient number of branch circuits and an ample supply of outlets in the kitchen properly located throughout the house.

GOLD MEDALLION The newer, higher standard, is identified by the Gold Medallion, which also certifies three-bedroom, fumeless, flameless, electric heating and which has a Gold Medallion home has a choice of two major appliances included, with circuits available for five more, and at least five lighting fixtures.

While many new homes feature the Medallion symbol of electrical excellence, owners of older homes find, too, that bringing their homes up to Medallion standards results in greater comfort and convenience.

We heard a few days ago that Brian Taylor, who is visiting in Holland, had enjoyed skating on the lakes from Amsterdam to Oudkerk — the "Eleven Cities" skating rally in Friesland. The distance skated is about 124 miles — the race is started from Leeuwarden to Sneek, Bolsen, Stavoren, Hindeloopen, Workum, three or four other towns, and back to Leeuwarden. The Council of the M.D. of Starland No. 47 requested the support of all local authorities for the resolution.

Moved that this Council goes on record as being in favor of the resolution as passed by the Council of the M.D. of Starland No. 47. CM.

A letter from the Unemployment Insurance Commission in regards to minutes of the Unemployment Insurance Fund stating that some of the minutes are not in sequence of the release is due to improper information given by the employer and requesting that rigid policy of providing complete and detailed information as to reason for separation be instituted by employers.

Moved that the letter be received and filed. CM.

A letter from Mr. H. M. Danyluk, Holden, was referred to the Council. Mr. Danyluk complained of the fact that he had, some years ago, been refused a culvert for the approach from the municipal road to his service station grounds and that now the operator of the service station across the road from him had been supplied with a culvert by the County. He also stated that this new service station's approach was some 30 feet closer to the highway than the one that Mr. Danyluk had been instructed to construct for his service station. Mr. Danyluk wanted to know if he could be allowed to extend his approach closer to the No. 14 Highway.

Moved that Mr. Danyluk be advised that, subject to approval at the Department of Highways, he may extend the approach on the municipal road to his service station. CM.

Moved that the minutes of the regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Beaver Foundation held on Thursday, January 3rd, 1963, be received and filed CM

Moved that the accounts as referred to the Council at this time be approved and passed for payment. CM.

Mr. Charles Sears and Mr. E. J. Coopkens of Tofield interviewed the Council at this time representing the Tofield FUA Local. They stated that, at the meeting of the local the previous evening, it had been suggested that the Provincial Government be requested to give consideration to the hard surfacing of the road north from Tofield starting in the S.E. corner of S.E. 13-52-18-W. 4th, north for a mile. The members of the FUA Local were of the opinion that as this road was travelled very extensively, it would be of great benefit to the Town of Tofield as well as the surrounding area if the Provincial Government were to take over this road as a government highway and hard surface it. Moved that the Council pass on record as supporting the proposed request. CM.

Moved that the Public Works Foreman, W. J. Peck, be instructed to attend Civil Defence Orientation course from January 21st. to January 25th inclusive. CM.

Mr. Bud Hansen of Viking submitted a bid of $1,100.00 for the N.E. 27-49-11-W. 4th. Moved that the secretary arrange to have the land advertised for sale and that a sale be held on the 28th day of February, 1963. Moved that the Council approve (Continued on Page Six)

Shadowland

One of the most interesting features of winter is the infinite variety of shadow patterns which come with the snow. Including all the footprints through the drifts, the photograph could have been taken in many places over the past week-end, when the wind stopped blowing clouds of snow, that is.

Head scratcher

Oscar Afseth, living 12 miles southwest of Holden, is still scratching his head over this one. Born to one of his purebred Herefords, artificially bred to a purebred Holstein bull, was a set of twin calves, one a Holstein, the other a Hereford. In search of finding an answer, Mr. Afseth traced back the cow's origin and found no trace of Hereford blood. The calves are both very sorry and are coming along nicely, except that, as is the case with any set of twins, they are twice as hard to handle.

Operation snow removal

Crews swung into action on Tuesday of last week to remove the snow which had piled up on Main Street during the recent snow storms. The job consisted of two operations, as shown in the above photos. The first consisted of dozing the snow onto the street by the gas company's bulldozer. The second was loading the snow onto the truck to be hauled away. This operation was handled by Dan Polster and Herb McAfee. It took only a matter of a few hours to complete the job.

Peter's patter

It sure is good to hear from ... this week and let me know that they enjoy my little articles. I regret not being ... to receive some of the letters ... stated that we were entered ... strangers to me and the ... presentations were only brief. I missed the opportunity of ... during the intermission.

At the time of writing this article there are many topics to choose from, but I guess the one that is the most talked about is the proposed question in taxes or the PYA meeting for the paving of North Road. This latter subject I will deal with later. I have chosen a matter of which I was unaware till just recently and have heard of others living in Tofield long before me who for the first time have seen the museum of the Historical Society. This certainly is interesting to see and I would urge everyone to see it the first chance they get.

Among the collections are many photographs of oldtimers, old buildings of the town's pioneers, etc. The old Methodist organ and first Anglican church pews have quite an interesting history as well as some of the homesteaders' tools and gear of all sorts, etc. Also displayed is a map which was drawn up in the very early days of intervalues pushing bangs on a wall which is very interesting and should be seen by everyone. There are many more items too numerous to mention, but the most interesting is the fact that they are all from around the local area and date back to the 1900's up to 1910. The Society is to be congratulated for the past few years and has plans to acquire numerous articles of interest to place in the museum which is located in the school grounds. Should anyone have any such articles in their possession, the Society would be very pleased to display them and it would be given the best of care.

Local history is always one of the most interesting subjects and a visit to the museum will provide a good topic of conversation and ideas to invent.

Personally, I think the Society should be greatly applauded for the work they have done.

Modern etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. In a home where there is no service, and where serving dishes are put on the table, who serves and who clears around the table?

A. Properly, the host starts by offering a dish to the woman on his right, and the hostess from her end of the table starts another dish on its way around the table in the other direction. It also has a guest who is seated near one of the other dishes to begin passing it.

Q. When I have borrowed a needle and thread from the ladies' cloakroom in a theater room to make some small repair on my dress, am I supposed to tip the attendant?

A. Yes, this is expected and is less than a quarter.

Q. Is it all right for a man to smoke a cigar at a social function, even though all the other guests are smoking cigarettes?

A. There is nothing at all wrong with a man's smoking a cigar where other people are smoking.

Q. When one has received an invitation three weeks in advance of a dinner party is a formal note, when declining, necessary to acknowledge this invitation?

A. Emphatically yes. There is nothing so discourteous or so incomprehensible as keeping a hostess waiting for a reply to such an invitation.

Q. I see more and more people cutting their bread and rolls in the middle of the dinner table. Is this now considered proper?

A. No. Good manners still require that bread, rolls, and the like be broken into small pieces with the fingers, and each piece buttered as it is eaten.

Second fire hits Round Hill

Fire in the Floyd Tiedemann residence called the Camrose Fire Department to Round Hill on the second time in just over a month. Like the fire the day after Christmas in the Roman Catholic rectory this one was confined to the interior of the building. Both fires were fought in sub-zero weather and the fire department was hampered by lack of water.

Mr. and Mrs. Tiedemann were not at home when the fire was noted and they could not be located until the next day. The home was purchased from John Bowsyan, along with a garage, last fall.

Call for help came in the Camrose Fire Department at 11:50 Saturday night and 4½ minutes later the Municipal Civil Defence pumper was at the fire and in operation. Five members of the Camrose Fire Department accompanied the truck to Round Hill and did not return until 3:35 a.m. Sunday. It took another crew until 8:30 a.m. Sunday to ready the equipment for the next fire.

The Tiedemann residence next door to the Tiedemann house was in danger of burning also, but had the fire been established. A fairly strong wind was blowing from the burning house to the Hazen home.

Damage to the interior of the Tiedemann home was considerable while the exterior shows little damage. It is believed the fire started in the kitchen and spread to other rooms eventually ending in the attic.

By using their 500-gallon water supply very sparingly the firemen were able to hold the blaze until two tank loads of water arrived from Camrose. Camrose Oil Field Supply supplied the additional water with 1500-gallon and 1800-gallon tanks.

Frost brings havoc to power, phone lines

The pretty, glistening hoar frost which made trees and bushes look so dreamy over the weekend brought nothing but nightmares to linemen servicing customers for both Calgary Power and Alberta Government Telephones.

Starting late Saturday the problem developed as lines sagged and cut service. Crews worked all night and in much of Sunday, continuing as interruption calls came in on Monday and even Tuesday.

Workmen in the vicinity of Bashaw, Alix, especially around Bentley, where there are many lines coming in, are particularly vulnerable the snow because of the high voltage circuits.

To-day Calgary Power is reported busy going in the Bashaw district though it is not known if there is any trouble with the service. In Camrose line crews were on trouble, but the area was reported on the alert.

OVER EXERCISED

Engineers of lines believe causing heavy surges of current trapped in feeders, such as Holden more than 200 times on Sunday when at least one has known to trip more than twice in the past 12 months. Now in the air about the cause. Ice on the wires and sparks are reported. It would be calculated over as soon as possible. The switching crews are working exceptionally well, it is said. The men of this field can be expected to take this kind of problem in stride.

Guest editorial—

CBC—A Liability?

No this magazine is not joining the chorus of newspapers and magazines which daily, weekly or monthly questian the existence of the CBC." We regard the CBC radio and television networks as one of our most valuable national resources.

The CBC is one employer who has reversed the trend of emigration of our best brains and creators. Toronto, according to a leading U S publication on the Arts, has become the most important centre on the continent for the production of live network-sponsored TV shows. The actor, the dancer, the musician, the writer, can all find fairly steady employment in Canada, thanks to the CBC

Detractors of the CBC seldom mention that its new rival has not succeeded in capturing the major portion of the audience where both are in direct competition But thus is beside the point We are not interested in competition here, for competition in this field often leads to the production of shows to appeal to the lowest common denominator This has already been the complaint in Britain where "competition" has been introduced into the TV scene If competition for audiences were the stimulant to excellence in radio, the United States radio scene should be one of unexcelled performance Anyone who has tw oldest a radio or TV dial in the U S knows how ridiculous such a claim would be

In the 1961 Summer issue of Queen's Quarterly Graham Spry has written a masterful and, we think, fair analysis of the CBC's position. For years the private radio station has been producing cheap shows using cheap records with skillful but small announcing staffs and at the same time reaping large profits (to say the least) The private sector of our radio scene (which is much larger than the public sector) has not lived up to its responsibilities

That the CBC should be berated in our daily newspapers quite regularly is not to our mind a reflection on the CBC but on the intelligence of the public and the editorial writers of our daily newspapers

Personally we rejoice in the CBC. Our radio provides us with an excellent news service, fine music performed by fine Canadian orchestras, book reviews, plays, documentary investigations of social problems and thought provoking daily and weekly analyses of the news. In short the CBC is a necessary complement to our daily newspaper and our lambs.

New precedent

Politicians of three parties in Canada are complaining about the appointment of Senator Wallace McCutcheon to a cabinet post by Prime Minister Diefenbaker, on the grounds there has never been a cabinet minister in Canada who didn't hold a seat in the house, and who could answer, and be asked, questions.

In the first place, they forget the appointment by MacKenzie King during the last war of General McNaughton as minister of defence, who never managed a seat, though he tried repeatedly to be elected. And in the second place, they ignore the fact it is a time-honored tradition in Britain to have cabinet ministers whose seat is in the House of Lords.

In our opinion, there are too few men capable of the job to fence it in with restrictions. Let us have the best men possible, whether they sit in the Commons, the Senate, or Buy Street. And if this is a precedent following Mr. King's move) it's too bad it wasn't established earlier in our history.

After our own heart

Edmonton's Marcel Lambert, Canada's new minister of veterans' affairs, is a man after our own heart. With all the noise about anti-Americanism and all the soft-pedalling of it, Lambert had the wit and the intelligence to point out this week that being PRO-Canadian did not require being ANTI-anything. The tremendous preponderance of American literature which floods this country leads many of us to believe that we are already a satellite, if not actually a state, of the union, and indeed, it isn't just small children who sometimes believe that President Kennedy is president of Canada.

It is vital to our continuance as a nation that we foster in every way possible a pride in being Canadian, a pride in accomplishment, a pride in what Canada stands for in the world of nations . . . and this is more than just vacillating on the nuclear arms question. Our hundredth birthday coming up next year should be an occasion for rejoicing in the glorious promise of youth, and rejoicing that we are Canadian, with no carping references to what we are not.

Nonsense in reporting

We sprang to the defence of newspapermen generally when we were told recently by a member of the British Columbia cabinet that the newspapers there seldom found an opportunity to credit the government for anything, but rarely passed up a chance to criticize it. However, we felt bound to set a little straight this week on reading an item in The Edmonton Journal masquerading as a news item, but which should have found its way into the opinion columns of the editorial page.

Under the by-line Hal Malone, and written specially (and we hope exclusively) to The Journal, the item compares Premier Bennett to Mandrake the Magician in his handling of the provincial budget. Pointing out that he manages to increase the give-away program in all directions, while at the same time cutting taxes, the writer charges Mr Bennett with the miracle of a near-balanced budget through the under-estimation of his revenue, coupled with over-estimating his expenses.

To clinch his point, Mr. Malone declares little credit will be given by the expert judgment which estimated a surplus last year of only $1,000,000, when at year's end it reached $20,-600,000—over 20 times as much—out of a total of roughly $350,000,000 budgeted.

What nonsense is this?

Any corporation treasurer or comptroller would agree it is prudent to under-estimate revenue, at the same time maximizing expenditures.

And even the final surplus represents a modest error . . . would Mr Malone have us believe it is possible to gaze a year into the future and estimate down to the last three or four thousandths? This is rubbish which should not be found in responsible Canadian newspapers. It is partisan drivel of this kind which has undermined the stature of newspapers, and newsmen, generally.

Bad impression?

Tofield Chamber of Commerce was visited by the western representative of the Canadian Chamber during their meeting this week. when there was a discussion on attracting industry to the town, with many ideas presented and some of them good ones

Upon leaving the meeting, it was noticed that some citizens had parked their cars in front of the meeting room, which was alright except that they were parked right on the sidewalk, leaving only about one foot clearance between the car and the iron rail on the opposite side of the walk. This would be very annoying to anyone walking by. What impression did this leave on the mind of the guest representative? If we are to attract industry or even visitors to our town, instances such as this should be avoided —P.N.

'Worldwide' theme for Scout Week

Scouts and Cubs in the Wild Rose district, centering on Camrose, have been busy organizing plans for marking the annual Boy Scout Week With nine groups in the district, boys from Camrose, Bawlf, New Sarepta, Hay Lakes, New Norway, Edberg and Ferintosh are planning their own unit to mark the week. Finished. The man with the last would please blow his horn along to indicate the article was complete.

(By John Mahler)

A man bumped into an acquaintance in a bar, and remarked: "I thought you'd given up drinking. What's the matter —no self control?"

"Sure," was the reply, "I've got plenty of self control. I'm just too strong to be a slave to it".

"My advice, sir", said the pharmacist to the car owner, "is that you keep the oil and change the car."

"When do you use a waterless cooker?" asked the home economics teacher.

"When you don't want to cook water", Brighteyes answered.

It's a pity that things were not so arranged that an empty head, like an empty stomach, wouldn't let its owner rest until he had put something in it.

MacDuff Ottawa report . . . The snow-shoe election

February 11th, 1963.

OTTAWA—Some of the most dramatic weeks in Canadian parliamentary history ended in a close with the dissolution of the 26th Parliament on Monday 4th. That day saw a Prime Minister and Progressive Conservative party who had looked for months as if they had threatened to force Prime Minister Diefenbaker out of the leadership.

The backbenchers in the party together with most of the Cabinet called publicly for the resignation of the Prime Minister and replacement with Finance Minister George Nowlan. The revolt had developed for three days and led to approaches being made to the Social Credit Party to determine if it would support a new Conservative Government in a Parliament headed by Mr. Nowlan.

Several of the Cabinet had reached the stage where they were going to demand that Mr. Diefenbaker resign or be refused by a majority of their resignations. But Agriculture Minister Hamilton and other loyal Ministers warned that if Mr. Diefenbaker was forced out they would quit.

Fighting for his political life Mr. Diefenbaker made a forceful and spirited speech in the Commons. During most of it he was addressing his own Conservative colleagues rather than facing the opposition. It was an effort to demonstrate that he was still capable of providing vigorous leadership and it succeeded.

With the speech, effective as it was in impressing the House of Commons, he failed to impress the opposition. All three parties set out to defeat Mr. Diefenbaker's minority Government in a stand-of-confidence motion.

The Liberals, Social Creditors and New Democratic Party were all agreed that the Conservatives had failed to give a clear statement of policy on impending national defence. It had failed to organize the business of the House so that the 1963-64 estimates and budget could be introduced. It had failed to outline a positive program of legislation respecting many things for which Parliament and previous Parliaments had already given authority.

The non-confidence motion carried by a vote of 142 in favour and 111 against. Thus the shaky Conservative administration finally came tumbling down and the stage for calling the election was set.

The Tory caucus saw Mr. Diefenbaker ask the cabinet individual expressions of loyalty from each Cabinet minister. This, despite the fact that several of the Cabinet had in the past two days been working to oust the Prime Minister. The Canadian Press reported that some of the Ministers breaking down and tendered their pledges of loyalty in tears. In fact others said there was hardly a dry eye in the House as Senator Gratton O'Leary delivered a passionate plea to rally around Mr. Diefenbaker and warned that the future of the party was endangered by the treachery of revolt against the leader.

The caucus over, the communiqués and private 30-minute energy-sapping broadcasts and videotape their tremendous moment of Mr. Diefenbaker flew to the other cabinet ministers came to him to the caucus room and with a straight face told reporters that the caucus had been "extremely harmonious". Both statements were "fantastic". But Robert Thompson the national Social Credit leader did not comment when interviewed. He knew better (This informed view was written before the dramatic resignations of George Hees and Pierre Sevigny at last weekend)

The fascinating demonstrations of internecine political warfare carried on within the ranks of the Conservative party apparently at an end, the members of Parliament began packing to return to their home ridings. They have six weeks of campaigning in February and March in frigid days and freezing nights.

It was being tagged as the "snow-shoe" election because of the winter weather it will be hard slogging as well as hard slugging. There will be greater emphasis on train travel, not so much traversing the country by plane as far as the Conservatives were concerned But the Liberals still planned to send their leader, Hon. L. B. Pearson, across Canada by chartered plane.

Undoubtedly the Government's defence policy or lack of policy — as emphasized by the resignation of its Minister of Defence Douglas Harkness will be the issue on which the election will be fought. Mr. Harkness has made it clear that he will break the Conservative party line in the election campaign because they are not understanding the import of the Social Credit group. In the last election they did not realize until too late that they should have been fighting the Socreds in Quebec not the Conservatives They will not make that mistake twice. The Liberals also expect to do better in the Prairies and pick up seats in Manitoba and Saskatchewan

The Conservatives are hoping to win back some seats in Ontario. They hope to hold to what they have in the Maritimes and in the West. But Tory members privately reckon helped that there is one of the party has suffered because of the party's poor showing in Parliament and the disparaging of Mr Diefenbaker. Social Creditors were really confident they would win many seats in Quebec and pick up other seats in the West The New Democratic Party hoped to at least double its numbers in Parliament.

The spectre of anti-Americanism as an issue looms over the election campaign. Prime Minister Diefenbaker has made it clear that he will brand the Liberals as "tools" of the United States. He will condemn the Americans for what he terms "over-extended interference" in the affairs of this country in recent months.

Mr. Pearson will emphasize that the issues in the campaign are the need for a stable parliament, the need for a decisive Government and the need for a purposeful Government with a definite program. He will stress the need for a Government that will not be afraid to stand up to the United States and will not be afraid to say no to Washington when necessary. He will stress the need for a Government that will not be afraid to say no to Washington when necessary. He will stress the need for a Government that will not be afraid to say no to Washington when necessary. He will stress the need for a Government that

I always learned that to the country there are only two seasons. English and winter. For that some to me and I some upon a new language. Rio on my way to Ryley I took the east road at Tofield and it seems the hilliest part of the Northern Lights land as usual. I stopped for the lunch and while stopped I noticed a sign which looked a bit familiar to me. It has only sides to it, which means that it must be a stop sign, but the word did not read "stop". I knew the Dept. of Highways was always coming up with some nice ones, so I thought it best to investigate. My dictionary did it's best, as a Christmas present, but the picture puzzled until I found that I had the word written upside down. I got out of the car and there was some pictures mounted on my head long enough to make out the word which is pronounced "Stop". After getting over the initial shock I picked up everything that fell from my head and carried on with the journey. Some damned them all after leaving the highway. I found which is here, which is now, which is Ryley, for the first time. I was greeted at the door by Mrs. Peter Nickell and Mrs. Jack Jacobson and Anton Knudsen.

De Gaulle's stand on the ECM

President De Gaulle's roadblock halting Britain's advancement into the Common Market is a very serious problem which may well affect the future of European unity. It is true that Britain and France have been age-old enemies in the sense of conflicting political interests, but, Britain's entry, according to western officials, would not harm French economy or the economy of any other Common Market country. At most, it would strengthen the Common Market through more circulation of money and of the primary and finished products. It would seem that De Gaulle has particular and hidden motives, although various political observers believe his attitude is his way of getting back at the British, since the scars of ancient wars with England are unhealed. Such is not a logical or a realistic reason for De Gaulle's stand unless his nationalistic spirit overrules his entire outlook on politics and foreign policy. Since Britain and France have been allies for some time now, this explanation seems sheer idiocy.

To all outward appearances, it would seem that France's stubborn and energetic president, Charles De Gaulle, is leaning towards a socialistic pattern of endeavour which could lead to pure Communism. If France and Russia do plan to reach an agreement for a "complete reorganization of the political and military conditions of power in the whole of Europe", Germany would be demilitarized. De Gaulle has discussed his plan with Germany's chancellor Conrad Adenauer, who is said to have received it enthusiastically. Although De Gaulle stated recently that "the the resumption of negotiations the subject of Britain's entry into the Common Market will be the first thing taken into consideration", he is cunning, and public opinion is that he is hedging for time to further his own ambitions.

If De Gaulle's "Reorganization Program" were to come about, it would mean that the two military powers would be France and Russia. These two nations would be the only ones in Europe with nuclear arms. De Gaulle's reorganization would mean that the United States and NATO would no longer supervise European affairs. The breaking up of NATO would be disastrous, and cancerous communism in Europe would rapidly surge westward.

We must not exaggerate the Common Market problem, but we must view it with an open mind. We cannot fully understand De Gaulle's motives at the present time, and even though his stand seems absurd, only the future will tell us whether he is a man of hith calibre or a man of Machiavellian principles.

—Maurice Beaulieu.

Stem the drop-outs

Today over eight per cent of Canada's working force is unemployed. Putting it another way, one man in every twelve lacks a job. Who is the one in twelve? What are his chances of finding a job in the future? According to a survey made of Canroze businesses, the answers are clear; he is likely a high school drop-out, and his future is not bright at all.

As automation takes away the jobs of more and more unskilled or semi-skilled blue collar workers, the ratio of these men to their skilled colleagues is growing increasingly smaller. In fact, a prominent industrialist has forecast the time, not far off, when manual workers will be the exception rather than the rule, and technicians will be the mainstay of industry. Many of our drop-outs do not realize that the jobs which minimize such "easy money" now may disappear in a few years, to be taken over by skilled workers or by machines.

A college graduate is always in demand; even a high school graduate enjoys a certain prestige as long as there are large numbers of unskilled and semi-skilled workers. But this will not always be so. It is therefore clear that there is a definite need for a decrease in the number of high school drop-outs and an increase in the number of graduates from high and vocational schools. We hope that by means of our survey and this editorial we have stressed this point sufficiently for the prevention of even more drop-outs in the future. We reserve emphasis in the face of the rising trend of automation.

—Frank MacInnis

The north road

To the businessmen, the improved road would be of great value, as it would bring in much more trade. To the travellers, it would bring a great deal of convenience, as it would cut quite a few miles off south- and north-bound traffic. Should the department accept the idea, the FUA should and will be much commended for their undertaking. If not they still deserve a lot of credit for trying. —P.N.

Education, Quo Vadis

There are many people nowadays who can tell us in detail what is wrong with education but like doctors who know all about the disease but have forgotten the meaning of health, they cannot tell us what is right with it or even what it aims to accomplish.

The need of education is at once clear if we compare man's position in this universe with that of the animals. In comparison with the animals, man is confronted with many disadvantages in his struggle for life. He cannot as the animals enjoy the fruits of nature as nature offers them, he cannot find shelter in the ways of the birds and the beasts or even allow himself to be led by an infallible instinct. Over against all these disadvantages man has only one benefit, which makes up for all these drawbacks and which leaves him alone all other creatures, namely his reason. It is precisely because man is an animal with an intellect that he is also a creature of will. The human mind is not on the mirror of all reality but it can also go beyond the outward appearances and find the hidden connections and causes of things and thus rebuild nature for its own enrichment.

But enrichment is not random accretion; it must be harm-ensure and planned. To provide us with such a plan to help us to build ourselves into an all round harmonious personality is the task of education. When it stimulates growth of all the possibilities and talents and potentialities in man in a coordinated fashion, then this education is right. But if it develops some aspect at once at the cost of others and thus produces an unbalanced and lopsided character then this education is wrong.

Now right and wrong is judged by the measure of certain unchangeable criteria, standards and ideals which must be found in the very nature of man.

In searching for the ultimate criteria of education, the word itself gives us a clue. Education, from the latin "e" and "ducere" "to lead from within" means to equip a young person with the knowledge and moral principles which as a man, he will need to orientate himself in reality, a path toward his destination in the midst of life.

Although it is true that each one of us has to work his destiny in diverse ways that each has to find out the line of action for in the end all these lines must converge in the point of gravity common to all mankind. It is precisely when human life loses its orientation towards its common objective, its sense of universal destiny that the harmony, the unity in variety of action and consequently peace which is not merely the absence of conflict but rather a planned cooperation toward a common good disintegrates into a blind chaos of cross purposes.

What then is the magnetic pole by which all human activity and consequently all education must plot its course?

The answer can be found in the two-fold nature of man, an animal with a reason.

As an animal, subject to all the limitations and conditions of the material world he has to be helped to acquire the skills which are necessary to serve the needs of the body, in other words he has to learn to do consciously what the animals do by blind instinct. But with his mind, he can escape from the orbit of the material world and a study from reluctant nature its deep secrets, its causes and laws. Armed with this knowledge, he can develop new advantages and make nature both his servant and his domain. In this domain nature is the constitution, and all the enjoyments of comfort of the acknowledgment.

The mind can even go farther beyond the changes and laws of creation, and reach for the ultimate Reality behind it all. For the laws of creation proclaim a Lawgiver, the chain of causality requires a Prime Mover as well as an ultimate End, the very fabric of nature demands an all knowing Designer, and the very beauty of nature reveals a supreme Artist.

It is then finally through the imparting of knowledge of the world around us and the inner, and of moral principles, our harmonious reaction to world we live in that man reaches his ultimate Absolute, his final End and the fulfilment of his being.

When we equip man to recognize increasingly the image of Absolute Himself and in his universe, and help him to conform his inner behavior to this Image as far as his potentialities allow, then we can say that he is truly educated.

—Rev. Fr. Henry Post.

Solve a Crime

by A. C. GORDON

YOU ARE THE DETECTIVE

You drive your car along the hedge-bordered drive of the huge Franklin Farrington estate, and upon arriving at the beautiful mansion, you are directed by a footman to the study of the master of the house. Farrington, a big man with a florid complexion, is sitting behind a huge desk. He is dressed in a dressing gown and slippers. He looks up as you enter, and says, "Ah, Detective Smith, I'm glad you've arrived. I'm afraid I've had a shock. Please sit down."

You sit down in a chair facing the desk, and Farrington continues, "I'm afraid I've had a shock. Please sit down."

"I was awakened at 3:30 this morning by a shot. I got up and went to my wife's room, and found her dead. She had been shot through the head. I immediately called you."

"Have you any idea who could have done it?" you ask.

"No, I haven't. I can't imagine who could have done it. My wife was a very popular woman, and had no enemies that I know of. I'm completely baffled."

"Have you touched anything?" you ask.

"No, I haven't touched anything. I left everything exactly as it was when I found her. I thought you would want to see it that way."

"Where is your wife now?" you ask.

"She is in her room. I'll take you there."

You follow Farrington up the stairs and into a large bedroom. The body of a beautiful woman lies on the bed. She is dressed in a nightgown and negligee. There is a bullet hole in her temple, and a small revolver lies on the floor beside the bed.

"Is this your wife?" you ask.

"Yes, that is my wife, Vera Edwards Farrington," he replies.

"Was she left-handed?" you ask.

"Yes, she was," he answers.

"Was she right-handed?" you ask.

"Yes, she was," he answers.

"Was she in the habit of carrying a revolver

Two stores are burglarized

Over $1,000 worth of goods, consisting of guns, tools, transistor radios, electric kettles and other miscellaneous items were missing after thieves were busy in Tofield some time Saturday night or early Sunday morning. The above goods were all stolen from Mercovich's store, where entry was gained by removing the pane of glass from the front door.

HIDE IN WAREHOUSES

According to some reports, the thieves were hidden in the warehouse section during the closing hours of the store later in the night, they discovered the doors between the warehouse and the main section were locked tight. As a result they made an exit from the outside door and after attempting to break in through side doors unsuccessfully, the last resort was removing the glass from the front door. This is the third time since moving into the new location that the store has been robbed.

CO-OP ENTERED

On the same night also broke the glass in the door of the new Direct Grain, but apparently were scared away, as nothing was reported missing.

Reduction in power rates discussed at REA meet

Peter Nichol

The Tofield Rural Electrification Association was visited by officials of Calgary Power Ltd. at their annual meeting held last Saturday. Rural supervisor J. S. Anderson of Edmonton informed the farmers of the recent rate reduction and asked the farmers to co-operate in the Rate Study to be undertaken this year. Mr. Anderson explained some of the anomalies that exist in the present rate structure and asked the farmers to co-operate in the study to help iron out these inequalities.

Mr. Anderson explained that the last rate change was made in 1957 and that since that time the cost of living has increased considerably. He explained that the Calgary Power Ltd. was not alone in this respect and that all utilities were having to adjust themselves to the increased cost of living.

Mr. Anderson explained that the Rate Study was being undertaken by the Calgary Power Ltd. in order to bring the rates more in line with present day costs. He explained that the Rate Study was not being undertaken because the Calgary Power Ltd. was in financial difficulties but rather because they felt that the present rate structure was unfair to some of the customers and that some were fairly well treated and others were not.

Mr. Anderson explained that the Rate Study was not going to be completed overnight but that it would take a considerable length of time before the study was completed.

Mr. Anderson explained that the Calgary Power Ltd. was not alone in the Province in having to adjust the rates to meet present day costs. He explained that the Calgary Power Ltd. was the last of the major companies to adjust their rates and that the Calgary Power Ltd. was the only company in the province to have had a rate reduction in the past 5 years.

Mr. Anderson explained

This is an urge[illegible] to any community and should not be [illegible] and acts longer. It is certainly not setting a good example for the youngsters who are now becoming to make this a habit.

From an editorial in the Financial Post

Guest Editorial—

To Judge by the opening shots of the NDP and Social Credit parties, the end of the political stalemate has unleashed a thousand tongues and the House of Minorities has dissolved into a Tower of Babel. The emerging fact of political life is that the minority parties have a vested interest in chaos. It is totally to their advantage to see the business of Parliament again become a matter of unstable minorities and uneasy alliances. It is wholly in keeping with their obsessive desire for power that they seek out the phoney issues and campaign with messianic emotion, half truths, quarter truths and no truths at all.

Defence, let it be granted, is the least appropriate stage upon which to determine the character and composition of the next government. The question of whether Canada accepts nuclear arms or not is of minor consequence with the U.S. and the USSR in possession of "overkill" capacity [illegible] and what we do doesn't matter—as long as we take our commitments wisely and then quietly live up to them. Yet both the Social Credit and the NDP appear determined to make nuclear arms the central issue of the election. They are tricking the public away from the things that really matter. They are trading on confusion and are guilty of political manipulation.

The recent years have seen too many wild promises and more half-baked panacea and too much naked striving for power. There has been too little opportunity for men of knowledge and courage to face the very basic issues of a still strange and even more perplexing world. If this nation is to recover from its political bankruptcy and regain the respect of responsible people everywhere, it is clear that we cannot much afford the politicians who by emphasizing the phoney issue, chill it in anti-Americanism and play upon parochialism and expect to profit by returning to another splintered Parliament.

Lebeuf: blight or baloney

We were somewhat surprised to see a story in the most recent issue of Maclean's magazine about Roger Lebeuf, president of the Citizens' Mineral Rights and Justice League and one of the organizers of a possible offshoot political party known as the Alberta Unity Movement. We were surprised because we had not realized that Mr. Lebeuf had been [illegible] astute of the ethics of [illegible] and Edmonton and their use in advancing his own personal cause. Mr. Lebeuf is gaining publicity at the expense of the farm vote if he is going to be considered a serious material for a national magazine.

Even before its party is [illegible] organized Mr. Lebeuf is [illegible] and seeks votes on the basis: To Red Deer men Ottawa lives have left the [illegible] movement. Mr. Lebeuf claims they were excelled [illegible]

The Maclean's editor refers to Mr. Lebeuf as Premier E. C. Manning's conscience on [illegible] and says that [illegible] was once already the [illegible] as assisting William Aberhart to power.

We would suggest that the newcomer to politics has unusual ideas of [illegible] is assisted Mr. Aberhart and their sole aim is to [illegible] Mr. Lebeuf [illegible] gaining publicity at the [illegible] and farm vote if he is going to be considered a serious material for a national magazine.

THE RYLEY TIMES

Holden village reports show prosperous 1962

Mrs. Elizabeth Campbell

The Holden Village Annual Meeting was held in the Holden Legion Hall on Monday, February 25, with a very good attendance of taxpayers. The ladies were down by auxiliary with a very appetizing supper which was greatly appreciated by those present. The council members voted a vote of thanks to the ladies for the supper.

It looks as if the Village of Holden is finally embarked to help keep our streets at a minimum and to collect greater payments from the taxpayers at the meeting provoked questions from interested parties during the reading of the financial statements of the municipal auditor's report and the auditor's report. The information requested was fully given on all items of interest to the satisfaction of the ratepayers.

The village council would like to thank the ratepayers for their support during the past year. A hearty thanks was given to the secretary-treasurer for his efforts in implementing the necessary steps from the previous inspector's report, and re-

Development Program received the sports grounds with new backstops, picnic shelters and booth and also had a new rink. Last winter skating rink built. Most successful. The above were all very appreciated by the council members noted a with regret the resignation of Mrs. Roberts (Superintendent) and Mrs. Osborne (Secretary) and thanked them for their services during the past year.

Moved and carried that a committee of Mrs. [illegible] and Mrs. [illegible] be made responsible for the High School Drama Festival to be held on March 29 and 30 in Tofield.

The Superintendent informed the Committee that three buses have been [illegible] and that they would not require [illegible] on the County for the [illegible] current year, and were prepared to repay its appropriation portion of the buses now they had received. The following questions were Nancy Nesbitt [illegible] Evelyn Fedyna and Joan Crespan.

Moved and carried that Mrs. Nancy Nesbitt and Miss Evelyn Fedyna and Miss Joan Crespan be released from their obligation to teach for two years in the Co-Operative Scholarship agreements for repayment of the appropriate portion of their bursaries.

The Superintendent informed the Committee that Mr. E. M. Hardy, M.L.A. teacher at Holden had requested the usual leave of absence to attend the 1963 session of the Alberta Legislature.

Moved and carried that the request be granted for leave of absence without pay for Mr. E. M. Hardy.

The Superintendent informed the Committee that Mr. D. H. Kindle and [illegible] Ken Rudnik requested [illegible] absence from June 17th [illegible] of the school term to [illegible] University in Manitoba [illegible] Mr. Rudnik [illegible] Course [illegible] of Instruction [illegible] leave of absence [illegible] Summer School [illegible] of Alberta.

Moved and carried that the request be granted for leave of absence without pay for Mr. D. H. Kindle.

The Superintendent stated that the [illegible] sponsored by [illegible] Calgary Law [illegible] Handy Nesbitt [illegible] under the [illegible] their ethics [illegible] trophies [illegible] a Mock Trial in the County as provided [illegible] by various [illegible] bursary [illegible] Lawrence [illegible] some money [illegible] two years ago [illegible] be at least one [illegible] committee felt [illegible] that the regulation that a bursary student is obligated to teach for one year after four years of University was made for the purpose of letting the student find out whether or not he or she would be suitable as a teacher should be adhered to.

Moved and carried that the requests be not granted.

The Superintendent stated that the Girls' Leadership Workshop in Physical Education would be held at the University on May 9th 10th and 11th, and he requested that as in 1962 arrangements be made for one Grade 11 student and one teacher to attend this Workshop.

Moved and carried that the Superintendent's suggestion be approved, that he be authorized to select the student and teacher that he considers suitable, and that they be paid the cost of transportation and maintenance for three days at the rate of approximately $6 per day.

Mr. W. Brushett, representing the Bowser Local of A.T.A., attended the meeting at this time Mr. Brushett referred to the activities of Jan. 8 meeting, concerning absence due to illness in regards to the teaching staff in the County. It was pointed out that had noticed the minutes, but that no official notification had as yet been received, and he requested information in regards to the intent of the resolution. Mr. Brushett was advised that if a teacher was absent more than one day any one time, a medical certificate should be filed, and that if the teacher was absent, on account of sickness for another two days in the following week, a medical certificate would be required for that absence as well. Approximately this had been the procedure some years ago in the former Holden School District but for some reason or other the procedure had been changed. It is felt that a teacher could be absent for three days without a medical certificate and this was considered quite satisfactory. Mr. Brushett stated that the Principals' Association was not consulted since the regulation was put into effect, and he objected to it.

The Superintendent referred to the monthly time returns by the bus drivers. One respondent was that the Principal of the school sign this report as being correct. In some instances caused some difficulty [illegible] of Councillor Johnson the arrears was authorized to write to the Unemployment Insurance Commission requesting unemployment insurance and assistance in the Legacy also to write to the Legacy Art Association and the Welfare Department for further information in regards to having the RCMP pass on the village.

Council was informed in a letter from the Equalization Board the equalized assessment of the village for 1962 was set at $541,120.00, which was accepted.

Meeting adjourned on a motion by Councillor Johnson.

The voter must decide

Those who will be casting ballots on the April eighth federal election would be well advised to listen to as many political speeches as possible between now and the election, and form definite opinions as to which party is presenting the platform that will be most beneficial to the whole of Canada.

This country has just come through a year of minority government, and regardless of which party is in power, little can be accomplished, as a rule, by a political group that does not have a working majority. Canadians owe it to themselves to determine what party now offers the best system for building up Canada's trade, production and prestige among other nations of the world, and then give that party a good majority in order that they may prove themselves.

On the subject of minority governments, The Financial Post says:

Another bout of political paralysis at Ottawa after April 8 could have shattering implications for Canada. It could cripple any chance of decisive action on the bold measures needed to spur economic growth. It could wreck the confidence of foreign investors in Canada.

Our reliance on large inflows of foreign capital to finance international payments deficits makes us particularly vulnerable at this time to the attitude of foreign investors. Last summer's financial crisis was a painful example of this fact. Now that the Canadian dollar exchange rate is pegged, Ottawa's policies must be tied to external factors first, domestic second.

If foreigners decide Canada is no longer an attractive or welcome place for their money, we'll have high interest rates and tight money to defend our exchange rate whatever the needs of domestic business. . . . Unless one of the major contending parties gets a working majority and effective leadership, substantial withdrawals of capital are virtually inevitable.

At long last

Tofield once had a great troop of Boy Scouts. It all went "poof" as soon as the leaders moved from town. Since then there has been little effort in reorganizing of the badly needed club.

At long last, four citizens have finally realized the need and have volunteered as leaders. A brief visit to the last community league meeting by the Scouts' field commissioner, brought forth an extra urge from the members and it appears that Boy Scouts may once again be organized for our many young boys, who have their fingers crossed.

It is learned that some sponsors for the organization have already been chosen, which is a good start. We have all the facilities, leaders and waiting members . . . now we must "get going". —P.N.

Cause to pause . . .

BY John Mahler

Household moving companies that offer once-a-year pay-later plans have one advantage over other creditors: at least they know where you've moved.

NOT SO OFTEN

Grandma: "Bobby, do you like going to school?"

Bobby: "Yeah, but I like Saturday school better."

Grandma: "I'm glad to hear that, but tell me why do you prefer it?"

Bobby: "Because it's only once a week."

POOR FELLOW

Two office girls were discussing one of the men in their office.

"I'll say he's hen-pecked", said one. "He had laryngitis for over a week and his wife didn't even know he'd lost his voice".

Any time a married man tells you that he's boss in his own house you can bet that he'll lie about other things too.

TOO LIBERAL

Friend: "I notice that your husband serves the liquor but doesn't take a drink for himself".

Wife: "No, I don't allow it. When he gets drunk, he starts bringing out the good stuff".

BIG GEORGE!

Since the "a-flatthen" 150-mile blizzard has taken the country by storm, I decided recently that I should try my hand at it. Yes, sir, to uphold the honor of Camrose, The Canadian and the Meyer name, I convinced myself that I was duty-bound to take a long hike of my own.

Then I had failed!

But I had failed!

But that "never-say-die" spirit compelled me to make another attempt at the same hike, and believe me, next time I'll make it . . . all the way home from the office.

MacDuff report

The pleasant surprise

OTTAWA — A pleasant surprise of the election campaign has been the stability of the Canadian dollar to date. The possibility that the two months of uncertainty following dissolution of Parliament might start another run on Canadian dollars never materialized. Despite the fact that the Conservatives were trailing badly in the polls, the Canadian dollar effectively ignored any danger of a serious run on the currency between mid-April and mid-June when the Diefenbaker government was defeated.

There was indeed a flurry that lasted three days. The Canadian dollar dropped by about half a cent. That rules out a run on the dollar. Losses of one point below or above the 92½ cent U.S. peg and to keep it there a withdrawal of about $40 million in Canada's reserves of gold and U.S. dollars was needed.

Since that time there has been nothing more than the normal ebb and flow of Canadian dollars for interest, dividends and other purposes. In the winter months when the wheat movement and other exports drop to a minimum there is always retail dollars.

In January estimates of the expectations the actual depletion of reserves was only $2 million leaving them at the end of the month at the healthy total of $2,045 million. Then Parliament collapsed and over a period of two months the reserves declined by $300 million. Even so, the total reserves were still $1,745 million, which is a very comfortable position.

Why has the Canadian dollar been so much stronger than anyone would have dared to hope? The answer is not to be found in the economic field. Canada has not suddenly become a country with a favorable balance of payments. Nor has the government been able to reduce drastically its deficit financing. Finance Minister Fleming had announced at the beginning of the year that he intended to borrow $1,200 million on the domestic market. Actually he borrowed $1,500 million.

The reason for the stability of the Canadian dollar is to be found in the political field. The election campaign with more uncertainty and more interesting and more important political implications than any election Canada has experienced in a generation.

Yet in the first month of the campaign total depletion has been limited to only $40 million.

The effectively offset-ting any danger of a serious run on the dollar between mid-April and mid-June when the Diefenbaker government was defeated.

Despite the lavish promises of huge expenditures or reductions in taxes in the popular Canadian sport of kicking our neighbors the south is unlikely to gain face by anything that the present administration can do. It requires little more than a cursory glance at the reasons for this market confidence in the face of the situation a year ago when a bewildered Canadian population was being pushed to reserve the pre-query. For months the Government had been keeping its legitimate investors as well as speculators running. Finance Minister Fleming had announced on budget night that the Government had been borrowing heavily on short-term paper. Everybody knew where the money was coming.

That fact is still apparent today and by June 15 Canada's reserves were depleted by $300 million. But the speculators had ignored one fact. By pegging the dollar at 92½ cents on May 21 the Government had brought it within the IMF rule-of-thumb which was remarkably handy

What is a news paper?

Webster's dictionary defines a newspaper as "a paper published periodically usually either daily or weekly, containing the most recent available reports of events". Notice the word available. Many questions often asked are: Why wasn't such and such a report in the paper? Why isn't there more local news? etc. etc. The answer is quite clear. Was this news available to the editor? Was the "News-Hawk" (as a reporter is often called) informed of functions, etc taking place so that he could be in attendance to give a full report? In the case of The Mercury, the Tofield office consists of a local editor, reporter, photographer, advertising solicitor, advertising manager, printing salesman, and office clerk. However, this is all done by only one man, which unfortunately does not leave him any time to stand on all the street corners gathering the latest happenings. As part of his job, he must also spend a considerable amount of time travelling to Holden, Ryley and quite often to Camrose, as well as around the community, and many times he must venture out into the country. Evenings are taken up most of the time covering meetings, town-city socials, etc. When not out attending these affairs, he can generally be found in the office pounding away at the typewriter or scratching his head deeply in thought trying to come up with anything of importance for the coming week's issue. He has often spent the whole night in the office getting the next issue prepared for the deadline. How then will he find time to go pounding on doors to gather the latest?

This is YOUR paper. When treated properly it will work for you. Has it worked for you? If it has, you are probably giving your co-operation. If it hasn't, then you have neglected to consider the facts. The aim of The Mercury has always been to promote community growth and development and give unbiased reports of the town and district news and promote home town business. Over the years it has been instrumental in assisting the town in that regard. In 1927 it strongly supported the installation of natural gas and in 1954 went all out for water and sewer and the building of the $75,000 community hall which is now the pride of Tofield. In the past year it has been credited for the excellent attendance at social, cultural events, community events, etc. It also played a large part in getting gravel on the streets.

By giving your cooperation and giving us the facts you will find it most rewarding. Remember this, the newsier the paper becomes, the better the paper gets and the better ambassador it will be for you, your organization and your community. Your paper is YOUR paper. Make good use of it.

Rep. by Pop. or not?

We were delighted this week to read an editorial in The Sudbury Star which seems to indicate that Sudbury isn't nearly such a large urban area as we had thought it must be. For it suggests that maybe the old battle cry of representation by population is outdated. We've suggested the same thing many times, and will continue to do so, though it dismays us to see the strength which continues to be paid this old cliche, even here in Alberta, where Edmonton representatives cry in indignation over the fact they do not have the representation in the legislature their population—alone—warrants. If this were all that mattered, then a single square mile in the City of Edmonton would carry about the same weight in the legislature as about a thousand square miles in Dunvegan, for instance.

But The Star's item follows. We hope it is reprinted many times.

At the risk of shaking the political concepts of constituency representation in the federal and provincial parliaments (and to a lesser degree, municipal governments) why not abolish the principle of representation by population? A small crowded area in a large city can meet population requirements and be entitled to a representative in parliament. Why? This one heavily populated area is no different physically, or in legislative requirements, than adjoining crowded areas.

What is wrong with a redistribution system under which urban and rural areas are separated and representation based on area rather than people? Or better still, a combination of both? Why should 16 of Ontario's 85 MPs in the House of Commons come from the one area known as Toronto and the Yorks?

'Truth' squad washed up

With a suggestion that the "truth" squad has been misinterpreted, it was quietly ordered to drop from the scene, and cancel its activities. Which is a blessing, since it was not a particularly acceptable idea in the first place.

Not that Canadians don't want truth from the platform at all times, but this is the sort of thing that two or more can play. And if every party had its own truth squad following all the notables of other parties, and if each was later interpreting the truth as it appeared to them, the voters would have even a worse time trying to figure out just where the truth lay. It's bad enough now without someone trying to complicate the understanding.

Better use for money

March 17, 1963.

Editor, The Canadian.
Dear Sir

According to figures given in taxation statistics, 26% of the budget went for defence last year. Would not the country's roads are like in the U.S. and Britain. They would stand a lot of improvement in Canada.

After the Cuban crisis, Mr. Khrushchev contended that sanity prevailed and war was averted.

Without wishing to entrust their state of mind, we sometimes wonder why spend so much for military preparations.

According to one historian previous to the second world war the city in Germany most famous for its beer is where Hitler began his ascent to power. The city was also the first destroyed.

If a little less liquor was consumed by those in control perhaps there would think a bit more clearly.

A Social Price Ceiling suggested reducing expenditures for military purposes by ten per cent.

That amount would be a good start.

There are an unlimited number of projects many could be put to better use at.

Respectfully,
(Signed): "A Citizen".

Cause to pause . . .

BY John Mohler

No man is completely worthless. He can always serve as a horrible example.

Employer: "Boss, I came to see if you could raise my salary."

Boss: "Go back to work and don't worry. I've managed to raise it each pay day, haven't I?"

BIG GEORGE!

Some Dodders Thomas do how of many has it been a with me by letting me count on this column? Some of my friends told me a while ago, 31,000 was I like to come with a crate of cash but what it is worth is his letter.

Dear George

I almost understand how you could have lived so diversely from your father's ways. I am not one to worry about my nights so I will not go on in the same course and waste all the way.

I might add that my house across the street from you is making a few extra steps and besides that my place is not in a good block now. Main Street was a record as I walked at least 300 yards further than you did.

I would suggest that you yourself less fancy pays, a condition and try a change. I am a pretty good example of a well-settled man myself, and I heartily believe it has improved my character.

Well "Triumphant" I would not go so far as to call it a man as one of the key of my life but I will say that you are quite a long way from your father and should tell the full story. I happened to see you in your home that night. You didn't mention in your letter that you had a party and that you were drinking. I also saw you at the beach near Nelson Lake for a full 27 minutes. I feel too that in all fairness you should have admitted that you had a Girl Guide under each arm as the last three blocks and that they practically carried you the last 100 yards.

While the fact still remains that you made it all the way home, and you were in a state of non-consciousness when you crawled up your front steps it is my considered opinion that yours is a hollow victory.

It was by one individual at the Edmonton Exhibition. 1 Three times. 4 It comes from Elbridge Gerry, governor of Massachusetts, who in 1812 signed legislation redrawing Democratic districts to favor his party. IN MEMORIAM

HELTER—In loving memory of Harold James Helter, who passed away March 22nd, 1962:

Two little thought when leaving home
You would no more return,
That you soon in death would roam
And leave us here to mourn;
We do not know what pains you bore,
We did not see you die,
We only know you passed away
And left us here to cry;
Just when life was sweetest,
And you could have lived your best,
The gates of Heaven opened
And you entered that sweet rest.

Modern etiquette
By Roberta Lee

Q. Just what should I do after I have completed the introduction of two other persons? I'm always at a loss in these circumstances.

A. Try to act as a "moderator" for any ensuing conversation. It's best to bring up some subject you happen to know is of mutual interest to those two persons, and this usually stimulates the conversation.

Q. Sometimes I see people at the dinner table helping themselves to a slice of bread with the fork. Is that proper?

A. Definitely not! Help yourself to the bread with your fingers. Never use your fork or any other of your individual pieces of silver to help yourself from any common serving dish.

Q. After an evening of bridge, and the hostess is setting the table for salad and dessert requiring only a fork and spoon, where should she place these pieces?

A. The fork on the left, the spoon on the right, as always.

Q. Recently while attending a lecture in which we were both very much interested, my husband and I were annoyed by the persistent whispering of two women seated behind us. Would it be proper for us to turn to these women to stop their chatter?

A. Your husband would have been within his right to speak to the women.

Q. If it so happens that a debutante has recently had an opportunity to thank a donor formally for a gift received, is she still obligated to write a thank-you note?

A. She certainly is—and as soon as possible.

Q. How does one properly cut a hard-boiled egg at ice table? I can get that is still in its shell?

A. Tap it gently with the blade of your knife, strip off the shell, and cut the egg with your fingers.

Q. What tipping is necessary on an airplane?

A. No tipping of airplane personnel is permitted. Similarly, no debark, though, a sincere "thank you" to the stewardess is a nice gesture on your part and shows good-breeding.

IN MEMORIAM

HELTER—In loving memory of Harold James Helter, who passed away March 22nd, 1962:

Two little thought when leaving home
You would no more return,
That you soon in death would roam
And leave us here to mourn;
We do not know what pains you bore,
We did not see you die,
We only know you passed away
Just when life was sweetest,
And you could have lived your best,
The gates of Heaven opened
And you entered that sweet rest.
—Sadly missed and ever remembered by Dad, Mom, Sisters and Brother.

HARVESTS MORE CROP · PICKS UP FEWER STONES

Professional last year on the prairies, this revolutionary new, flexible harvesting tooth type combines and baler pick-ups has proven to be a winner in conventional tests. Flexi Tooth can be lowered closer to the ground. As a result Flexi Tooth harvests more crop per acre.

It picks up fewer stones — meaning less repetition of stones — less damage to costly equipment. Mounted in rubber snips Flexi Tooth is quieter — minimizes crop loss. What's more, each bushelful is thrown off and doesn't "bind" as it does with conventional teeth.

See your Imperial Esso Agent today and ask him about the special introductory offer!

ESSO TRACTOR GASOLINE
the gasoline designed especially for tractors, operating under prairie conditions. Field-tested on thousands of prairie farms and proven to provide maximum power and efficiency at the lowest possible cost.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker's POLICIES ARE RIGHT!

On Nuclear Weapons:
There are good reasons for the Prime Minister holding back on acquisition of nuclear weapons. The excuse is the least of these reasons. There is no use in putting nuclear warheads into now-obsolete weapons such as the four-year-old Bomarc, now hopelessly out of date.
Canada cannot decide on nuclear weapons for our armed forces in Europe until agreement is reached with our NATO allies. This decision will come in May or June of this year.
I am proud of the fact that Canada is the leading nation in the world to advocate the complete outlawing of nuclear weapons for the safety and security of the whole world. To give in now to pressure for immediate acceptance of nuclear weapons would destroy our influence with the great nations of the world.

On Sales of Canadian Wheat to China:
I am in agreement with the Conservative Party's policy of selling grain to China or anyone else able to pay for it. We cannot build world peace on a gospel of hate where we refuse to feed the hungry.
Besides, China and the other countries who are buying our wheat and other grains are paying for it and this money is going into the hands and pockets of our grain producers to build prosperity in this country.

Of course, as a former representing farmers in a farming constituency, I approve of the Conservative policies of Prime Minister John Diefenbaker that have brought such a measure of prosperity to the Canadian farmer.

WHAT IS IT?

"Mama, what is it?" asked excited little Julia Burkholder, as she saw hanging onto a jerking line with a fish, the like of which no other end. According to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Burkholder, they were all out fishing at Hastings Lake last Friday when 21-year-old Julia asked to fish through a hole in the ice by herself. Her father tied a line on a stick but she also wanted a hook. So, a rusty old hook was put on just to appease the child, and what should come along but the biggest fish of the day's catch! This is Julia's third fish so far this year.

Tofield school taking steps to improve students' spelling

The spelling improvement crusade is in high gear in the Tofield school. The results of the Schonell A test have been recorded, analyzed and graphed. Thus equipped with accurate knowledge of the areas of particular difficulty, the teaching staff has attacked the trouble spots. Each teacher has accepted responsibility of preparing special lessons in one particular spelling area for pupils who have difficulty therein. These pupils receive special instruction and guidance several times a week.

SECOND STAGE

After this period of intensive remedial work has been completed, the Schonell B test will be administered; the results will be recorded and articulated with great interest. A list will be published of the pupils who raise their scores by five words over that achieved on the first test. Special recognition will be given to the boy and girl from each division who has made the greatest improvement. A spelling king and queen will also be chosen for each division. Further plans for the culmination will be published later.

People in several fields of human endeavor large have

"Correct spelling shows the hand-up, combination, content and (in the case of other than native language) derivation of words.

"Incorrect spelling may obscure the full meaning of the word and the meaning of a sentence.

"This is perhaps particularly true of the English language which incorporates many words of Greek, Latin, Germanic, Saxon and Gaelic and those Scottish, Welsh and Irish origin. Scientific, philosophic and religious ideas are expressed by words composed of Latin and foreign roots, which require close shades of meaning.

KNOW LANGUAGE

"To spell correctly is to know language.

"Spelling is fun! Try Scrabble.

"Poor spelling often denotes carelessness, speed and poor thinking. Correct spelling, when intelligible, is a courtesy to readers. Illegible or illegible spelling is important.

Other members of the committee are Mrs. Leslie Perrett and Mrs. Bruce Bowyer. Mrs. Bowyer is secretary.

County of Beaver No. 9 School Meeting was held Tuesday, March 12th.

Business Arising

From Minutes

In connection with the proposed purchase of land in Ryley for teacherage, dealt with by resolution 61, the secretary-treasurer reported that this matter had been further considered by the Council at its meeting on February 15th and referred to the Committee that the full amount of frontage was asked to be charged on the property in question, but that the frontage was actually amount to $56 more or less. Under these circumstances the Council was of the opinion that it was advisable to purchase the land and the necessary by-law had been passed by the Council. The secretary-treasurer further informed the Committee that he had obtained the Transfer of the property from the owner, Douglas Hnatchuk, and that the payment of $50 would be made to Mr. Hnatchuk when the Transfer had been registered.

It was moved and carried that the report be accepted and the action of the Council concurred in.

In regards to the request that part of Sixth Avenue in Viking be closed dealt with by resolution 44 the secretary-treasurer stated that a letter had been received from the secretary-treasurer of the Town of Viking dated February 14, stating that at a meeting of the Council of the Town of Viking held on Tuesday, Feb. 5, 1963, it had been voted in favor of Sixth Avenue remaining open between Main Street and Stat Street, thus being the area that the School Committee wanted closed. In this connection, Dr. Roddick reported that the Committee appointed by resolution 11 of the February meeting had attended the meeting of the Council of the Town of Viking, and that they had found that a proper resolution to leave the Street open had not been passed. It appeared that the Council of the Town of Viking wished to close the whole question. The Committee had stated that the Town Council that if a license was opened to the dances to be held in the Viking School would be even greater. A motion had been passed by the Council of the Town of Viking that Sixth Avenue be not opened to Highway 36 without the full Town Council being in agreement.

Dr. Roddick suggested that the Committee appointed a three man committee should be appointed a standing Committee to continue to deal with the request.

It was moved and carried that the report be accepted and that Dr. Roddick, Mr. Gohn and the Superintendent, Mr. Pike, be appointed a standing Committee to have 4th Street between Main Street and 51st Street closed.

In regards to the Girls' Leadership Work Shop, dealt with by resolution 66, Mr. Corrie reported that the student to attend this work shop had not yet been selected, and that it was expected that Miss Betty Fraser would be the teacher who would attend the Workshop.

Moved and carried that the report be accepted.

A letter from Mrs. S. Lefaivre of Viking requesting permission to use the high school auditorium on Friday, April 19, or Saturday, April 20, for her dramatic public recital, was referred to the Committee.

Moved and carried that the request be not acceded to.

A request from the bus drivers at Tofield for an increase of wages from $6 to $8 per day was referred to the Committee. The request was discussed, and it was considered that some information as to what was paid in other areas should be obtained.

It was moved and carried that the report be tabled until the next meeting of the Committee, and that the secretary-treasurer obtain information as to wages paid in surrounding districts.

A letter from Lars Olson, chairman of the Viking Advisory Committee of Beaver Local No. 17, re the request for changes in the Salary Agreement for the 1963-64 year, was received. The Teachers' Association request was referred to the Committee.

It was moved and carried that Mr. Olson be advised that the Committee reiterates its offer to open the current agreement and the Negotiation Committee of the School Committee be prepared to meet the Teachers' Bargaining Committee to further discuss the request and the offer on Monday, March 25, at 7:30 p.m.

Bouquet for Scruggs

Social Credit MLA, J. M. Scruggs, reported to his constituents recently that he had . . . once again . . . brought up the matter of switching away from beverage bottles. So many ideas have been introduced into the discussion, reports Mr. Scruggs, that the group is getting nowhere. Personally, he favors cans, but finds considerable opposition from people who say they will only clutter up the roadside, as bottles now do.

However, Mr. Scruggs points out, the cans could not damage a rubber tire, would not hurt farmers' machinery, nor would they be a menace to people.

To all of this we add our "amen", and applaud Mr. Scruggs for his continued efforts. The bottles which we . . . as a people . . . so carelessly toss away and smash, will be dangerous for so long as they are allowed to remain. (And surely no one ever cleaned up the last remaining splinter of glass.) Not so with tin cans. They do not smash in the first part, and while jagged edges can be dangerous, cans slowly disintegrate and return to nature over a period of years.

Besides, has anyone suggested wax cardboard containers for beverages, as used by our dairies? While a law preventing the use of glass bottles might work a hardship on one of our industries, use of cardboard containers might help enlarge the forest industry.

Besides, there is always the idea suggested by Premier Manning of making bottles so expensive, by way of a deposit, that few, if any, would fail to come back.

Exceptional record

It is not often that Albertans establish records for all the British Commonwealth, but Peter Dawson set a record as speaker, or chairman, of any government in the British Empire, and continued to raise the target for a number of years. His death last Sunday will be a blow to government not only in the province, but cuts what served as a shining light to speakers across the country.

Elected with the original Social Credit government in 1935, Mr. Dawson was named speaker of the house two years later, and had served continuously in that position. In fact, he came nearer than anyone else to establishing the British institution of a permanent speaker in the House, though this was largely through the fortunes of his party, which has never lost an election since his being named to the post.

We were fortunate in having him serve the province as well, and as long, as he did. He set a high standard to follow.

Problem of drainage

As the snow melts the water gathers, and many towns are faced with the problem of frozen culverts. Not much can be done about this situation until the numerous culverts have gone through the procedure of thawing. Tofield has a rather unusual problem this year, as the water has gathered so much in places that the streets are impassable, and some of the drivers who think they can make it through suddenly find out their guess was wrong.

Our town maintenance man is doing all he can at present to remove the water and motorists will just have to be patient till the many culverts can be thawed out and warmer weather dries the mudholes.

In the meantime, the maintenance man has, in some cases, been called upon by the unfortunate motorists, after hours, and has cheerfully helped them out. Citizens should bear in mind that these problems are common every year and all possible is being done to hurry the process and thus rid the inconvenience. —P.N.

From the mail bag

March 26, 1963.

Editor, The Mercury.

Dear Sir:

In regard to the political set-up of this country.

Some time ago an M.P. from Southern Alberta suggested having just two parties in the U.S. government, similar to Great Britain. Compared the present situation as being like a two-party game with four members on the low.

Having only two parties may not solve all the problems, but it would at least give one or the other a clear majority.

Reform is necessary. It would seem as though it could have as well be done within one or the other.

Yours respectfully
"A Two-Party Government Supporter".

Farmer Labor Co-operation

Millet, Alberta,
March 27, 1963.

Editor, The Mercury

Dear Sir:

We are assured by Government spokesmen that the prosperity level of Western farmers is the highest on record. This propaganda no doubt deludes many of the non-farm population. Even some farmers are dazzled by the amount of money which flows through their hands, and the ready access to large sums of credit.

However, if we analyse the actual situation after stripping away inflation, the new debt we are unquestionably far worse off than we were in the years 1945 to 1953. This is obvious when we compare prices then and now. We find that the prices of the goods we sell are on the average no higher than in those years, while farm costs are at least 40% since then.

People in town find the cost of living much higher, while farmers net income is down. If we consult the Financial Post we find that big business never had it so good. Profits are at an all time high, and since business adds a lot to the cost of prices, the consumer finally pays the whole shot.

Since 1945 the debt of Canada, both public and private, has doubled. Interest rates also have almost doubled, especially on the public sector. Since all these costs are also added to prices, is it any wonder that living and farm costs have sky-rocketed?

We are assured by statisticians that 91% of the Canadian people own no shares or bonds at all. Obviously the other 9% are profiteering at the expense of the 91% which must include the whole working class, both farmer, labor, and many professional people also. It is also true that less than 10% of the people own over 90% of Canada's wealth.

This is the situation which the apostles of so-called "Free Enterprise" want to perpetuate in Canada. In the present election, a vote for any party upholding this system, which robs the many to enrich the few, is a vote for national bankruptcy, and economic misery for the workers.

For many years, Canadian farm organizations have fought for parity for Agriculture. It has not been accomplished because the big interests have played farmer against worker, and exploited both. Until the workers join hands, rural and urban, get together, the exploitation will continue.

In this election the working class has another chance to support a people's movement.

THE BEST OF BOTH WORLDS— FREE ENTERPRISE ELECTRICITY!
It seems hard to believe that anyone would want to undermine the free enterprise spirit that built Alberta. Yet there is a small minority who wish to turn our vital electric utilities into a government monopoly.
It is claimed that they are monopolies of necessity — and might as well be government monopolies! Nothing could be more misleading.
Right now, Alberta has the best of two worlds — free enterprise initiative, plus judicious control by the present government. The operation of investor-owned utilities is closely scrutinized by government bodies, who regulate such matters as consumer rates and overall planning. Uncontrolled power monopolies simply don't exist.
Government-owned power would be such an uncontrolled monopoly. It would be called "public power", but the present right of appeal to the Public Utilities Board would be lost.
A few people might think this better than the present system of free enterprise initiative with judicious government control. Some might . . . but do you?

THE RYLEY TIMES

County annual meeting held in Ryley school

The annual meeting of the Municipal District of Beaver No. 9 was held in the Ryley School Auditorium on Saturday, February 16th, 1963. The meeting was called to order at 1:15 p.m. by the secretary-treasurer, Olof Monsson. Present were the County chairman Cr. Magerman, and Crs. Roddick (Gibson, Kropinski at Ibera, Johnston and Westbrook, Town and Village representatives, Mr. Gadke, Mr. Nord and Mr. Harlow. Mr. Pike superintendent of schools and Mr. R. A. Gorrie, inspector of construction and approximately 68 ratepayers.

Mr. Monsson was called for nominations for chairman for this. Nick Lashosky was nominated by W. Kruger. Mike Seniuk was nominated by Nick Lashosky. Mike Senuik declined and moved that nominations cease. Seconded by George Lee. Cd.

Nick Lashosky took the chair and called for nominations for secretary for this meeting.

Robert Cross was nominated by Mike Senuik. Moved by W. Kruger that nominations cease. Seconded by Mike Senuik. Cd.

Mr. Monsson was called for the reading of the minutes of the last annual meeting held on February 17th, 1962. These were read by Olof Monsson.

Mr. Pike said he wished to correct the statement made by Mr. Wylie regarding the percentage of passes for grade 12 students. Mr. Pike said the percentage of passes should have read 38.8 instead of 81.

Moved by George Lee that the minutes of the annual meeting held on February 17th, 1962, be approved as corrected. Seconded by Olaf Chetney. Cd.

The chairman was called for the municipal inspector's report for 1962. This was read by Olof Monsson. Moved by Sam Hlady that the municipal inspector's report be accepted as read. Seconded by W. Kruger. Cd.

The chairman asked the meeting what part of the financial statement they wished to have read.

Moved by S. J. Sears that the revenue and expenditure section of municipal affairs be read. Seconded by Robert Wylie Cd.

The municipal section was read by Mr. Monsson and asked for questions on this section.

Sam Klein asked what the amount of $400.00 for cemeteries represented.

Mr. Monsson said that this was for upkeep and surveying of County operated cemeteries. He said the largest expense was for surveying the Brae cemetery which had been done under the Winter Works program.

George Lee questioned the item of Juvenile offenders.

Mr. Monsson explained that this was for juvenile placed in the Bowden Institute. The County had to pay this account and, if possible, recover this from the parents. He said that in one case the parents were almost indigents and were unable to repay this account.

Mr. Wylie wanted to know why the amount paid for unemployed employables had increased by about $4,000.00 from 1961.

Mr. Monsson explained that in some cases it had been necessary to increase allowances to families to bring them in line with the amounts approved by the department of public welfare. Also there are more persons unemployed than there were in 1961.

Mr. Monsson now read the school section of the financial statement and asked for questions or comments.

Olaf Chetney asked if a study had been made to determine the cost of bus operation comparing County owned buses to contract buses.

Mr. Pike said this had been done and figures had been compiled. They showed that the cost of operating County buses including the repair shop and depreciation was 27.66 cents per mile, while contract buses cost 29.75 cents per mile.

S. J. Sears questioned the amount of $644.00 for band expenses.

Mr. Pike said this was the cost of instruction by the Viking School Band. He said he was endeavoring to get a qualified instructor to teach band in the County on a full time basis. So far he had not been able to get anyone.

Nick Lashosky asked if there was any attempt made to recover bursaries from persons who failed to pass the University examinations.

Mr. Pike said that they did not attempt to recover this money as it was considered that the student or parent had been put to considerable expense which was lost as well. He said that the students requesting bursaries now are screened very carefully to determine the chance of failure.

Moved by Sam Klein that the financial statement be accepted as presented. Seconded by John Skolney. Cd.

The chairman now called for the superintendent's report.

Mr. Pike presented and elaborated on the report as printed in the financial statement.

S. J. Sears asked about the program and of the Vocational School at Lac La Biche.

Mr. Pike said he was disappointed in the enrolment. The program to be offered by the college was not the original idea as it was first understood that the school were some matriculation students from surrounding areas. According to information these students when leaving the vocational school will not be accepted by the Apprenticeship Board

Steve Kendrat asked why more vocational subjects are not taught in the schools

Mr. Pike said this is partly a matter of not being able to get enough qualified vocational teachers. Also that as commercial is an optional subject it seemed there were not enough students interested to justify the subject to make up a class in some schools.

John Skolney inquired as to the cost of running the High School Band.

Mr. Pike said it is a matter of getting teachers. He said that it will require two extra teachers to teach a possible 22 pupils. He said that even with the extra teachers the pupils still would not get the program that they could get in Tofield or Viking and there is a limit to the number of correspondence subjects a pupil can take.

Mr. Skolney suggested that a survey be made to see how many parents wanted to send their Grade 11 and 12 students to Bruce School before hiring the extra teachers.

Moved by Charles Sears that the superintendent's report be accepted. Seconded by Steve Kendrat. Cd.

The chairman now called for the County chairman's report.

Cr. Magerman said he did not wish to elaborate on the report as printed in the financial statement. He thanked the council, the ratepayers and the office staff for their cooperation and assistance during the year.

Moved by C. Sears that the County chairman's report be accepted. Seconded by Steve Kendrat. Cd.

The chairman called for the field supervisor's report.

Ken Ryley, field supervisor, elaborated on the report as printed in the financial statement. He said he would like to get the opinion of the meeting of the value of the circular "Beaver News" that was put out last fall. He said that he felt a lot of useful information could be sent out in this manner if there was enough interest shown for it. He said that to be effective he thought this should be a quarterly paper.

The chairman called for a show of hands for opinion on whether they wanted this publication to be carried on. The response was by a majority of the ratepayers present in favor.

Moved by R. Wylie that the field supervisor's report be accepted. Seconded by W. Kruger. Cd.

The chairman asked for the school committee chairman's report.

Cr. Roddick commented on the report as printed in the financial statement. He said that one of the problems encountered in teachers housing, particularly in Viking and Ryley, was the teacherage is being built in Viking at present.

Mr. Skolney pointed out that the County was giving cheaper rent to teachers than they would have to pay elsewhere.

Cr. Roddick explained that rental of teacherages was calculated so that the rent would pay for the building over 25 years at 5% interest.

Moved by Charles Sears that the school committee chairman's report be accepted. Seconded by R. Wylie. Cd.

PROSPERITY on the FARM!

Look at what the Diefenbaker Government has done for farmers in the Vegreville Constituency!

Under the Progressive Conservative Government, of which FRANK FANE of Vegreville has been an active member, farmers of this Constituency have enjoyed:

ACREAGE PAYMENTS
INCREASED PRICES on wheat, oats and barley.
INCREASED and STABILIZED PRICES on BUTTER.
STABILIZED HOG PRICES
INCREASED RETURNS on BEEF CATTLE.
INTEREST-FREE CASH ADVANCES on Farm-stored Grain INCREASED P.F.A.A. PAYMENTS

HERE'S THE FARM RECORD:
Increased farm prices and increased farm income.
Open delivery quotas.
Increased loans to farmers.
Stabilized market prices.
Payments in 6 years, total will over $125,000,000 to farmers in Western Canada.
This included 3 separate acreage payments and the 1958-60 "mowed-under" crop payment.

Besides That: . . .

Your Progressive Conservative Government has done a GOOD SELLING job in the marketing of your farm produce. When the Conservatives came into office in 1957, grain quotas were limited to a few bushels per acre. There were millions of bushels of unsold grain on the farms and farm income suffered. Today, there are open quotas at every delivery point in Canada. That means MORE CASH and MORE MONEY in the pockets of farmers in Vegreville Constituency.

FOR CONTINUED PROSPERITY ON THE FARM

As there was no further business it was moved by Stanley Sears and seconded by Scott Klein, that the meeting adjourn.

Here forever

Speaking of separatism, we are reminded Quebec's Natural Resources Minister, Rene Levesque, prophesied recently separatism will be with us forever. In a wide-ranging interview with the editor of an eastern financial paper, Mr. Levesque touched upon a number of topics, including Social Credit, separatism, and the sight of ships carrying iron ore past Montreal to inland smelters ("a goofy proposition for Quebec"). Back from two solid weeks of talks and tours of steel mills in France and Belgium, Levesque implied that the practical world of industrial planning is sometimes less frustrating than that of politics. He says the ills and unemployment of Quebec never will be solved by the speeches of Real Caouette and the other Creditistes. But he is wary of targeting with the Creditistes, simply because it is of little use. "It is impossible to fight something that has no basis in logic," says Mr. Levesque, referring to hazy views expounded by the Creditistes.

Referring to separatism, he said "If it wins out, then Quebec would really be separate. If it doesn't then the agitation and the friction will continue. I think we can continue to live in the same house. Right now, we're occupying different rooms. Perhaps we could get together more often."

Do farmers milk small business?

"We've been held at ransom too long by the farmers. Now they should start paying their own way," declared Herb Forth recently. Mr. Forth is president of the Canadian Small and Independent Business Federation. Mr. Forth cited the recent request for an increase in the price of butter and a higher subsidy for hogs.

"They are heavily subsidized because they are generally operating very inefficient businesses, and we think it's time they were submitted to the same economic pressures all of us operate under," continued Mr. Forth.

Our farm readers will no doubt be comforted to hear these kind words and doubtless will feel the greatest sympathy for Mr. Forth's problems. Obviously Mr. Forth's problems have made it impossible for him to see the forest for the trees. The article, published in a recent issue of the Independent Businessman, takes no account of the problems under which farmers have labored for years, facing high tariffs on import of goods, high railways rates on everything he hauls in or out unless its grain protected under the Crowsnest Pass Agreement, takes no account of the pegged price of grain or the regulations which make it illegal to sell many grains to anyone except the government, and takes no account of such things as the millions of dollars the Canadian farmers gave the British during the war, in the form of reduced prices for wheat . . . something they had no voice in establishing.

May we suggest Mr. Forth should choose a better target, something he knows more about? There is lots of room in big business for Mr. Forth's vigorous broadsides. Risk of room in the combines, cartels and monopolies which have combined against the Canadian public for many years to fix prices at all the traffic will bear.

Support for the Ensign

It has been particularly interesting to see the support massing in recent weeks for the Canadian Red Ensign as the real Canadian flag. Some two months ago the Royal Canadian Legion decided about three pages plus a cover in full color, to the matter, followed up this month with literally scores of letters endorsing their program, while only two registered any opposition. Only days later we were in receipt of another batch of material together with a petition, asking support for the red ensign, and this week the mail from New Norway brought another such mailing.

The interesting thing, to us, is that far more right and propriety and history can be shown for the correctness of the ensign than we had imagined. In presenting a fairly complete history of the development of the ensign as a national flag, the Legionnary, indeed, leaves little doubt that to fly any other flag would not be correct, except, of course, in the case of Queen's colors (the Union Jack) in regimental parades, and similar isolated exceptions. We had not previously realized, though, that support the red ensign as a truly Canadian flag, just how much historical significance is built into this flag.

And just to follow a red herring: on a recent excursion into B.C., we were somewhat dismayed to see the provincial flag, with its setting sun, flying at the mast of a provincial game offices. Certainly, it seems to be properly correct, but how far are we go in deploring separatism in Quebec, and flying their fleur-de-lis without similarly deploring the building of provincialism in another province?

Diefenbaker and the coming election

Holden, Alberta
March 31, 1963.

Editor, The Mercury,
Dear Sir:

Election issues were really started before the election date was ever announced and before the campaign actually began. The farmers got more for their wheat Mr. Manning says Ottawa will barrage with western complaints "as long as it suits their purpose". We are not worried about Ottawa or any other country not buying our wheat, because any country should have the right to buy surplus wheat when the people of that nation are hungry.

When Social Credit came into power in 1935 in Alberta the hard times were really over and business started to pick up. There was bonus out in '39 and there was money everywhere. In 1941 the last province in Canada started up and has been bringing in hundreds of millions of dollars since. The same will prevail itself for years to come. We still have the biggest oil deposit in the world the largest and first 250 miles from Edmonton which has a capacity of 300 billion barrels or more. We should have a different government to take care of the present resource as the Province of Alberta. Of course I am sure the Social Credit Government has made a poor job of administering the resources and business in general.

No election in Canadian history has had as many election promises as the present campaign. If we have another temporary government, all four parties are going to try to fulfill their promises, then, according to the sound of it, we Canadians would really be in heaven. But if they could agree there would be no room and that would be hell. Another election would be coming up in a few months. The safest way is for Canadians to vote for the Government in power, that has the most seats at present, and get a stable working government.

All four leaders want to be Prime Minister of Canada, but I believe that we better leave the man we have in power.

(Signed)

"An Old Homesteader"

Cause to pause . . .

BY John Mahler

Some people would like to make a trip to the moon but are afraid to sit in the front row at church.

DIFFERENT IDEAS

Shopping in the furniture department, the apprehensive woman said to the clerk, "I just can't decide between the arm chair and the divan."

"Mine", said the clerk, "you just can't go wrong on a nice upholstered chair like that".

"Okay", replied his customer. "I'll take the divan!"

By George . . .

In less than a week we'll have the answer to the question of this day: Who will be the prime minister of Canada for the next few years? The opinions on after question are about as equally divided as the votes will be for the four federal political parties. Most people (a silent majority) believe that Mike Pearson will be Canada's new prime minister, and that the Liberals will form a minority government. I'd go along with this, but I also expect to see a few more Social Credit MPs in the House of Commons, an increased number of them to come from this province.

I must say that I have been terribly disappointed with the campaigns of both leaders of the old line parties. Promises of more spending, more welfare benefits, increased old-age pensions and bickering over the depleted unemployment insurance funds have been filling most speeches. It seems to me that Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson has made a good showing in his interviews with newsmen, and has come up with some proposals which sound good and workable. Thompson has come up with his drawbacks, too, and unfortunately for him they all come in the person of his deputy leader, Real Caouette.

Then there is NDP leader Tommy Douglas, whose speeches are not always inspiring, and usually contain a good deal of emotional humor, but we hardly imagine that he will swing many more Canadians to his party's socialist ideas.

And lastly, I look for Art Rosenau, the Soccred candidate, to give Conservative Cliff Smallwood the closest race he has ever had. I, for one, will not be surprised if Mr. Rosenau ends up on top when the ballots have all been counted, considering the assistance and support given all Soccred campaigners in this province by the ever-popular Ernest C. Manning. Bewley, Mr. Rosenau seems to be the more active campaigner of the two. He has been into my office — and no doubt others' offices, too — asking for support. On the other hand, I haven't seen Mr. Smallwood since he spoke at the annual meeting of the Tofield Chamber of Commerce.

As for me . . . I must admit I'm absolutely confused this time. My vote is still up for grabs.

It was moved and carried that Cy Kropanis be and Mac Prysiak, with the Superintendent Mr. Pike, be appointed to Negotiating Committee to deal with the teachers salary request, and that A. R. Cross be appointed Secretary to the committee.

Mr. Golka who at the February meeting had been appointed representative from the School Committee to attend the February meeting of the Principals' Association, stated that he had entirely forgotten to attend the meeting.

Moved and carried that A. M. Golka be appointed to delegate from the School Committee to attend the March meeting of the Principals Association.

In regards to the building program, the Superintendent reported that the inquiry which was almost completed and that it was hoped to get work on the library at Viking would be started in the near future in regards to the teachers' residence the Committee was advised that the insurance had been secured and that the construction on this building would be carried in the very near future. The building by Ryley and Viking schools were completed.

Moved and carried that the report be accepted

The Superintendent brought up the question of speed that the school buses could travel within the County, pointing out that at present the rate of speed limit was 40 miles on main or secondary highways and 35 miles on local roads. The regulations for operation of school buses as amended July, 1962, provided in Section 6, S. 1, a speed limit of 50 m.p.h. on any main or secondary highway, classified as such by virtue of the Public Highways Act, and 40 m.p.h. on all other roads.

It was moved and carried that the speed at which school buses may travel within the County be increased to 50 m.p.h. on classified main and secondary highways and up to 40 m.p.h. on all other roads, passing road conditions so warrant.

The Superintendent informed the Committee that Miss Shirley Harris had applied to the Department of National Defence for a teaching position at an Army or Air Force Dependents School and that the procedure in such cases was that the County would pay the salary and be reimbursed by the Department of National Defence. This was necessary in order to protect the teacher in regards to Teachers' Retirement Fund and A.T.A. contributions.

Moved and carried that the School Committee agree to release Miss Shirley Harris for teaching with the Department of National Defence.

A letter from L. W. Downey, Director of Leadership Course for School Principals, Faculty of Education, addressed to the Superintendent of Schools was referred to the Committee. The letter outlined the usual procedure for the Principals Leadership Course to be held during the 1963 University Summer Session. The course would be held July 8th to July 19th and the cost per Principal which would include accommodation and board, would be $110.00. The Superintendent stated that he had received a letter from Mr. Downey stating that Mr. A. Bell be selected to attend the Leadership School, and that the fee of $250, as usual be paid by the County.

It was moved and carried that the schools in the County be closed for Easter holidays from 3.20 p.m. April 11, to 9 a.m. April 22.

The more we do the more we find how much there is to do.

"With gas you get service —no doubt about it"

"Any time I have had dealings with the Gas Company they have certainly made every effort to provide satisfactory service."

When you are the only Gas Company serving the residential customers in a community, the responsibility to give good service is great. Northwestern is very conscious of its responsibilities to give good service and extend service to new communities where it is economically practical.

We must also plan ahead so there will be plenty of natural gas for the future — and in all this, carefully control costs so we can continue to provide Alberta gas consumers large and small, with the best possible gas service at the lowest possible cost.

Round Hill, Tofield Bands prepare for joint concert

The parents who brought their children to band practise in Round Hill on Friday evening were treated to a sample of the type of program that is being prepared by the combined Round Hill and Tofield bands, under the direction of Jerry Linklater of Edmonton. The two bands have been practicing the same arrangements this winter and for the past two weeks have held joint practises.

Besides the several very stirring band arrangements, the concert will feature several soloists and quartet instrumentals. The amalgamation of the two bands has produced a balanced arrangement of the instruments, and the forthcoming program on April 27th promises to be a rare treat for Round Hill residents. The same concert will be presented in Tofield on May 1st.

The Round Hill group started about two years ago, with each member buying his own instrument, and paying for his own lessons. None of the members had ever played a horn before, and some of the arrangements for a time were quite amazing

MONEY $ $ MAKER
CHICKEN FEEDS ARE MEDICATED
TO PROTECT AGAINST COCCIDIOSIS
Disease among poultry facts is costly . . . yet disease can be prevented by using medicated feeding rations made by United Grain Growers and sold under the MONEY MAKER brand. Money Maker Chicken Feeds contain nerase and chick growing mash, medicated with Zoalene have ALL been proven an effective protection against Coccidiosis and certain other diseases which frequently threaten the poultry flock.

FOLLOWER OR LEADER?
Most Albertans would rather take the lead than "follow the flock"!
Other provinces which have adopted government power monopolies have done so because of conditions which do not exist in Alberta. Those who want to see the same thing happen in Alberta say, "They've done it. So should we."
Does this political argument make sense? Does it mean we should "follow the flock" in other ways too? Because we have no provincial sales tax in Alberta, does this mean we should impose one?
Overseas, some of Canada's important trade competitors have realized that government-owned electricity is a costly mistake, and are restoring free enterprise utilities. In the United States, with the world's highest standard of living, 80% of all electricity is supplied by investor-owned companies.
Let's take the lead in Canada, and keep free enterprise free!

Mrs. Eleanor Are Necessary—

Library Week stresses importance of reading

In the fall of the year thoughts of the printed word in all its forms turn to libraries as Canada Book Week is being held to bring to the public an opportunity to see the need of books for our young readers and adults.

April 14th to 13th is Canadian Library Week and all libraries and libraries strive to make the public aware of the existence of the library and the treasures that they hold.

Mrs. H. Bosack is the Tofield Area Librarian and Mrs. W. H. Freeburg the Tofield Community Librarian.

The North Home and School Association Federation Week's drive on libraries held Oct. 16-19, 1962 ... constants stressed these points:

Why Books Are Necessary—

To keep up with knowledge we are developing every two years. ... to train people in any field ... of education.

To provide information on arts and sciences.

To enable us to appreciate many things not only of a utilitarian nature, but one person's point of view.

To provide the best possible ... for parents as ... remember ... books ... and ... the ... and ... the ... and ... the

Guest editorial Parents will be parents

Down in Rocky Mount they have a lot of meetings that take parents away from home, according to Bugs Barringer. The story is most interesting as Barringer went on to relate

"This town has as many meetings as any town its size in the country. Some people like to serve on committees and when there are committees there are bound to be meetings

And then there are the kickoff breakfasts, luncheons and suppers. One young man said the other day after attending a meeting or so a night plus some kickoff affairs, that he was about ready to kickoff himself

The story is going around the town about a local man who had been to a meeting of some kind every night for three weeks. Through some mistake he had a night at home with his wife but when he got home found that she had to attend a meeting. Before leaving the house, she gave instructions about bathing the children and putting them to bed When she returned late that night from her meeting she wanted to know did the husband have any trouble getting the children to go to bed

"Didn't have a bit of trouble with any of the kids except with that red headed boy. He kept arguing about not wanting to sleep in the same bed with Johnny. Finally I told him to shut up and go to sleep," said the husband.

"We don't have any red headed children. That must be Jimmy from down the street," said the wife.

Jimmy's parents had not missed him. Both of them were attending a meeting on "How Modern Parents Can Raise Their Children." The baby sitter was watching TV with her boy friend.

Happy schooldays with new system

(The Sudbury Star)

Pounds, shillings and pence are disappearing from the world of finance South Africa adopted the decimal system in 1961 and Australia plans to abandon it in 1966. Australia proposes to base its major unit equal to the present 10 shillings. The minor unit will be 100th part of the major unit, or about 1.1 cents Canadian.

Now, if Britain would adopt the decimal currency and the world adopt the metric system of measurement we could all be much happier, especially the school children who are now required to learn a bewildering hodge-podge of mathematical tables.

Cause to pause...

BY John Mahler

A local man comments that his wife can see right through him - yet never notices a missing button.

Advertising has been accused of making people live beyond their means but matrimony should share the blame!

LOW BLOW

Dragging a huge fish, an angler met another fisherman whose catch consisted of 12 small ones.

"Howdy," said the first man as he looked down at his huge fish and waited for a comment.

The other fellow stared for a few moments, then calmly responded, "Just caught the one, eh?"

SPRING THERE IN

A Vermont village pastor, who had a weakness for trout, preached against fishing on Sunday. The next day one of his parishioners presented him with a fine string of fish and said, hesitatingly: "I guess it ought to tell you, parson, that those trout were caught on Sunday."

The minister gazed appreciatively at the speckled trout, and said, "The trout aren't to blame for that".

Discipline or censorship?

Debate will probably wax furious for a long time over Art Potter's move this week in indefinitely suspending two sport reporters from covering any hockey games operated by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, of which he is president. Whatever other points are raised, of course, it should be established at the outset that the CAHA controls broadcast, telecast or newscast rights of any of its games, and the Edmonton president was strictly within his rights and prerogatives.

No-one in the publicity business, including weekly newspapers, appreciates any fetters which are put on the freedom of the press . . . the right of the public generally to know what is going on. However, the press enjoys no rights which are not enjoyed also by the ordinary citizen, and probably no-one would question Mr. Potter's right to exclude from the arenas an ordinary fan who consistently and determinedly upset so many fans that he disturbed the progress of the game.

Without having heard the reporters in question, or any accounts of them, it is impossible to judge whether this was the case, although it is a reasonably common feeling that many reporters have gone beyond the bounds on more occasions than this.

One thing Mr. Potter and his supporters should never forget is that without the tremendous attention they get from the press, their sports would not be nearly so popular as they are. Still, to a man accustomed to handing out penalties for any infraction of the rules, this may seem just like a "major misconduct" to the hockey club president.

Blockades necessary

The town's streets have suffered quite badly this spring and so have some of the unfortunate motorists' pocketbooks. On one street corner, in particular, the road is so rough that cars become stuck immediately and require the services of a tow truck. This is very unfortunate and certainly does not help to increase trade in Tofield. It would only take about five minutes time for one man plus a very small amount of lumber to construct a road block, thus avoiding this unnecessary business of getting stuck, also avoiding strong feelings against the town. Should these people turn their bills over to the town for payment, it would soon be learned that road blocks would be much less expensive and would help in keeping our town a good town.

Spiral signalled

Canadian citizens must be keenly concerned with the recent steel price increases announced across the line, just as most Americans must be. The old saying in the business world "as steel goes, so goes the nation" is still pretty much true, and businessmen everywhere will worry over a general round of price increases, which may make it tougher than ever to compete on world markets. And of course, this is something Canada desperately needs these days, and something in which Lester Pearson, next week's Prime Minister, will be keenly interested.

Anyone notice?

It was just a terse little item in the daily press, but we wonder if many people saw the news that one town in Alberta is actually reducing the milrate this year. Rockyford, a small town east of Calgary, found the opportunity to drop the requisition by one mill, and took it. Maybe that's all the comment that was needed.

RETARDED CHILDREN

Editor, The Mercury,
Dear Sir:

I would very much appreciate it if you would place this letter in your newspaper so that parents of mentally handicapped (retarded) children may be aware of the service available to them.

We have established a Day-School in Vegreville where these children are taught as much as they can handle of the academic subjects and handicrafts. This school is approved by the Department of Education. A new building was constructed in 1962 and we are now able to accommodate a considerable number of children.

There are no fees charged to the parents but this service is however the responsibility of the parents to arrange for boarding accommodations for Vegreville Association realizes very few suitable accommodations are available in Vegreville. We have been successful in finding such accommodation for children from as far away as Viking, Bonnyville and Lac La Biche. Should the number of children requiring such accommodation increase substantially the Vegreville Association would consider providing accommodation under its own auspices.

Many school difficulties provide a boarding difficulty for the parents resulted in such special classes, thus the financial burden is not too heavy on the family.

Many parents fail to realize what changes can be wrought in a mentally handicapped child by proper training and therapy. The parents of children now attending this school have been quite surprised by the improvement in behavior and social development. We would welcome enquiries from any interested parents. I should point out here that the school is not segregated and has the support of both the public and the separate schools in Vegreville, and both work very cheerfully. All service clubs, churches, and many individuals in Vegreville have also provided financial support. Inquiries may be directed to Mr. Jan Halfen at the Provincial Welfare Office in Vegreville Mr. Harry Semeniuk Vegreville or the undersigned.

Thank you

Yours very truly
Dr. R. R. Cairns

Crops on clay soil use moisture better

On the Prairies more than anywhere else, soil moisture is the key to successful crops.

And in the semi-arid areas of the Prairies it appears that crops make better use of moisture in clay than in loams.

This says J. J. Lehane, of the federal experimental farm at Swift Current, Sask. is due to the way water is held by clay soils resulting in less moisture being used early in the season and leaving more available for dry periods later.

An extensive program of field sampling to determine the use of moisture by wheat has been carried out by the experimental farm over a period of nearly 25 years. The study covered a wide range of soils in southwestern Saskatchewan.

Results for all soils Lehane says showed that an average of five or six inches of water is needed to provide a minimum yield of one or two bushels per acre. The yield was 10 bushels an acre with 10.5 inches inch of water over this in-crease was about one bushel per acre.

Another life saved by belts

Inter-office memo to Geo. B Newbery, manager for Canada Phoenix of Hartford Insurance Companies from C. Dain-on An a member of the Canadian Hydway Safety Council. I know you will be interested to learn the 50 miles per hour Hall-way safety belt you purchased from us and installed in the car of my cousin Bert Woodall, from a near-disaster than he expected.

About four weeks ago Bert was held up on an errand and as he drove up Main Street he was approached by a man who asked him to give him a ride. Bert, being a safety belts for automobiles he automatically fastened his belt before moving off. Upon his request him to be again automatically fastened his seat belt before doing so. That was indeed a very fortunate thing for Bert, as, unknown to him, the man had a gun in his pocket and on a field road about 10 miles from town he pulled out the gun and shot Bert in the head. The shot was deflected by the safety belt and instead of killing Bert, the bullet only grazed his head. Bert, although dazed, was able to step on the gas and escape from the man, who fired several more shots at the car as it sped away.

Bert is now convinced that safety belts are a necessity and not a luxury, and he is telling all his friends about his narrow escape.

Meanwhile my cousin had been overpowered upside down in the gasoline pumps and prevented from getting out. Before the shocked pump on the front seat of the car, which had been a very valuable asset to him, he was able to walk, and his stored moisture was 25 per cent more effective.

soils do not suffer as quickly in the reason for the increased production on this type of soil during dry seasons, he explains.

A plant must exert greater force to obtain the moisture with the result that early growth and use of moisture is slowed. This leaves more moisture for later use when a shortage is more critical to crop yields.

But actual measurements have shown very little difference in the amount of available moisture within the depth of root penetration at seed time, Lehane reports.

The greater force by which the water is held by clay soils is the reason for the increased production on this type of soil during dry seasons, he explains.

A plant must exert greater force to obtain the moisture with the result that early growth and use of moisture is slowed. This leaves more moisture for later use when a shortage is more critical to crop yields.

On loam soils, yields were influenced equally by seasonal precipitation and stored moisture.

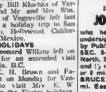
Peter's Patter



Now that spring is here and the snow is gone, some of you will already have noticed fresh mole hills on your lawn or at least there is on mine. Although moles are classed as a nuisance, they also do a lot of good. Few people have actually ever seen a mole, as their entire life is spent underground, except in spring when they come up for dried leaves and grass to line their nests

The mole is virtually an underground bullet. It is cylindrical in shape and covered in a pelt of velvet. Its forelimbs are broad and powerful digs, highly specialized for digging with broad, well developed, powerful hands. They are armed with sharp claws with which the mole is capable of excavating a 10-yard tunnel in 24 hours. Six inches (including a one-inch tail) is the average length of this hard working, industrious creature. Each day it eats its own weight in insects. No other animal can turn the soil more rapidly than the mole. Industrious creature. Each day it eats its own weight in insects. No other animal can turn the soil more rapidly than the mole. Industrious creature. Each day it eats its own weight in insects. No other animal can turn the soil more rapidly than the mole. Industrious creature. Each day it eats its own weight in insects. MOLE SERVES MAN

Although the mole passes unsightly mounds of earth on lawns and in pastures, it plays an important part in developing the soil and keeping it suitable for farming. In low, damp areas where too much water would normally turn the soil sour, mole runways drain off the excess. In dry pastures the mole's ways convey the water underground and distribute it where it is most needed before it can run off over the hard-packed surface. Then too, by transferring the subsoil and to the top, the moles till the land, mixing it with dead leaves or rotting vegetation. In this way they help to produce the rich soil that man needs to raise fine crops.

The following poem was written by Richard Cain age 9, a pupils in Grade 4A Holden, Alta.

SPRING

I like to wade until I fall,
I like to play with a football
I like the rain and all the clouds.

I like the flowers and the bees,
I like the grass
And all the trees.

I like the spider by the road,
I also like a baby toad.
I like the robins, thrushes and crows.

I like to spray them with my hose.

I like the Easter bells that ring
And people that do always sing;
And that is why I like the Spring.

WCTU deplores teen-age smoking

(Mrs. C. M. Rude)

BARDO April 13th The WCTU met at the home of Mrs Alma Marie Nelson on Wednesday afternoon with nine members and two visitors present Mrs Mary Finseth read the 23nd Psalm for devotion

WHY CHILDREN SMOKE

A clip sheet "Teen-Age Smoking" by several members was both informative and interesting Some of the facts showed that smoking in Canada last year increased by nearly 8% A survey in Winnipeg schools recently showed that many children smoke their first cigarette by the time they are six years old.

A few tentative conclusions have been reached in surveys taken, why children take up smoking.

Authorities agreed that where both parents smoke, teen-age smoking was twice as high among boys and three times as high among girls Advertising too, played a part in leading youngsters to think it smart, mature and adventurous to smoke. Movie and television actors light their cigarette scenes, it is leading cigarette manufacturing company has gone up steadily in the western world during these eight years Experiment has shown that "scare tactics" are not the solution to the problem that education over a period of time might be the solution.

It was decided to invite the district WCTU to have their convention in the Tofield United Church May 8th and 10th

Mrs. Alex Murray and Mrs. Mabel Johnson were elected as delegates with Mrs. Anna Trelenus as alternate.

Several committees were elected to arrange for convention programs and meals.

The May meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Borghild Rude.

These young Albertans live in a free enterprise climate. Their whole environment is one that encourages initiative and resourcefulness - whatever type of endeavour they undertake. But this free environment should never be taken for granted. The greatest threat of all to the pioneer spirit is the trend to socialism. This threat is not merely a remote possibility. A few are striving for it now!
Do those who advocate government take-over of electric utilities realize where a government power monopoly can lead? Once a start is made, where does it stop?
Even leading socialists now admit: "Nationalizing an industry, instead of making it a better servant of the public, may subject it to political pressures hostile to its efficiency".
State control is not the spirit of pioneer initiative that will continue to build Alberta. Let's keep free enterprise free!

Guest Editorial— The dilatory dollar

A Canadian daily newspaper recently published as its "morning smile" this comment: "The reason the dollar won't do as much for people as it once did is that people won't do as much for a dollar as they once did." There is both wit and wisdom in the epigram.

A fairly accurate measurement of what a dollar will do for Canadians these days is the cost-of-living index calculated each month by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. This yardstick, which uses the year 1949 as a base of 100, currently stands at 128. In other words, over the past dozen years living costs have gone up by 29 per cent; or, to rephrase it, the consumer now gets for his dollar what he got for only [illegible] nts in 1949.

The other part of the comparison, the question of how much we can do for a dollar, can be measured by another DBS calculation — the index, which also uses the year 1949 as a base of 100, of the average of weekly wages and salaries paid in Canadian industry. At the moment this index stands at just over 180, which means that in the period the average weekly pay in industry has gone up by 80 per cent. That is, for about 33 minutes work we now get the same number of dollars as we used to work an hour for; or, again to rephrase it, industry gets for its wage-salary dollar what it got for only 55 cents in 1949.

Since payroll is by far the largest part of costs in most industries, perhaps it is surprising that prices haven't gone up even further. Obviously, increased productivity has been the factor that has permitted average weekly earnings to increase by 80 per cent while limiting the increase in the cost of living to 29 per cent. Better machines, improved plants, more efficient management and the upgraded skills of the labor force have combined to improve living standards.

That the dollar doesn't do as much for us as it used to is recognized by all. It is not so widely recognized that we don't do as much for the dollar as we used to. The lesson that needs to be learned is that we will really all be better off if the purchasing power of the dollar can be kept stable, even if it means not pushing for a few more immediate dollars in the pay packet.

—C. J. Harris.

The Miracle of Spring

Make way for Scouts

In our community, there is definitely a need for Boy Scouts. Why? Here are 12 good reasons: scouting helps to fill a boy's spare time, helps to build a boy's character, is training in citizenship, gives a boy opportunities for service, helps to make a boy handy, gives a sense of honor and loyalty, teaches self-reliance, helps keeps a boy healthy, helps develop a boy's natural gifts, helps a boy to achieve happiness, and widens a boy's outlook.

Scouting can help to make a man of your boy.

The Tofield Legion has recently consented to sponsor Scouts and Cubs and a committee has been set up from parents of local organizations. If you didn't send your boy this week, send him next week, and let him reap the benefits of scouting. —P.N.

Navy, Safety Day

We thoroughly agree with The Edmonton Journal which recently suggested there is no evidence of any need for the provincial election which seems to be running through Premier Manning's mind these days.

Certainly there is little evidence of any growing disenchantment with the Manning administration, and no serious argument over policy which should be referred to the electorate. Mr. Manning has made considerable impression with his talk of saving money, reducing government wastefull spending and so on, and an election now, a full year ahead of time, can hardly be termed anything but wasteful.

We seriously believe Mr Manning would be happier to see a larger opposition across from him, in spite of many comments that an opposition is not needed, and that a committee of caucus has been set up to act in the same capacity. However, an election at the present time would do nothing to increase the opposition and might even reduce it. The Conservatives have not the slightest chance of gaining ground under their present leader. Mr. Harradence, while the Liberals will be unable to keep large numbers of their best friends from voting Social-simply to ensure that Mr. Hunter gets no opportunity to further socialize the country.

While the return of sixty or more members must be highly gratifying to any leader or any politician, it is not the stuff of which the best governments are necessarily made. Under the circumstances, and in view of the certainty that no significant change in party standing could be expected at an election this year, it would seem to be extravagant to hold an election with twenty per cent of the current term to run.

Mrs. G. Soma passes

Mrs. Arve (Gunda Skrove) Soma was born at Jackson, Minnesota, on February 24, 1882, and was baptized and confirmed in the Lutheran faith. She passed away at the Bethany Sunset Home in Camrose at the age of 82 years, 1 month and 6 days.) She was united in marriage to Arne Soma at Denver Colorado, on Dec 15th, 1910. She moved to Minnesota a year later and resided at Jackson until July 1928 when, with her husband and family, came to Kingman, Alberta, where they lived on a farm north of that village.

Mrs Soma suffered a stroke a few years ago, on March 24th, at which time she received some strength but after a few months she returned home where her husband nursed her with love until his health began to fail. Mrs Soma then entered the Home at Camrose.

She grew to love the Norse and enjoyed the elegant services but always talked about the day she'd be well enough to return to her home at Kingman. She was well enough to return there again with the coming of January 3, 1963, but she had two more strokes which left her unable to speak.

She is survived by seven, four daughters, Martha (Mrs. Ringo Stromme) of Calgary, Borghild (Mrs. Norman Wilderman) of Dodds, Goldie (Mrs. Alvin Lehman) of Ryley, Mildred (Mrs. Arnt Skoglund) of Kingman; 24 grandchildren and 28 great-grandchildren; two half-brothers, Sigurd and Colman Skrove, of Minnesota, and Velda (Mrs. Seiber) in California.

Her husband and two grandchildren predeceased her.

Funeral services were held from Salem Lutheran Church at Kingman, on Wednesday, April 3, 1963, at 2 p.m., with Rev. S. Rue officiating. The greetings were given by Pastor H. Haugen.

Pallbearers followed in Kingman cemetery: Guthorm Fallbogen, Alf Wilderman, Arne Skoglund, Glenn Wilderman, Marvel Skoglund, Carl Stromme and Gary Stromme. Hemsford Funeral Home was in charge of arrangements.
